Pathways Information

Pathways into the qualification

In the public safety industry, qualification pathways depend on a range of factors specific to each industry such as organisational/agency structure, promotional structure and rank structure.

Policing qualifications have been developed to set agreed minimum standards for police personnel that should be contextualised within the specifics of each Police jurisdiction/ agency/organisational policy and procedure.

A recruit will join a Police agency, generally become a Police Officer and subsequently move into a specialist role (such as a supervisor, detective, dog handler, scientific officer etc.). Therefore, the recruit will be equipped vocationally with generic Police competencies and often move into a supervising, managing, leading role or into a technical specialist role. Pathways for candidates considering this qualification may include:

* achievement of the PUA50112 Diploma of Public Safety (Police Search and Rescue Coordination)
* completion of police jurisdictional specific training
* entry points demonstrating potential to undertake vocational education and training at this qualification level, including vocational experience within a range of environments such policing, search and rescue and other relevant environments or relevant work experience in such environments.

Pathways from the qualification

After achieving the PUA60212 Advanced Diploma of Public Safety (Police Search & Rescue – Management) candidates may undertake a range of qualifications relevant to their role, either to enhance technical expertise in a specialist area or to move into a supervising or managing role.

Pathways for candidates considering this qualification may include to undertake:

* other qualifications in the Public Safety Training Package
* policing management qualifications
* national search and rescue programs.
