reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment

The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example:

- SITXFSA201 Participate in safe food handling practices
- SITXFSA202 Transport and store food
- any commercial cookery, commercial catering, patisserie, Asian cookery or food and beverage unit involving food preparation.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Hygiene procedures:

- may cover:
  - cleaning and sanitising practices to avoid contamination of food
  - food storage
  - handling and disposal of garbage
  - personal hygiene
  - regular hand washing
  - safe and hygienic handling of food and beverages
  - safe handling and disposal of linen and laundry
  - suitable dress and personal protective equipment and clothing
  - use of cleaning equipment, clothes and materials to avoid contamination of food
- may be:

- covered by staff training programs
- documented in the organisational food safety program
- required by the national food safety code.

Unsafe practices may include:

- being asked to participate in unhygienic work practices
- food handling practices that may result in the contamination of food
- ignoring the direction of:
  - hygiene signage
  - supervisors
  - managers
- lack of:
  - required hygiene signage
  - training in hygiene procedures
- outdated practices not in keeping with current organisational procedures
- poor personal hygiene and cleaning practices that may result in cross-contamination of food and other items
- practices inconsistent with organisational food safety program
- seeing others using unhygienic work practices
- use of broken or malfunctioning equipment.

Food hazards may include:

- airborne dust
- colleagues without appropriate training or understanding of good hygiene practices, policies and procedures
- contaminated food
- contaminated garbage
- dirty equipment and utensils
- equipment not working correctly, such as fridge and temperature probes
- items, such as linen, tea towels and towels that may be contaminated with human waste, such as blood and body secretions
- use of practices not in keeping with current organisational activities
- vermin.

Health issues may relate to:

- airborne diseases
- food borne diseases
- infectious diseases.

Other items worn may include:

- bandages
- hair accessories
- jewellery
- watches.

Unhygienic personal contact may involve:	• transferring micro-organisms by:
	  • blowing nose
	  • coughing
	  • drinking
	  • eating
	  • scratching skin and hair
	  • sneezing
	  • spitting
	  • touching wounds
	• transmitting tobacco products by smoking.

Food contact surfaces may include:	• chopping boards • containers • cooking utensils • crockery • cutlery • glassware • pots and pans • sinks • workbenches.

Unhygienic cleaning practices may involve:	• cleaning food contact surfaces with linen, tea towels and towels that may be contaminated with human waste:
	  • blood
	  • body secretions
	  • faeces
	• using dirty:
	  • cleaning cloths
	  • tea towels
	• spreading bacteria from bathroom or bedroom areas to mini-bar or kitchen areas in an accommodation facility.

Wash hands at appropriate times might include:	• before commencing or recommencing work with food
	• immediately after:
	  • handling raw food
	  • smoking, coughing, sneezing, blowing the nose, eating, drinking, and touching the hair, scalp or any wound
	  • using the toilet.

Appropriate facilities for hand washing may include:	• designated hand washing sink • liquid soap • single use towels • warm running water.

Modification History

The version details of this endorsed unit of competency set are in the table below. The latest information is at the top.

Version	Comments
1.0	E Replaces and is equivalent to SITXFSA001A Implement food safety procedures. Prerequisite removed. Minor adjustments to expression of content to streamline and improve unit. Change to title for greater consistency across Training Package. Wording adjusted to better reflect regulatory requirements.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to handle food safely during the storage, preparation, display, service and disposal of food. It requires the ability to follow predetermined procedures as outlined in a food safety program.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to all tourism, hospitality and catering organisations with permanent or temporary kitchen premises or smaller food preparation areas.

This includes restaurants, cafes, clubs, hotels, tour operators, attractions, function, event, exhibition and conference caterers, educational institutions, aged care facilities, correctional centres, hospitals, defence forces, cafeterias, kiosks, canteens, fast food outlets, residential caterers, in-flight and other transport caterers.

Safe food handling practices are based on an organisation's individual food safety program. The program would normally be based on the Hazard Analysis and Critical Control Points (HACCP) method, but this unit can apply to other food safety systems.

It applies to food handlers who directly handle food. People at many levels use this skill in the workplace during the course of their daily activities, including cooks, chefs, caterers, kitchen hands and food and beverage attendants.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

Food handlers must comply with the requirements contained within the Australia New Zealand Food Standards (ANZFS) Code (the Code).

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

In some states and territories businesses are required to designate a food safety supervisor who is required to be certified as competent in this unit through a registered training organisation.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements and Performance Criteria

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.
1. Follow food safety program.	1.1 Access and use relevant information from organisational food safety program. 1.2 Follow policies and procedures in food safety program. 1.3 Control food hazards at critical control points. 1.4 Complete food safety monitoring processes and complete documents as required. 1.5 Identify and report non-conforming practices. 1.6 Take corrective actions within scope of job responsibility for incidents where food hazards are not controlled.
2. Store food safely.	2.1 Select food storage conditions for specific food type. 2.2 Store food in environmental conditions that protect against contamination and maximise freshness, quality and appearance. 2.3 Store food at controlled temperatures and ensure that frozen items remain frozen during storage.
3. Prepare food safely.	3.1 Use cooling and heating processes that support microbiological safety of the food. 3.2 Monitor food temperature during preparation using required temperature measuring device to achieve microbiological safety. 3.3 Ensure safety of food prepared, served and sold to customers under other conditions.

4. Provide safe single use items.	4.1 Store, display and provide single use items so they are protected from damage and contamination. 4.2 Follow instructions for items intended for single use.
5. Maintain a clean environment.	5.1 Clean and sanitise equipment, surfaces and utensils. 5.2 Use appropriate containers and prevent accumulation of garbage and recycled matter. 5.3 Identify and report cleaning, sanitising and maintenance requirements. 5.4 Dispose of or report chipped, broken or cracked eating, drinking or food handling utensils. 5.5 Take measures within scope of responsibility to ensure food handling areas are free from animals and pests and report incidents of animal or pest infestation.
6. Dispose of food safely.	6.1 Mark and keep separate from other foodstuffs any food identified for disposal until disposal is complete. 6.2 Dispose of food promptly to avoid cross contamination.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication skills to report food safety hazards
- literacy skills to:
  - read and interpret food safety program, including policies, procedures and flow charts that identify critical control points
  - complete documentation for monitoring food safety
- numeracy skills to calibrate and use a temperature probe and calculate timings
- problem-solving skills to identify and respond to routine food safety issues
- planning and organising skills to coordinate a range of different food handling tasks to take account of food safety issues
- self-management skills to take responsibility for food safety at an operational level.

Required knowledge

- key features of federal, state or territory and local food safety compliance requirements as they impact workers at an operational level, including:
  - contents of national codes and standards that underpin regulatory requirements
  - reasons for food safety programs and what they must contain
  - local government food safety regulations and inspection regimes
  - consequences of failure to observe food safety policies and procedures

    - meaning of contaminant, contamination and potentially hazardous foods as defined by the Code
- HACCP or other food safety system principles, procedures and processes as they apply to particular operations and different food types, including:
    - critical control points for the specific food production system and the predetermined methods of control, especially time and temperature controls used in the receiving, storing, preparing, processing, displaying, serving, packaging, transporting and disposing of food
    - main types of safety hazards and contamination
    - conditions for development of microbiological contamination
    - environmental conditions, including temperature controls, for storage
    - temperature danger zone and the two-hour and four-hour rule
- contents of organisational food safety program, especially procedures and monitoring documents
- equipment operating procedures, especially how to calibrate, use and clean a temperature probe and how to identify faults
- choice and application of cleaning, sanitising and pest control equipment and materials
- high risk customer groups, such as:
    - children or babies
    - pregnant women
    - aged persons
    - people with immune deficiencies or allergies.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the ability to: • consistently use safe food handling practices in a range of different food handling circumstances • demonstrate knowledge of food safety program and requirements, including critical control points and methods of food hazard control for each critical control point.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure use of: an operational food preparation area or commercial kitchen with the fixtures, large and small equipment and workplace documentation defined in the Assessment Guidelines; this can be a:

- real industry workplace
- simulated industry environment such as a training kitchen servicing customers
- food ingredients and ready to eat food items
- current plain English regulatory documents distributed by the national, state, territory or local government food safety authority
- the Code
- current commercial food safety programs, policies and procedures used for the management of food safety.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- direct observation of the individual completing tasks in a food handling facility
- use of case studies to assess ability to react to a range of incidents where hazards have not been controlled
- oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of food safety legislative requirements, policies and procedures, including hazard control measures
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment

The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example:

- SITXFSA101 Use hygienic practices for food safety
- any commercial cookery, commercial catering, patisserie, Asian cookery or food and beverage unit involving food preparation.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Policies and procedures may relate to:

- cleaning and sanitation

  - preparation
  - display
  - service
  - disposal
- personal considerations:
  - dress
  - hygiene
  - protective equipment and clothing
- pest control
- record maintenance
- training.

Food hazards may be:

- actual or potential
- chemical
- insects and vermin
- microbiological:
  - bacteria
  - natural poisons
  - moulds
  - yeast
- physical:
  - broken glass
  - metal
  - foreign objects
- process-related where food is vulnerable to contamination:

where control of food hazards is essential to maintain the safety and suitability of the food, including:	• storing • preparing • processing • displaying • serving • packaging • transporting • disposing.
Food safety monitoring may involve:	• bacterial swabs and counts • checking and recording that food is stored in appropriate timeframes • chemical tests • monitoring and recording food temperatures using a temperature measuring device accurate to plus or minus 1 degree Celsius • monitoring and recording temperature of cold and hot storage equipment • visual examination of food for quality review.
Incidents may include:	• customer complaints • existence of pests and vermin • food not under temperature control • food poisoning • misuse of single use items • spoilt or contaminated food • stocks of out-of-date foodstuffs • unclean equipment.
Food type may include:	• dairy • dried goods • eggs • frozen goods • fruit and vegetables • meat and fish.

Safety of food served and sold to customers under other conditions may be achieved by:	• packaging control:
	  • using packaging materials suited to foods
	  • monitoring of packaging damage
	• protective barriers
	• temperature control
	• supervision of food displays
	• utensil control:
	  • providing separate serving utensils for each dish.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to transport food from a food preparation area to another location. It also deals with holding or storage on arrival.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to catering operations where food is transported from the preparation area to another location and stored on arrival. This could include restaurants, educational institutions, aged care facilities, hospitals, defence forces, cafeterias, kiosks, cafes, residential catering, in-flight and other transport catering, events catering and private catering. It applies to food handlers who directly handle food when transporting and storing food. People at many levels use this skill in the workplace including cooks, chefs, caterers and catering assistants.

The person transporting the food may or may not be driving the vehicle.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

Food handlers involved in transporting and storing food must comply with the requirements contained within the Australia New Zealand Food Standards (ANZFS) Code (the Code). Business may be required to implement a food safety program and food handlers would need to comply with the transportation provisions.

Version	Comments
1.0	E Replaces and is equivalent to SITXFSA002A Develop and implement a food safety program. Prerequisite removed. Minor adjustments to expression of content to streamline and improve unit. Wording adjusted to better reflect regulatory requirements.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to develop, implement and evaluate a food safety program for the all stages in the food production process including receipt, storage, preparation, service and disposal. It requires the ability to determine program requirements and prepare policies and procedures for other personnel to follow.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to all tourism, hospitality and catering organisations with permanent or temporary kitchen premises or smaller food preparation areas.

This includes restaurants, cafes, clubs, hotels, tour operators, attractions, function, event, exhibition and conference caterers, educational institutions, aged care facilities, correctional centres, hospitals, defence forces, cafeterias, kiosks, canteens, fast food outlets, residential caterers, in-flight and other transport caterers.

A food safety program would most commonly be based on the Hazard Analysis and Critical Control Points (HACCP) method but this unit can apply to other food safety systems.

It applies to senior personnel who work independently and who are responsible for making strategic decisions on establishing and monitoring risk control systems for food-related hazards. This could include chefs, kitchen managers, catering managers, fast food store managers and owner-operators of small business catering operations or retail food outlets.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

Licensing/Regulatory Information

Food businesses must comply with requirements contained within the Australia New Zealand Food Standards (ANZFS) Code (the Code). The Code contains a non-mandatory standard for the development of a food safety program.

	2.6 Develop or modify and record product specifications covering food items prepared and sold.
	2.7 Identify training needs and develop training program.
	2.8 Develop schedule for regular review of food safety program.
	2.9 Document food safety program and provide to regulatory authorities as required.
3. Implement food safety program.	3.1 Communicate food safety programs, policies, procedures and product specifications to colleagues and ensure display of appropriate signage and access to information.
	3.2 Organise appropriate training and mentoring.
	3.3 Monitor operational activities to ensure that policies and procedures are followed.
	3.4 Manage response to incidents of uncontrolled food hazards and oversee implementation of corrective action procedures.

	4.2 Participate in food safety program audits and provide assistance to inspectors.
	4.3 Retain records of food audits according to legislative requirements.
5. Evaluate and revise food safety program.	5.1 Conduct scheduled review of food safety program in consultation with colleagues.
	5.2 Validate required food safety controls.
	5.3 Review policies, procedures, product specifications, monitoring systems and record keeping methods, and revise as required.
	5.4 Prepare and document amended food safety program and provide to regulatory authorities as required.
	5.5 Communicate changes and monitor inclusion in production processes.
	5.6 Identify and respond to additional training needs based on changes to food safety practices.

Required Skills and Knowledge

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

Required skills

- communication skills to:
  - consult on and review food safety program
  - provide information to colleagues
- critical thinking skills to evaluate and respond to a range of strategic and operational factors that influence the food safety program
- literacy skills to:
  - interpret sometimes complex materials describing regulatory requirements relating to food safety
  - develop and write comprehensive food safety programs and procedures
- numeracy skills to work with the concepts of measurement
- planning and organising skills to coordinate and respond to multiple and interrelated operational challenges
- problem-solving skills to proactively identify and respond to systemic operational issues.

Required knowledge

- ptions for the structure and implementation of a food safety program, including the use of the HACCP method as the basis
- consultative and communication mechanisms used by organisations to develop and implement procedural systems
- key features of federal, state or territory and local food safety compliance requirements as they impact food safety program development, including:
  - contents of national codes and standards that underpin regulatory requirements
  - components of a food safety program, especially procedures and monitoring documents
  - local government food safety regulations and audit frequencies
  - consequences of failure to observe food safety policies and procedures
  - meaning of contaminant, contamination and potentially hazardous foods as defined by the Code
- HACCP or other food safety system principles, procedures and processes as they apply to particular operations and different food types, including:
  - critical control points for the specific food production system and the predetermined methods of control, especially time and temperature controls used in the storage, preparation, display, service and cooking, cooling and transporting of food
  - methods of food storage, production, display, service and cooking, cooling and transporting, especially, appropriate temperature levels for each of these processes
  - main types of safety hazards and contamination
  - conditions for development of microbiological contamination
  - environmental conditions, including temperature controls, for storage
  - temperature danger zone and the two-hour and four-hour rule
- equipment operating procedures, especially how to calibrate, use and clean a temperature probe and how to identify faults

- choice and application of cleaning, sanitising and pest control equipment and materials
- high risk customer groups, such as:
  - children or babies
  - pregnant women
  - aged persons
  - people with immune deficiencies or allergies.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the ability to:
	• develop and implement a complete food safety program in line with regulatory requirements, that includes:
	  • policies
	  • procedures
	  • product specifications
	  • monitoring documents
	• monitor, evaluate and make ongoing improvements to food safety program over a period of time
	• demonstrate knowledge of food safety systems and options for a service industry food preparation organisation.

Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure use of:
	• an operational food preparation area or commercial kitchen with the fixtures, large and small equipment and workplace documentation defined in the Assessment Guidelines; this can be a:
	  • real industry workplace
	  • simulated industry environment such as a training kitchen servicing customers
	• current plain English regulatory documents distributed by the national, state, territory or local government food safety authority
	• the Code
	• current commercial food safety programs, policies and procedures used for the management of a food preparation team.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- review of a completed food safety program developed by the individual inclusive of policies, procedures and product specifications
- use of case studies to assess ability to develop programs to meet differing workplace needs, including responding to uncontrolled hazards
- written or oral questioning to assess knowledge of regulatory requirements and food safety systems, such as HACCP and their application to different situations
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment

The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example:

- BSBWRT401A Write complex documents
- SITHKOP403 Coordinate cooking operations
- SITHKOP404 Plan catering for events or functions.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. SITTGDE101 Interpret aspects of local Australian Indigenous culture

Modification History

The version details of this endorsed unit of competency set are in the table below. The latest information is at the top.

Version	Comments
1.0	E Replaces and is equivalent to SITTGDE009A Interpret aspects of local Australian Indigenous culture. Wording simplified to more accurately reflect level at which skills are applied.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to share information about a specific local Australian Indigenous culture. It is this localised focus that distinguishes this unit from SITTGDE306 Research and share general information on Australian Indigenous cultures.

The unit recognises that there is no single Australian Indigenous culture and emphasises the importance of local cultural knowledge, appropriate behaviour and local community consultation.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to those people who are able to share local Indigenous cultural knowledge with others. They may work at many different levels, as cultural knowledge has no direct relationship with workplace levels of responsibility.

The local cultural knowledge necessary to achieve competency in this unit may only be accessible to those individuals who identify as elders or who are authorised by local elders on behalf of their communities.

There are many different Indigenous language groups in Australia, therefore focus of cultural interpretation will vary and should ultimately be decided in consultation with elders on behalf of the local community.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

Tour guides, residing anywhere in Australia, are required to undertake training and assessment prescribed by Parks Australia to guide within Kakadu and Uluru National Parks in the Northern Territory. This training is based on the following units:

- SITTGDE101 Interpret aspects of local Australian Indigenous culture
- SITTGDE306 Research and share general information on Australian Indigenous cultures.

SITTGDE301 Work as a guide

Modification History

The version details of this endorsed unit of competency set are in the table below. The latest information is at the top.

Version	Comments
1.0	E Replaces and is equivalent to SITTGDE001B Work as a guide.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to work effectively as a guide. It covers key legal, ethical, safety, environmental and professional development issues that guides must consider in their day-to-day work.

When working in Queensland, all guides, regardless of their place of residence, are subject to the Queensland Tourism Services Act (2003).

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to guides who may work across multiple industry sectors as employees or independent contractors. They could operate within a single site, or in a particular city, region or tourist precinct, but they often move across sites, cities and regions.

Guides apply discretion and judgement within established organisational procedures, and when on tour they take a lead role without supervision. Sometimes guides are the owner-operators of small tour operations.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

No occupational licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.
1. Coordinate group movements.	1.1 Maintain tour schedule through effective communication with the group. 1.2 Use techniques to promptly attract group attention when required. 1.3 Courteously advise group about ways in which minimum disruption and disturbance can be caused to other people and the environment. 1.4 Complete physical group movements in an orderly manner, checking group numbers at appropriate times. 1.5 Advise customers of procedures if they become separated from the group. 1.6 Provide instructions in a manner and pace appropriate to the group and encourage customers to seek clarification where necessary. 1.7 Locate lost or late group members, ensure they rejoin the group and are advised of future need to comply with group movements.
2. Encourage group morale and goodwill.	2.1 Use techniques to build group cohesion during the tour. 2.2 Balance the needs of individuals and the group in the conduct of the tour. 2.3 Respond to group problems in a manner likely to optimise the goodwill and morale of the group.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication skills to:
  - brief customers clearly about tour or activity movements
  - build group cohesion through use of effective interpersonal communication
  - apply conflict resolution skills and strategies
- numeracy skills to count tour members
- planning and organising skills to coordinate practical aspects of moving groups of people
- problem-solving skills to respond to operational and interpersonal problems.

Required knowledge

- procedures for maximising efficiency of group movements
- procedures for locating lost or late group members and coordinating reunion with the group
- minimal impact practices relevant to particular sites or locations
- principles of group management and group dynamics
- communication and leadership techniques with particular application to guiding activities and building group cohesion
- types of conflict and people management issues likely to arise in a group touring situation and typical causes and responses.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the ability to: • coordinate group movements, using communication and leadership techniques that build group cohesion • lead multiple group tours or activities of a duration that reflects local industry product and practice, and of sufficient duration to allow the individual to demonstrate techniques to build group cohesion • demonstrate knowledge of the range of conflict and people management issues that could arise during group tours or activities.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure use of: • touring environments that reflect that nature of tours commercially available in the relevant city or region • real or simulated touring activities • a group of customers for whom the individual can act as guide.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- direct observation of the individual's ability to coordinate the movement of groups by participating in tours conducted by the individual
- direct observation of the individual's people management skills during the operation of group tours
- questioning group tour members about the individual's clarity of communication and leadership skills
- use of case studies and problem-solving to evaluate ability to apply solutions to different group conflicts and difficulties
- written or oral questioning to assess knowledge of conflict resolution, leadership and group motivation techniques and procedures relevant to the movement of tour groups
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment

The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example:

- SITTGDE304 Prepare and present tour commentaries or activities
- SITTGDE401 Coordinate and operate tours
- SITTGDE402 Manage extended touring programs
- SITXCOM202 Provide a briefing or scripted commentary.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Techniques to build group cohesion may include:

- encouraging interaction between group members
- focusing the group on shared experiences
- group activities or games

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

- inviting individuals to address the group
- using seat rotation systems
- using the skills of individual group members in the operation of the tour.

Group problems may involve:

- interpersonal issues:
  - customers who cause disruption and disturbance to others
  - dissatisfaction with the tour
  - dominant customers
  - negative customers
  - perception of favouritism by guide
  - personal conflict between customers
  - subgroups or cliques within the group
- operational issues:
  - overcrowding
  - scheduling
  - lost customers.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the ability to:
	• source information to meet differing customer needs
	• demonstrate knowledge of Australia and the local region as specified under Required Knowledge, sufficient to:
	  • develop coherent and interesting presentations for customers
	  • answer typical questions asked by customers on given topics.

Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure use of: • current sources of information.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • direct observation of the individual using knowledge to deliver interpretive commentaries or activities • questioning of group members about the individual's breadth of knowledge and ability to answer customer questions • review of a research portfolio prepared by the individual • written or oral questioning to assess the individual's use of appropriate information sources • written or oral questioning or to assess knowledge of Australia and the local area • review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace

- SITTGDE402 Manage extended touring programs
- SITTTOP403 Operate tours in a remote area.

Guiding personnel are expected to have a breadth and depth of knowledge in order to satisfy the information needs of their customers and funding and hours allocated to training must reflect this industry requirement. Training and assessment programs must:

- cover the broad range of knowledge covered within the required Skills and Knowledge section of this unit
- ensure that the depth of knowledge covered is sufficient to meet the requirements of a guide
- tailor the regional knowledge base to cover specific aspects of the local region
- allow for guides who have moved to different locations to participate in retraining.

Version	Comments
1.0	E Replaces and is equivalent to SITTGDE008A Research and share general information on Australian Indigenous cultures.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to research and share information about Australian Indigenous societies in a culturally appropriate way. It focuses on information that is widely available to the general community. The unit recognises that there is no single Australian Indigenous culture and emphasises the importance of culturally appropriate behaviour and local community consultation.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies across many industry sectors. It is particularly relevant to cultural tourism operations and to individuals who work in customer service and guiding roles with differing levels of responsibility. Information could apply to Indigenous countries and cultures across Australia, or to a specific Indigenous country and culture.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

Tour guides, residing anywhere in Australia, are required to undertake training and assessment prescribed by Parks Australia to guide within Kakadu and Uluru National Parks in the Northern Territory. This training is based on the following units:

- SITTGDE101 Interpret aspects of local Australian Indigenous culture
- SITTGDE306 Research and share general information on Australian Indigenous cultures.

Assessment should also recognise the different ways that people acquire specialised knowledge, for example:

- specialised qualifications in the subject matter area
- cultural knowledge in Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander societies.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

SITTGDE401 Coordinate and operate tours

Modification History

The version details of this endorsed unit of competency set are in the table below. The latest information is at the top.

Version	Comments
1.0	E Replaces and is equivalent to SITTGDE003A Coordinate and operate a tour. Title made plural for consistency with other titles.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to conduct a tour for groups or individuals that includes multiple products, services and sites. It requires the ability to manage the tour logistics of a prearranged itinerary. The coordination of tour delivery requires significant planning and organisational skills as well as the ability to liaise with suppliers and industry colleagues to maximise tour efficiency and customer service quality.

Application of the Unit

This unit has particular application to guides engaged by tour operators, inbound tour operators and tour wholesalers. Sometimes these individuals are called driver guides and coach captains. In an extended touring context, the unit applies to tour managers who accompany tour groups on longer tours and manage the logistics of group movements and touring arrangements at each destination. The unit does not apply to guides working at a single site.

Individuals performing this function work independently in the field, within established organisational procedures.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

	4.6 Keep customers informed of reasons for changes and actions taken.
5. Deal with unexpected events.	5.1 Assess unexpected events and select appropriate action.
	5.2 Follow organisational procedures in the case of accidents or where safety of customers or colleagues may be threatened.
	5.3 Identify and access sources of assistance promptly.
	5.4 Amend tour to minimise impact on customer enjoyment.
6. Debrief tour.	6.1 Provide accurate and complete tour reports according to organisational guidelines.
	6.2 Provide customer and personal feedback and other information to assist with future improvements.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication skills to:
  - interact and negotiate with customers, industry colleagues and suppliers about touring logistics and sometimes complex issues such as itinerary changes
- literacy skills to:
  - read and interpret customer and operational information
  - interpret tourism industry jargon, especially product codes
  - complete operational and reporting documents
- numeracy skills to:
  - calculate tour component times
  - translate from the 24-hour to 12-hour clock for customer use
- planning and organising skills to:
  - coordinate multiple and diverse tour components
  - manage the impacts of variations and delays
- problem-solving skills to respond to potentially complex logistical and interpersonal challenges that arise during tour operations
- teamwork skills to work cooperatively with colleagues from other organisations
- technology skills to use industry-current communication systems.

Required knowledge

- product knowledge appropriate to the specific touring itinerary and its component products and services
- main features of culturally or environmentally sensitive areas to be visited and minimal impact practices to protect and sustain these

- tourism industry supplier networks and interrelationships that impact on the conduct of a multi-product and multi-site touring itinerary
- industry reconfirmation and booking procedures for tour components
- planning procedures relating to the delivery logistics of a multifaceted touring itinerary and the management processes to be undertaken before, during and on completion of a tour
- typical tour management problems, and strategies to address these, including:
  - itinerary variations
  - accident or injury
- legal and liability issues affecting guides, including:
  - domestic and relevant overseas consumer law regarding provision of services as advertised
  - duty of care.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the ability to: • plan for, and operate multiple tours that comprise multiple products, services and sites • follow procedures for reconfirmation of touring components and mechanisms for solving situations and problems on tour • conduct tours in a safe and sustainable manner • demonstrate knowledge of tourism industry, supplier networks and interrelationships that impact on the conduct of a multi-product, multi-site touring itinerary.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure use of: • touring environments that reflect the nature of tours commercially available in the relevant city or region • real or simulated touring activities • equipment and resources required for the delivery of tours such as transport and venue access • a group of customers for whom the individual can act as guide • customer and operational documentation to support the delivery of a multifaceted touring itinerary.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- direct observation of organisational and tour management skills by participating in a tour conducted by the individual
- review of tour preparation notes or tour reports prepared by the individual
- use of case studies and problem-solving activities to assess ability to apply contingency and risk management skills to a range of different touring situations and problems
- written or oral questioning to assess knowledge of industry networks, tour management procedures and legal issues affecting tour management
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment

The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example:

- SITTGDE303 Lead tour groups
- SITTGDE304 Prepare and present tour commentaries or activities
- SITTGDE402 Manage extended touring programs.

It is critical that training and assessment is contextualised to meet the requirements of local tourism industry operations. In a pre-vocational context, assessment should cover a broad scope of locations and destinations within the city or region in which the guide is training to work, so that guides are able to coordinate tours in the range of locations expected by industry operators.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Modification History

The version details of this endorsed unit of competency set are in the table below. The latest information is at the top.

Version	Comments
1.0	N Replaces but is not equivalent to SITTGDE005A Manage extended touring programs. Prerequisites removed. Additional requirement in relation to legal, ethical, safety and sustainability issues.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to coordinate touring programs of more than one day's duration. It requires the ability to manage all tour logistics and to solve touring and group member problems. It also requires skills to ensure the ongoing welfare and satisfaction of tour group members and to develop and maintain group cohesion and rapport.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to the tour operations, inbound tour operations and tour wholesaling sectors, and to the tour managers, tour directors, tour leaders and tour escorts employed by those companies. These individuals may lead extended tours in Australia or overseas, and are responsible for the logistical management of touring programs that usually include multiple destinations. They work independently in the field, within established organisational procedures. When on tour, they take a lead role without supervision, only referring problems to the tourism operator when absolutely necessary.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

SITXHRM301 Coach others in job skills

Modification History

The version details of this endorsed unit of competency set are in the table below. The latest information is at the top.

Version	Comments
1.0	N Replaces but is not equivalent to SITXHRM001A Coach others in job skills. Significant changes to Elements, Performance Criteria, and Required Knowledge to refocus the unit. Additional Performance Criteria and Required Knowledge covering coaching in organisational procedures.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to provide on-the-job coaching to colleagues. It requires the ability to explain and demonstrate specific skills, knowledge and procedures and to monitor the progress of colleagues until they are able to operate independently of the coach. This unit has no parity with units in TAE10 Training and Education Training Package, but covers the situation in workplaces where buddy systems and informal on-the-job training are extremely common.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to all tourism, hospitality and event sectors.

It applies to experienced operational personnel and to supervisors and managers who informally train other people in new workplace skills and procedures.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Elements and Performance Criteria

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.
1. Prepare for on the job coaching.	1.1 Identify the need for coaching based on a range of factors. 1.2 Identify specific coaching needs through discussion with colleague and organise coaching sessions.
2. Coach colleagues on the job.	2.1 Explain the overall purpose of coaching to colleague. 2.2 Explain and demonstrate the specific skills. 2.3 Communicate required knowledge and check colleague understanding. 2.4 Advise organisational procedures for completing workplace tasks. 2.5 Provide colleague with opportunity to practise the skill and ask questions. 2.6 Provide feedback in a constructive and supportive manner.
3. Follow up coaching.	3.1 Monitor progress of new workplace skills and provide supportive assistance. 3.2 Report progress to the appropriate person. 3.3 Identify performance problems or difficulties with the coaching and rectify or refer to the appropriate person for follow up.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication skills to:
  - develop rapport
  - show sensitivity to the colleague
  - use active listening and open questioning techniques to confirm understanding of job

- initiative and enterprise skills to observe the colleague and provide assistance without their request
- literacy skills to:
  - read and interpret workplace documentation completed by colleague
  - numeracy skills to calculate adequate time required for coaching and the colleague to complete required tasks
- planning and organising skills to complete own work tasks within designated timelines and simultaneously coach others in their job skills
- problem-solving skills to identify and resolve deficiencies in the skills and knowledge of colleagues
- self-management skills to take responsibility for colleague coaching
- teamwork skills to pass on organisational knowledge to colleague.

Required knowledge

- objectives and scope of the coaching
- the key principles of training:
  - explanation
  - demonstration
  - review
  - listening to trainee explanation
  - observing and evaluating trainee demonstration
  - providing feedback.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the ability to: • provide supportive on-the-job coaching and provide constructive feedback • clearly communicate and demonstrate the workplace tasks required of the colleague • integrate knowledge of the key principles of training • complete coaching activities within commercial time constraints to ensure the colleague is effective.
Context of and specific	Assessment must ensure use of:

resources for assessment	• a real or simulated tourism, hospitality or event industry environment with colleague requiring coaching • work tasks to coach others in • a colleague with whom the individual can interact.

	• direct observation of the individual coaching a colleague in a required work skill
	• role plays to assess the individual's ability to use:
	  • active listening and open questioning techniques to confirm understanding of job tasks
	  • key training techniques
	• use of problem-solving exercises so the individual can suggest ways of resolving performance problems or difficulties
	• written or oral questioning to assess knowledge of key training principles
	• review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment	The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example: • SITXCOM201 Show social and cultural sensitivity • SITXMGT401 Monitor work operations.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Factors may include:	• direction from colleagues • own observation and workplace experience • request for coaching from colleague to be coached.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

Coaching sessions could be conducted in a range of contexts, including:	• before or after work • in a simulated location away from the actual workplace • on-the-job during work hours.
Skills to be coached are generally those not requiring formal or extended training sessions, but short, commonly-used tasks, such as:	• customer service skills • selling or promoting products and services • technical or practical skills, such as operating equipment, making something or completing documentation.
Required knowledge refers to the essential knowledge required to carry out tasks or undertake skills effectively, such as:	• ingredients or components of items • knowledge of products or services • legislative, work health and safety and hygiene requirements • principles underpinning skills, such as communication and selling • reasons for undertaking various tasks.
Performance problems or difficulties may be due to:	• breakdown in communication • inappropriate circumstances for coaching • insufficient opportunity to practise • language or cultural barriers • shyness or lack of confidence.

- industry current:
  - recruitment documentation
  - job descriptions, linked selection criteria and interview questions
  - key human resource policies
- multiple applicants with whom the individual can interact.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- use of case studies so the individual can determine and evaluate staffing requirements
- review of documents prepared by the individual:
  - selection criteria
  - advertisements
  - interview questions
  - unsuccessful applicant letters
  - employment offers
  - plans outlining inclusions for induction and orientation programs
- direct observation, using role plays, of the individual conducting a number of job interviews
- exercises and activities to assess the individual's knowledge of award provisions and organisational human resource policies
- written or oral questioning to assess knowledge of:
  - links between job descriptions, selection criteria and interview questions
  - effective advertising media for different jobs
  - EEO and anti-discrimination law
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment

The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example:

- SITXCOM201 Show social and cultural sensitivity
- SITXHRM502 Manage volunteers
- SITXMGT401 Monitor work operations.

Version	Comments
1.0	N Replaces but is not equivalent to SITXINV001A Receive and store stock. Re-worked Elements, Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge to more fully articulate content. Technology skills and knowledge added.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to check and take delivery of stock and to appropriately store, rotate and maintain the quality of stock items.

It does not include specialist stock control processes for perishable foodstuffs which are covered by the unit SITXINV202 Maintain the quality of perishable supplies.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to the tourism, travel, hospitality and event industry sectors and to any type of stock.

The unit is relevant to organisations where stock control is an integral and essential part of business operations, and where there are control issues to be considered. The unit is not appropriate for situations where stock management is very simple, such as controlling stationery supplies in a small office.

It applies to operational personnel who work with very little independence and under close supervision. They apply little discretion and judgement and follow predefined organisational procedures to report any stock-related discrepancies to a higher level staff member for action.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

SITXINV202 Maintain the quality of perishable items

Modification History

The version details of this endorsed unit of competency set are in the table below. The latest information is at the top.

Version	Comments
1.1	Editorial correction to modification history.
1.0	N Replaces but is not equivalent to SITHCCC003B Receive and store kitchen supplies. There was confused intent with, and duplication across, the two units SITXINV001A Receive and store stock and SITHCCC003B Receive and store kitchen supplies. The unit SITXINV001A Receive and store stock covered stock control for all types of stock. This unit now only covers the particular skills and knowledge required to store perishable supplies in optimum conditions to minimise wastage and avoid food safety hazards. New title applied for clarity. Moved to Inventory competency field to better reflect the content of this unit.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to maintain the quality of perishable supplies for commercial cookery or catering operations. It requires the ability to store perishable supplies in optimum conditions to minimise wastage and avoid food contamination.

It does not include general stock control processes which are covered by the unit SITXINV201 Receive and store stock.

Application of the Unit

This unit is particularly important within a food safety regime and applies to hospitality and catering organisations including hotels, restaurants, clubs, educational institutions, health establishments, defence forces, cafeterias, residential caterers, in-flight and other transport caterers, event and function caterers.

People at many levels use this skill in the workplace during the course of their daily activities including cooks, chefs, caterers, and kitchen attendants.

	procedures and protect supplies from spoilage. 2.3 Protect supplies from damage of cross-contamination and pests. 2.4 Rotate perishable supplies for maximum use according to expiration dates.
3. Check perishable supplies and dispose of spoilt stock.	3.1 Regularly check all perishable supplies for quality. 3.2 Inspect items for animal and pest damage and report incidents of infestation. 3.3 Identify any deficiencies, report findings or dispose of any non-usable supplies within scope of responsibility. 3.4 Safely dispose of spoilt stock and waste to minimise negative environmental impacts.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication skills to make simple verbal reports on the disposal of perished supplies
- literacy skills to:
  - read and comprehend date code and stock rotation labels
  - write date code and stock rotation labels and simple documents that record temperature results
- numeracy skills to:
  - use a thermometer correctly to measure temperatures
  - estimate times for regular temperature checks
- planning and organising skills to regularly check and adjust the environmental conditions of storage areas
- problem-solving skills to:
  - evaluate quality of stored supplies and make adjustments to their storage conditions to ensure a quality product
  - monitor storage temperatures and adjust according to identified discrepancies
  - identify unsafe and perished supplies and dispose of them
- teamwork skills to report incidents of spoilage to supervisors
- technology skills to use thermometers and adjust temperature and humidity controls on storage equipment.

Required knowledge

- contents of stock date codes and rotation labels
- meaning of:
  - wastage to a commercial catering organisation and reasons to avoid it

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the ability to:
	• maintain the quality of a diverse range of perishable supplies for commercial cookery or catering operations including these main food groups:
	  • beverages
	  • dairy products
	  • canned products
	  • dry goods
	  • frozen goods
	  • fruit
	  • meat
	  • oils
	  • poultry
	  • seafood
	  • vacuumed sealed items
	  • vegetables
	• integrate knowledge of:
	  • correct environmental storage conditions for the main food types
	  • food safety procedures and standards for storage of perishable supplies
	  • indicators of spoilage and contamination of perishable supplies
	• integrate checks on perishable supplies with other duties and within commercial time constraints.

Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure use of: • an operational commercial kitchen with the fixtures, large and small equipment and workplace documentation defined in the Assessment Guidelines;

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia this can be a:

- real industry workplace
- simulated industry environment such as a training kitchen servicing customers

- thermometers and temperature recording charts
- a diverse and comprehensive range of perishable food supplies.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- direct observation of the individual date coding perishable supplies and storing them in appropriate environmental conditions
- evaluation of temperature records completed by the individual
- problem solving exercise to assess the individual's ability to identify a range of spoilt and contaminated food items
- written or oral questioning to assess knowledge of correct environmental storage conditions, food safety procedures and standards and indicators of spoilage and contamination
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment

The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example:

- SITHCCC104 Package prepared foodstuffs
- SITHCCC205 Produce cook-chill and cook freeze foods
- SITHCCC206 Rethermalise chilled and frozen foods
- SITXINV201 Receive and store stock
- SITXWHS101 Participate in safe work practices
- TLIE1005A Carry out basic workplace calculations.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Temperature checks may relate to:	• cold or chilled foods • frozen foods • ingredients • raw foods • reheated foods or ingredients.

Deficiencies may include:	• contaminated food
	• food that is intended to be:
	  • frozen but has thawed
	  • chilled but has reached a dangerous temperature zone
	• packaged food that is exposed through damaged packaging.

To reject supply may involve:	• rejecting supply immediately on delivery by supplier • rejecting supply of goods delivered under concession and not formally received • quarantining contaminated food from other food until the rejection is finalised • returning food to the supplier • disposing of contaminated food with consent of the supplier.

Environmental conditions may involve:	• correct application of humidity and temperature controls
	• correct ventilation
	• protecting perishables from exposure to:
	  • heating or air conditioning
	  • accidental damage through people traffic
	  • environmental heat and light
	• sanitary cleanliness
	• storing perishables:
	  • in dry stores
	  • in cool rooms
	  • in freezers
	  • in refrigerators
	  • sanitised and hygienic conditions
	  • at room temperature.

Supplies include:	• beverages • dairy products • canned products • dry goods • food • frozen goods

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

	• fruit • meat • oils • poultry • seafood • stock on hand • vacuumed sealed items • vegetables.

SITXINV301 Purchase goods

Modification History

The version details of this endorsed unit of competency set are in the table below. The latest information is at the top.

Version	Comments
1.0	New unit.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to determine the purchasing requirements for goods, source suppliers, discuss requirements and to assess the quality of goods before purchasing.

It does not cover the specialist skills to systematically purchase and control the supply of goods for an organisation. These skills are covered by the units:

- SITXINV401 Control stock
- SITXINV601 Establish stock purchasing and control systems.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to the tourism, travel, hospitality and event industry sectors and covers the purchase of any type of goods including food and beverage supplies. Purchasing goods may involve: placing an order for future delivery or purchasing goods face-to-face and taking immediate delivery.

The unit can apply to operational personnel who operate with some level of independence and under limited supervision. This includes tour coordinators, account managers for professional conference organisers, event coordinators and banquet coordinators. In a kitchen environment it can apply to chefs of all levels including commis chefs, but in larger organisations purchasing often remains the responsibility of sous chefs and executive chefs.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication skills to:
  - discuss product and purchase requirements with supervisors and managers
  - provide clear directions to suppliers about product specifications and purchasing requirements
  - conduct basic negotiations on the cost of goods
- critical thinking skills to assesses the quality of goods on offer by the supplier
- initiative and enterprise skills to purchase from the most cost effective supplier
- literacy skills to:
  - read and interpret operational documents which describe the purchasing requirements e.g. recipes, menus, itineraries, event running sheets, and organisational procedures
  - write purchase orders and descriptive purchase specifications for suppliers
- numeracy skills to interpret job costings and calculate supplier costs
- planning and organising skills to prioritise purchasing requirements according to organisational deadlines
- problem-solving skills to identify deficiencies in:
  - current stock on hand and purchase new stock
  - supplier quality and choose a more appropriate supplier
- teamwork skills to discuss production requirements with supervisors and managers to determine purchase requirements
- technology skills to use a calculator to assist with supply numbers and costs.

Required knowledge

- for the specific industry sector and organisation:
  - features of products sold and the expected level of quality
  - formats for and contents of workplace documents that describe supply requirements
  - forecasting methods for calculating required quantity of goods
  - formats for and inclusions of job costings that describe purchase price limitations
  - sources of product and supplier information
  - sources of information on negotiated cost of supply, contractual arrangements and preferred supplier arrangements
  - formats for and inclusions of supplier specifications for the purchase of goods
  - full content of stock ordering procedures and documents
  - individual stock ordering responsibilities.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the ability to: • interpret and confirm purchasing requirements and purchase a diverse range of goods to meet different end product requirements • assesses supplier capacity to meet price, quality and delivery expectations • integrate into purchasing activities, knowledge of stock ordering procedures and documents • complete purchasing activities according to organisational deadlines.

Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure use of:
	• a real or simulated tourism, hospitality or event business activity for which goods are purchased; for example:
	  • a function
	  • a kitchen operation
	  • a tour
	  • an event
	• a diverse and comprehensive range of tourism, hospitality or event industry supply items that can be assessed for quality and suitability
	• operational documentation, e.g. details of supplier contracts and job costings
	• current commercial stock control procedures and documentation for the ordering of goods.

Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:
	• direct observation, using role plays, of the individual:
	  • discussing purchase requirements with supervisors and managers
	  • negotiating the quality and cost of items with suppliers
	• projects and activities that allow assessment of the individual's ability to:

- assess the quality of goods on offer
- determine purchase requirements for particular business operation
- purchase goods to meet deadlines

- review of documents prepared by the individual:
  - product specifications
  - purchase lists
- use of problem-solving activities so the individual can suggest methods for resolving costly or substandard quality of supply
- written or oral questioning to assess knowledge of contractual arrangements, preferred supplier arrangements and stock ordering procedures
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment

The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example:

- SITHCCC301 Produce poultry dishes
- SITHCCC302 Produce seafood dishes
- SITHCCC303 Produce meat dishes
- SITHCCC304 Produce and serve food for buffets
- SITTTSL201 Operate an online information system

Modification History

The version details of this endorsed unit of competency set are in the table below. The latest information is at the top.

Version	Comment
1.0	N Replaces but is not equivalent to SITXINV002A Control and order stock. Title simplified. Re-worked Elements, Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge to more fully articulate content. Technology skills and knowledge added. Prerequisites removed.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to process stock orders, maintain stock levels, minimise stock losses, manage stocktakes and maintain all documents that relate to the administration of any type of stock.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to the tourism, travel, hospitality and event industry sectors.

The unit is relevant to organisations where stock control is an integral and essential part of business operations, and where there are complex ordering and control issues to be considered. The unit is not appropriate for situations where stock management is very simple, such as controlling stationery supplies in a small office.

It applies to stock control personnel who operate independently, have responsibility for others and make a range of decisions on the overall administration of stock.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Elements and Performance Criteria

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.
1. Maintain stock levels and records.	1.1 Use stock control systems and equipment to administer all stock control and ordering processes. 1.2 Monitor and maintain stock levels to meet organisational requirements. 1.3 Monitor stock security and adjust procedures as required. 1.4 Inform colleagues of their individual stock ordering responsibilities. 1.5 Maintain records of stock levels and create reports according to organisational procedures. 1.6 Monitor stock performance, and identify and report fast or slow selling items. 1.7 Monitor and adjust stock reorder cycles.
2. Process stock orders.	2.1 Process orders for stock according to organisational procedures. 2.2 Maintain stock levels and record current accurate details. 2.3 Check and record incoming stock against purchase and supply agreements.
3. Minimise stock losses.	3.1 Regularly check the storage of stock and ensure its protection. 3.2 Identify, record and report stock losses. 3.3 Identify avoidable losses and establish reasons for them. 3.4 Recommend solutions and implement procedures to prevent future losses.
4. Follow up orders.	4.1 Monitor the delivery of stock to ensure agreed deadlines are met. 4.2 Liaise with suppliers to ensure continuity of supply. 4.3 Resolve routine supply problems or refer to appropriate person for action.

	4.4 Distribute stock within the organisation according to required allocations.
5. Organise and administer stocktakes.	5.1 Organise stocktakes at appropriate intervals. 5.2 Allocate stocktaking responsibilities to staff and supervise the operation of the stocktake. 5.3 Produce accurate stocktake reports within designated timelines.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication skills to:
  - liaise with suppliers about deliveries and discrepancies
  - discuss reasons for stock losses with staff
  - provide clear directions to staff about their stocktaking responsibilities
- critical thinking skills to analyse stock performance, and identify fast or slow-selling items
- literacy skills to:
  - read and interpret supplier purchasing agreements, purchase orders, records of incoming stock and organisational procedures
  - write detailed reports on stock levels, performance, losses and stocktakes
- numeracy skills to calculate supplier costs and complex order costs, reconcile incoming stock and invoices against purchase orders, calculate complex details of stock on hand and stock losses and produce complex numerically based reports
- planning and organising skills to efficiently order and maintain stock so that stock levels meet organisational requirements
- problem-solving skills to identify reasons for stock losses, recommend solutions and implement procedures to prevent future losses
- teamwork skills to direct staff on ordering responsibilities and supervise staff participation in stocktakes
- technology skills to use:
  - a computer and keyboard
  - the system capabilities and functions of a stock control system
  - electronic equipment used for stock control.

commercial time constraints.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure use of:

- a real or simulated tourism, hospitality or event industry stock control environment where stock levels are monitored and maintained
- computers, printers and stock control software systems currently used by the tourism, hospitality or event industry
- electronic equipment used for stock control
- a diverse and comprehensive range of tourism, hospitality or event industry stock items that are monitored and maintained
- current commercial stock control procedures and documentation for the ordering, monitoring and maintenance of stock.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- direct observation, using role plays, of the individual:
  - resolving stock delivery issues with suppliers
  - supervising the operation of a stocktake
- projects and activities that allow assessment of the individual's ability to:

SITXINV601 Establish stock purchasing and control systems

Modification History

The version details of this endorsed unit of competency set are in the table below. The latest information is at the top.

Version	Comments
1.0	N Replaces but is not equivalent to SITXINV003A Manage and purchase stock. Change to title for greater consistency across Training Package and to better reflect the intent of the unit. Changes made to structure and word content of Elements and Performance Criteria for clarity. Technology skills and knowledge added.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to establish and implement stock control and cost effective stock purchasing and supply systems for a business.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to the tourism, travel, hospitality and event industry sectors.

The unit is relevant to organisations where stock management is an integral and essential part of business operations, and where there are complex purchasing and control issues to be considered. The unit is not appropriate for situations where stock management is very simple, such as controlling stationery supplies in a small office.

It applies to senior managers who operate with significant autonomy and who are responsible for making a range of strategic management decisions.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

Elements and Performance Criteria

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.
1. Determine stock requirements.	1.1 Use business data, forecasting methods and standard measures to calculate required stock levels. 1.2 Determine stock requirements for standard business periods, peak seasons and special events. 1.3 Establish cost-effective purchase quantities based on business information and supplier advice.
2. Establish optimum supply arrangements.	2.1 Evaluate quality of supply, based on feedback from colleagues and customers. 2.2 Source and review potential suppliers. 2.3 Develop appropriate and accurate purchase specifications. 2.4 Assess suppliers against specifications considering all relevant factors. 2.5 Assess terms of purchase and negotiate with suppliers to achieve optimum supply arrangements. 2.6 Adjust sources of supply and make accurate records of agreements.
3. Develop and implement stock control systems.	3.1 Develop stock control systems and communicate to all relevant staff. 3.2 Develop special control systems for stock with high wastage or loss. 3.3 Monitor workplace systems and make adjustments according to feedback and operational experience. 3.4 Initiate training of staff to minimise stock wastage.

Required Skills and Knowledge

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

Required skills

- communication skills to negotiate complex supply arrangements and liaise with stock suppliers
- critical thinking skills to assess supplier ability to meet the needs of the organisation and evaluate and determine optimum supply arrangements
- initiative and enterprise skills to negotiate cost effective supply and maximise profitability
- literacy skills to:
  - read and interpret complex supplier cost sheets, specific terms of purchase and supplier contracts
  - research potential suppliers, sort and analyse information to make decisions on supply arrangements
  - write complex and accurate purchase specifications and stock control system documents
- numeracy skills to:
  - work with budgets
  - interpret complex stock performance, wastage and stocktake reports
  - calculate standard methods and measures
  - interpret supply costs and calculate cost effective quantities for purchase
- planning and organising skills to plan, establish and monitor stock control systems
- problem-solving skills to monitor the quality and cost of supply, identify deficiencies and adjust purchasing arrangements
- self-management skills to take responsibility for purchase and stock control decisions
- teamwork skills to discuss, review and incorporate feedback from team members
- technology skills to use:
  - a computer and keyboard
  - the system capabilities and functions of a stock control system.

Required knowledge

- for the specific industry sector:
  - forecasting methods for calculating required stock levels including formulas for yield testing and use of standard measures
  - methods to calculate cost-effective order quantities for different stock items
  - different types of computer stock control systems used, their functions and features
  - stock security systems
  - types of storage and their suitability for different kinds of stock
  - a range of supply sources for different types of product
  - formats for and inclusions of purchase specifications, including appropriate terminology
- for the specific organisation:
  - relevant stock, including product life and storage requirements for specific goods
  - standard business periods, peak seasons and special events

- reasons for stock loss and damage and methods to control these
- a range of formats for, inclusions and uses of:
  - stock control procedures including those for stock with high wastage or loss
  - various stock control reports.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the ability to: • establish and implement cost effective stock purchasing and control systems for a diverse range of stock items • monitor stock control systems, stock quality and cost-effectiveness of supply over a period of time • integrate knowledge of various stock control reports and data required to calculate cost-effective purchasing.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure use of: • a real or simulated tourism, hospitality or event industry business operation for which stock is purchased and stock control systems are developed • computers, printers and stock control software systems currently used by the tourism, hospitality or event industry • current commercial purchase specifications, stock control procedures and reports, supplier cost and contractual documentation used for the purchase of stock • suppliers with whom the individual can interact and negotiate.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • projects and activities that allow assessment of the individual's ability to: • determine stock levels for normal and peak operating seasons

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

- use reports and supplier information to calculate cost-effective order quantities
- develop a variety of tailored stock control systems
- evaluate the performance of systems and make adjustments

- review of documents prepared by the individual:
  - stock control procedures
  - purchase specifications
  - reports evaluating the quality and cost of supply
- use of problem-solving activities so the individual can develop systems to control stock with high wastage or loss
- written or oral questioning to assess knowledge of:
  - types of storage and their suitability for different kinds of stock
  - stock control systems used by the industry
  - a range of supply sources for different types of product
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment

The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example:

- BSBWRT401A Write complex documents
- SITXFIN501 Prepare and monitor budgets.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Data may include:

- historical sales figures
- stocktake figures
- supplier lead time
- wastage reports.

1.0	N Replaces but is not equivalent to SITHCCC004B Clean and maintain kitchen premises. Title simplified. Unit has tighter focus on cleaning kitchens to avoid food safety issues. Some Performance Criteria removed which duplicated content of related unit SITHACS101 Clean premises and equipment. Re-worked Elements, Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge to more fully articulate content. Moved to new competency field – Kitchen Operations to better reflect the content of this unit.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to clean food preparation, storage areas and equipment in commercial kitchens to ensure the safety of food. It requires the ability to work safely and to use resources efficiently to reduce negative environmental impacts.

Application of the Unit

This unit is particularly important within a food safety regime and applies to all hospitality and catering organisations with kitchen premises including permanent or temporary kitchens or smaller food preparation areas. These can be found within restaurants, cafes, kiosks, cafeterias, clubs, hotels, attractions and in catering facilities.

It applies to kitchen personnel who work with very little independence and under close supervision including kitchen attendants and stewards. It can also apply to cooks and chefs in small organisations.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

4. Work safely and reduce negative environmental impacts.	4.1 Use cleaning agents, chemicals and cleaning equipment safely and according to manufacturer instructions. 4.2 Use personal protective equipment and safe manual handling techniques when cleaning equipment and premises. 4.3 Reduce negative environmental impacts through efficient use of energy, water and other resources. 4.4 Sort general waste from recyclables and dispose of them in designated recycling bins. 4.5 Safely dispose of all kitchen waste, especially hazardous substances, to minimise negative environmental impacts.

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication skills to report and discuss the disposal of broken serviceware and infestation incidents
- literacy skills to:
  - read and comprehend workplace documents or diagrams that interpret the content of:
    - cleaning schedules
    - safety procedures
    - Material Safety Data Sheets (MSDS) and product instructions for cleaning agents and chemicals
    - manufacturer's instructions for equipment
  - write simple notes to report broken serviceware
- numeracy skills to calculate the dilution requirements for chemicals and cleaning products
- planning and organising skills to efficiently sequence the stages of cleaning kitchen equipment and premises
- problem-solving skills to:
  - identify and dispose of unsafe chipped or broken serviceware
  - identify and report on pest infestations
  - recognise a chemical accident and follow safety procedures to avoid food contamination
- self-management skills to manage own speed, timing and productivity
- teamwork skills to support cooking staff by cleaning equipment, serviceware and utensils continuously for their availability
- technology skills to use automatic dishwashers and reassemble kitchen equipment after cleaning.

SITHKOP302 Plan and cost basic menus

Modification History

The version details of this endorsed unit of competency set are in the table below. The latest information is at the top.

Version	Comments
1.0	New unit. Covers planning and costing components previously in SITHASC013A Plan menus for Asian cuisines, SITHCCC016A Develop cost-effective menus and SITHCCC023B Select, prepare and serve specialised food items. Two units now cover all menu and cuisine types SITHKOP302 Plan and cost basic menus and SITHKOP501 Design and cost menus.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to plan and cost basic menus for dishes or food product ranges for any type of cuisine or food service style. It requires the ability to identify customer preferences, plan menus to meet customer and business needs, cost menus and evaluate their success.

It does not cover the specialist skills used by senior catering managers and chefs to design and cost complex menus after researching market preferences and trends. Those skills are covered within SITHKOP501 Design and cost menus.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to hospitality and catering organisations. Menus can be for ongoing food service, for an events or function or for a food product range such as patisserie products.

It applies to cooks, patissiers and catering personnel who usually work under the guidance of more senior chefs.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the ability to:

- evaluate the food preferences of particular customer groups
- develop and cost multiple menus to meet a diversity of customer profiles
- evaluate menu success over a menu life cycle
- demonstrate knowledge of:
  - costs of supply for ingredients
  - methods and formulas for calculating portion yields and costs from raw ingredients
  - desired profit margins, mark-up procedures and rates
  - different types and styles of menus for dishes or food production ranges
  - develop menus within commercial time constraints.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure use of:

- a real or simulated hospitality industry business operation or activity for which menus are planned and costed and workplace documentation defined in the Assessment Guidelines; this can be a:
  - real industry workplace
  - simulated industry environment such as a training kitchen servicing customers
- costs of food supply for food service businesses
- menus for a variety of cuisines and service styles.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- projects and activities that allow assessment of the individual's ability to:
  - evaluate the food preferences of particular customer groups
  - create menus to meet customer preferences
  - calculate nett costs and selling prices of different menu items

Version	Comments
1.0	N Replaces but is not equivalent to SITHCCC019A Plan, prepare and display a buffet. Title changed to better reflect intent and content of the unit. There was confused intent with and duplication across the two units SITHCCC015A Plan and prepare food for buffets, and SITHCCC019A Plan, prepare and display a buffet. Re-worked Elements, Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge to more fully articulate content. Revised unit only covers design, planning and display of buffets. Moved to new competency field – Kitchen Operations to better reflect the content of this unit. Four prerequisite units removed. SITXFSA101 Use hygienic practices for food safety retained as a prerequisite.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to design, plan and display buffets. It requires the ability to consult on buffet requirements, design the total buffet concept, plan and document operational requirements, display a buffet creatively and supervise food service.

It does not include the preparation of food items for buffets which is covered by the unit SITHCCC304 Produce and serve food for buffets.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to all hospitality and catering organisations which serve buffet food including restaurants, hotels, clubs, event and function venues. The buffet could be a one-off for a special event or function or a series of regular buffets offered by the organisation.

This unit applies to those people who operate independently or with limited guidance from others such as senior and supervising cooks and chefs, catering supervisors and managers.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication skills to:
  - liaise with customers to ascertain requirements
  - discuss concept proposals with other people involved in the planning of buffets to finalise the design
- critical thinking skills to evaluate all requirements for the buffet and develop a design and plan to meet those requirements
- initiative and enterprise skills to develop creative ideas and explore a range of designs for the display of buffet foods
- literacy skills to:
  - read and interpret supplier information to decide best purchasing option
  - write comprehensive food preparation and display plans
- numeracy skills to:
  - calculate required quantities of buffet food for expected customer traffic
  - calculate supplies for food production
- planning and organising skills to access and sort all information required for buffet design and to coordinate a timely and efficient planning process
- problem-solving skills to recognise potential customer traffic flow issues and design a layout for efficient and safe customer and staff accessibility
- self-management skills to take responsibility for the design of and planning for buffets
- teamwork skills to invite and consider the input of staff members and external professionals in the buffet planning process
- technology skills to use computers and software programs to produce food preparation lists and display plans.

Required knowledge

- suitable types of foods and dishes for buffets and their characteristics:
  - culinary terms for a variety of classical and contemporary buffet items
  - appropriate conditions and temperatures for display and service to maintain optimum quality and food safety
  - appropriate portions
- presentation techniques for food items that make up a buffet, showpieces and decorations
- design considerations for buffets, including:
  - appropriateness of food items for buffets
  - balance of dish types
  - colour and style
  - costing issues
  - nutritional value of food
  - operational constraints
  - themes of occasions
  - use of showpieces and decorations.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the ability to:
	• design, plan and display multiple buffets to meet a diversity of service requirements
	• present buffets attractively with artistic flair
	• document operational requirements and supervise food preparation and service
	• integrate knowledge of:
	  • suitable types of foods and dishes for buffets
	  • presentation techniques for food items, showpieces and decorations
	• develop buffet designs and plans within commercial time constraints.

Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure use of: • a buffet display and service area with specific equipment for buffet service including display crockery and chafing dishes and workplace documentation defined in the Assessment Guidelines; this can be within a:

- real industry workplace
- simulated industry environment such as a training food and beverage outlet servicing customers

- computers and software programs to produce food preparation lists and display plans
- food preparation lists and display plans.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- evaluation of the content and presentation of a buffet planned and displayed by the individual
- projects that allow assessment of the individual's ability to design, plan and display a buffet for an event, function or meeting within designated deadlines
- written or oral questioning to assess knowledge of culinary terms, suitable types of foods and dishes for buffets and presentation techniques
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment

The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example:

- BSBWRT401A Write complex documents
- SITHCCC304 Produce and serve food for buffets
- SITHKOP501 Design and cost menus
- SITXFSA401 Develop and implement a food safety program
- SITXMGT401 Monitor work operations.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Total buffet concept may include:

1.0	E Replaces and is equivalent to SITHCCC038B Plan catering for an event or function. New title (plural events and functions) for consistency across the Training Package. Re-worked Elements, Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge to more fully articulate content. Moved to new competency field – Kitchen Operations to better reflect the content of this unit.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to plan the catering for events or functions. It requires the ability to identify the purpose and scope of the event, to prepare catering proposals to meet customer requirements and finalise operational plans for the delivery of catering. It does not include food preparation which is covered by commercial cookery units.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to catering for any type of event within the cultural, community, hospitality, sporting, tourism and event industries.

It applies to catering and event personnel who operate independently or with limited guidance from others. This unit is relevant to a caterer or other cookery specialist involved in event catering, but also to non-catering specialists including event, function and banquet coordinators.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

    - service staff
- a range of formats for and inclusions of:
    - catering proposals
    - operational plans used to manage the delivery of catering for an event or function
- risk management issues for the delivery of catering products and services at an event or function.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the ability to:
	• prepare multiple catering proposals in response to diverse customer requirements for different event or function types
	• prepare multiple practical operational plans for different event and function venues
	• implement multiple plans through the delivery of catering for different events and functions
	• demonstrate knowledge of:
	  • major characteristics of different types of events and functions
	  • catering and service styles for different types of events
	  • roles and responsibilities of kitchen and service staff
	• complete proposals and plans and coordinate the delivery of catering for events and functions within commercial time constraints.

Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure use of: • a hospitality or catering business operation or activity for which catering proposals and plans are prepared and implemented

- event and function venues where catering is provided and workplace documentation defined in the Assessment Guidelines; this can be a:
  - real industry workplace
  - simulated industry environment such as a training food and beverage outlet servicing customers
- computers, printers and software programs currently used by the hospitality and catering industry to prepare proposals and plans
- customers with whom the individual can interact.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- evaluation of documents prepared by the individual:
  - catering proposals for different types of events
  - operational plans for delivery of catering at different venues
- evaluation of reports prepared by the individual detailing the planning processes undertaken for an event and highlighting particular challenges and issues
- projects that allow assessment of the individual's ability to plan and deliver catering for events, functions or meetings within designated deadlines
- written or oral questioning to assess knowledge of:
  - different types of event, function and catering service styles
  - role and responsibilities of kitchen and service staff
  - a range of formats for and inclusions of catering proposals and plans
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment

The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example:

- BSBWRT401A Write complex documents
- SITTTSL304 Prepare quotations
- SITXCCS303 Provide service to customers
- SITXFSA202 Transport and store food.

Version	Comments
1.0	E Replaces and is equivalent to SITXLAN1__A Conduct basic workplace oral communication in a language other than English. Minor adjustments to expression of content to streamline and improve unit.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to use and understand very simple and commonly used expressions of a predictable nature in a language other than English. It covers activities, such as welcoming and farewelling customers, providing face-to-face routine customer service and other routine workplace activities.

There is no direct parity with any formal language proficiency ratings or assessment frameworks, but this unit broadly relates to International Second Language Proficiency Ratings (ISLPR) 1.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to all industry contexts and to individuals working at different levels of responsibility. This could include frontline, supervisory or management personnel.

This unit can be used for the assessment of basic oral proficiency in any language other than English. Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the ability to:
	• conduct basic workplace communication in a language other than English:
	  • listen to requests and comments
	  • provide general assistance
	  • provide very simple directions
	• gesture in a socially and culturally appropriate manner.

Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure use of:
	• a real or simulated workplace activity for which communication in languages other than English is required
	• other people with whom the individual can interact in the relevant language
	• resources that support communication in languages other than English:
	  • dictionaries and phrase books
	  • language mats
	  • signs
	  • industry materials, such as menus, timetables and brochures written in languages other than English.

Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples

are appropriate for this unit:

- oral assessment of conversational language use
- direct observation of the individual communicating in a language other than English while undertaking typical workplace activities
- review of visual aids prepared by the individual to assist verbal communication
- written or oral questioning to assess cultural knowledge and cross-cultural communication considerations
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment

The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example:

- SITHACS303 Provide accommodation reception services
- SITHFAB202 Operate a bar
- SITHFAB307 Provide table service of food and beverage
- SITXCCS201 Provide visitor information.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to use and understand very simple and commonly used expressions of a predictable nature in a language other than English. It covers activities, such as welcoming and farewelling customers, providing face-to-face routine customer service and other routine workplace activities.

There is no direct parity with any formal language proficiency ratings or assessment frameworks, but this unit broadly relates to International Second Language Proficiency Ratings (ISLPR) 1.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to all industry contexts and to individuals working at different levels of responsibility. This could include frontline, supervisory or management personnel.

This unit can be used for the assessment of basic oral proficiency in any language other than English. For reporting purposes, recognition is limited to those languages listed below which are of importance to the tourism industry. A specific code has been allocated for each of these languages. Each language must be indicated in brackets after the unit title.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the ability to:
	• conduct basic workplace communication in a language other than English:
	  • listen to requests and comments
	  • provide general assistance
	  • provide very simple directions
	• gesture in a socially and culturally appropriate manner.

Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure use of:
	• a real or simulated workplace activity for which communication in languages other than English is required
	• other people with whom the individual can interact in the relevant language
	• resources that support communication in languages other than English:
	  • dictionaries and phrase books
	  • language mats
	  • signs
	  • industry materials, such as menus, timetables and brochures written in languages other than English.

Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to use and understand very simple and commonly used expressions of a predictable nature in a language other than English. It covers activities, such as welcoming and farewelling customers, providing face-to-face routine customer service and other routine workplace activities.

There is no direct parity with any formal language proficiency ratings or assessment frameworks, but this unit broadly relates to International Second Language Proficiency Ratings (ISLPR) 1.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to all industry contexts and to individuals working at different levels of responsibility. This could include frontline, supervisory or management personnel.

This unit can be used for the assessment of basic oral proficiency in any language other than English. For reporting purposes, recognition is limited to those languages listed below which are of importance to the tourism industry. A specific code has been allocated for each of these languages. Each language must be indicated in brackets after the unit title.

- use and understand key words, phrases, short expressions and numbers.

Required knowledge

- cultural values and social norms relevant to the language being assessed, including:
  - body language
  - forms of address
  - taboo topics
- awareness of potential cross-cultural communication issues sufficient to avoid giving offence.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the ability to:
	• conduct basic workplace communication in a language other than English:
	  • listen to requests and comments
	  • provide general assistance
	  • provide very simple directions
	• gesture in a socially and culturally appropriate manner.

Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure use of:
	• a real or simulated workplace activity for which communication in languages other than English is required
	• other people with whom the individual can interact in the relevant language
	• resources that support communication in languages other than English:
	  • dictionaries and phrase books
	  • language mats
	  • signs
	  • industry materials, such as menus, timetables and brochures written in languages other than English.

Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples

are appropriate for this unit:

- oral assessment of conversational language use
- direct observation of the individual communicating in a language other than English while undertaking typical workplace activities
- review of visual aids prepared by the individual to assist verbal communication
- written or oral questioning to assess cultural knowledge and cross-cultural communication considerations
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment

The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example:

- SITHACS303 Provide accommodation reception services
- SITHFAB202 Operate a bar
- SITHFAB307 Provide table service of food and beverage
- SITXCCS201 Provide visitor information.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Basic communication may include:

- answering very simple queries about products and services:
  - in-house facilities
  - local attractions and places of interest

	• a real or simulated workplace activity for which communication in languages other than English is required
	• other people with whom the individual can interact in the relevant language
	• resources that support communication in languages other than English:
	  • dictionaries and phrase books
	  • language mats
	  • signs
	  • industry materials, such as menus, timetables and brochures written in languages other than English.

Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples

are appropriate for this unit:

- oral assessment of conversational language use
- direct observation of the individual communicating in a language other than English while undertaking typical workplace activities
- review of visual aids prepared by the individual to assist verbal communication
- written or oral questioning to assess cultural knowledge and cross-cultural communication considerations
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment

The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example:

- SITHACS303 Provide accommodation reception services
- SITHFAB202 Operate a bar
- SITHFAB307 Provide table service of food and beverage
- SITXCCS201 Provide visitor information.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Elements and Performance Criteria

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.
1. Initiate communication.	1.1 Identify language needed to conduct basic communication. 1.2 Recognise and observe social and cultural conventions of the language speaker.
2. Communicate in a language other than English to support routine workplace activities.	2.1 Use appropriate simple and commonly used courtesy expressions, including those for greeting, farewelling, apologising and thanking. 2.2 Where language barriers exist, make efforts to communicate through use of gestures or basic vocabulary in the other person's language. 2.3 Understand and use routinely required key words, short phrases and gestures. 2.4 Identify and use appropriate resources and seek assistance from those with suitable language skills. 2.5 Use visual techniques to enhance or replace oral communication.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication skills in a language other than English to:
  - support courteous and positive interactions

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

- use and understand key words, phrases, short expressions and numbers.

Required knowledge

- cultural values and social norms relevant to the language being assessed, including:
  - body language
  - forms of address
  - taboo topics
- awareness of potential cross-cultural communication issues sufficient to avoid giving offence.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the ability to:
	• conduct basic workplace communication in a language other than English:
	  • listen to requests and comments
	  • provide general assistance
	  • provide very simple directions
	• gesture in a socially and culturally appropriate manner.

Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure use of:
	• a real or simulated workplace activity for which communication in languages other than English is required
	• other people with whom the individual can interact in the relevant language
	• resources that support communication in languages other than English:
	  • dictionaries and phrase books
	  • language mats
	  • signs
	  • industry materials, such as menus, timetables and brochures written in languages other than English.

Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples

	are appropriate for this unit: • oral assessment of conversational language use • direct observation of the individual communicating in a language other than English while undertaking typical workplace activities • review of visual aids prepared by the individual to assist verbal communication • written or oral questioning to assess cultural knowledge and cross-cultural communication considerations • review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.
Guidance information for assessment	The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example: • SITHACS303 Provide accommodation reception services • SITHFAB202 Operate a bar • SITHFAB307 Provide table service of food and beverage • SITXCCS201 Provide visitor information.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to understand and use a language for routine communication. It covers speaking and listening skills required to conduct routine tasks and provide simple factual information and instructions.

There is no direct parity with any formal language proficiency ratings or assessment framework, but this unit broadly relates to International Second Language Proficiency Ratings (ISLPR) 1+ to 2.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to all industry contexts and to individuals working at different levels of responsibility. This could include frontline, supervisory or management personnel.

This unit can be used for the assessment of routine oral proficiency in any language other than English. For reporting purposes, recognition is limited to those languages listed below which are of importance to the tourism industry. A specific code has been allocated for each of these languages. Each language must be indicated in brackets after the unit title.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to conduct complex, creative, routine and non-routine communication in a language other than English. This involves very fluent listening and speaking skills at a high level of complexity to conduct negotiations, make presentations, provide oral summaries in the workplace and participate in social and cultural activities.

The unit does not cover interpreting and translating skills, which are described in units of competency in the PSP04 Public Sector Training Package.

There is no direct parity with any formal language proficiency ratings or assessment framework, but this unit broadly relates to International Second Language Proficiency Ratings (ISLPR) 4 to 4+.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to all industry contexts and individuals working in at many different levels of responsibility. This could include frontline, supervisory or management personnel.

This unit may be customised for training delivery and assessment of proficiency in any language. For reporting purposes, recognition is limited to those languages listed below which are of importance to the tourism industry. A specific code has been allocated for each of these languages. Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- literacy skills in a language other than English to:
  - read and interpret documents to:
    - identify purpose, main ideas, key issues and facts, writer attitude and mood
    - determine type of response and action required
  - write routine workplace documents using appropriate language and cultural conventions.

Required knowledge

- linguistic knowledge and writing conventions for the language being assessed, including:
  - grammar, spelling and punctuation conventions
  - features specific to the language, including vocabulary and sentence structure
- technical vocabulary required to support specific workplace activities.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the ability to:

- read and write workplace information in a language other than English:
  - understand and identify document purpose, main ideas, key issues, facts, attitude and tone of written texts (some use of a dictionary may be made but infrequently)
  - understand meaning with reasonable accuracy when reading texts related to straightforward everyday situations
  - use linguistic knowledge and skills to communicate meaning effectively in routine workplace documents (some errors may occur in writing, provided facts are not distorted and meaning is clear):
    - answering queries about products and services
    - conducting simple product and service transactions

- providing factual information
- responding to requests for general assistance and factual information.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure use of:

- a real or simulated workplace activity where written communication in languages other than English is required
- industry materials, such as routine reports, workplace documents and informational materials written in languages other than English.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- review of written communications prepared by the individual
- written or oral questioning to assess the individual's ability to read and interpret workplace documents written in a language other than English
- written or oral questioning to assess cultural knowledge and cross-cultural communication considerations
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment

The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example:

- SITTTSL304 Prepare quotations
- SITTTSL307 Process travel-related documentation.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Routine and non-routine workplace documents required to be read and understood may include:

- brochures and promotional material
- conference programs
- correspondence:
  - emails

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to read and write workplace information in a language other than English. It covers reading a range of documents and writing routine documents, such as letters and brief reports.

The unit does not cover interpreting and translating skills, which are described in units of competency in the PSP04 Public Sector Training Package.

There is no direct parity with any formal language proficiency ratings or assessment framework, but this unit broadly relates to International Second Language Proficiency Ratings (ISLPR) 3.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to all industry contexts and individuals working at many different levels of responsibility. This could include frontline, supervisory or management personnel.

This unit may be customised for training delivery and assessment of proficiency in any language. For reporting purposes, recognition is limited to those languages listed below which are of importance to the tourism industry. A specific code has been allocated for each of these languages. Each language must be indicated in brackets after the unit title.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- literacy skills in a language other than English to:
  - read and interpret documents to:
    - identify purpose, main ideas, key issues and facts, writer attitude and mood
    - determine type of response and action required
  - write routine workplace documents using appropriate language and cultural conventions.

Required knowledge

- linguistic knowledge and writing conventions for the language being assessed, including:
  - grammar, spelling and punctuation conventions
  - features specific to the language, including vocabulary and sentence structure
- technical vocabulary required to support specific workplace activities.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the ability to:

- read and write workplace information in a language other than English:
  - understand and identify document purpose, main ideas, key issues, facts, attitude and tone of written texts (some use of a dictionary may be made but infrequently)
  - understand meaning with reasonable accuracy when reading texts related to straightforward everyday situations
  - use linguistic knowledge and skills to communicate meaning effectively in routine workplace documents (some errors may occur in writing, provided facts are not distorted and meaning is clear):
    - answering queries about products and services
    - conducting simple product and service transactions

- providing factual information
- responding to requests for general assistance and factual information.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure use of:

- a real or simulated workplace activity where written communication in languages other than English is required
- industry materials, such as routine reports, workplace documents and informational materials written in languages other than English.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- review of written communications prepared by the individual
- written or oral questioning to assess the individual's ability to read and interpret workplace documents written in a language other than English
- written or oral questioning to assess cultural knowledge and cross-cultural communication considerations
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment

The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example:

- SITTTSL304 Prepare quotations
- SITTTSL307 Process travel-related documentation.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Routine and non-routine workplace documents required to be read and understood may include:

- brochures and promotional material
- conference programs
- correspondence:
  - emails

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to read and write workplace information in a language other than English. It covers reading a range of documents and writing routine documents, such as letters and brief reports.

The unit does not cover interpreting and translating skills, which are described in units of competency in the PSP04 Public Sector Training Package.

There is no direct parity with any formal language proficiency ratings or assessment framework, but this unit broadly relates to International Second Language Proficiency Ratings (ISLPR) 3.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to all industry contexts and individuals working at many different levels of responsibility. This could include frontline, supervisory or management personnel.

This unit may be customised for training delivery and assessment of proficiency in any language. For reporting purposes, recognition is limited to those languages listed below which are of importance to the tourism industry. A specific code has been allocated for each of these languages. Each language must be indicated in brackets after the unit title.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- literacy skills in a language other than English to:
  - read and interpret documents to:
    - identify purpose, main ideas, key issues and facts, writer attitude and mood
    - determine type of response and action required
  - write routine workplace documents using appropriate language and cultural conventions.

Required knowledge

- linguistic knowledge and writing conventions for the language being assessed, including:
  - grammar, spelling and punctuation conventions
  - features specific to the language, including vocabulary and sentence structure
- technical vocabulary required to support specific workplace activities.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the ability to:

- read and write workplace information in a language other than English:
  - understand and identify document purpose, main ideas, key issues, facts, attitude and tone of written texts (some use of a dictionary may be made but infrequently)
  - understand meaning with reasonable accuracy when reading texts related to straightforward everyday situations
  - use linguistic knowledge and skills to communicate meaning effectively in routine workplace documents (some errors may occur in writing, provided facts are not distorted and meaning is clear):
    - answering queries about products and services
    - conducting simple product and service transactions

- providing factual information
- responding to requests for general assistance and factual information.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure use of:

- a real or simulated workplace activity where written communication in languages other than English is required
- industry materials, such as routine reports, workplace documents and informational materials written in languages other than English.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- review of written communications prepared by the individual
- written or oral questioning to assess the individual's ability to read and interpret workplace documents written in a language other than English
- written or oral questioning to assess cultural knowledge and cross-cultural communication considerations
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment

The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example:

- SITTTSL304 Prepare quotations
- SITTTSL307 Process travel-related documentation.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Routine and non-routine workplace documents required to be read and understood may include:

- brochures and promotional material
- conference programs
- correspondence:
  - emails

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to read and write workplace information in a language other than English. It covers reading a range of documents and writing routine documents, such as letters and brief reports.

The unit does not cover interpreting and translating skills, which are described in units of competency in the PSP04 Public Sector Training Package.

There is no direct parity with any formal language proficiency ratings or assessment framework, but this unit broadly relates to International Second Language Proficiency Ratings (ISLPR) 3.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to all industry contexts and individuals working at many different levels of responsibility. This could include frontline, supervisory or management personnel.

This unit may be customised for training delivery and assessment of proficiency in any language. For reporting purposes, recognition is limited to those languages listed below which are of importance to the tourism industry. A specific code has been allocated for each of these languages. Each language must be indicated in brackets after the unit title.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- literacy skills in a language other than English to:
  - read and interpret documents to:
    - identify purpose, main ideas, key issues and facts, writer attitude and mood
    - determine type of response and action required
  - write routine workplace documents using appropriate language and cultural conventions.

Required knowledge

- linguistic knowledge and writing conventions for the language being assessed, including:
  - grammar, spelling and punctuation conventions
  - features specific to the language, including vocabulary and sentence structure
- technical vocabulary required to support specific workplace activities.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the ability to:

- read and write workplace information in a language other than English:
  - understand and identify document purpose, main ideas, key issues, facts, attitude and tone of written texts (some use of a dictionary may be made but infrequently)
  - understand meaning with reasonable accuracy when reading texts related to straightforward everyday situations
  - use linguistic knowledge and skills to communicate meaning effectively in routine workplace documents (some errors may occur in writing, provided facts are not distorted and meaning is clear):
    - answering queries about products and services
    - conducting simple product and service transactions

- providing factual information
- responding to requests for general assistance and factual information.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure use of:

- a real or simulated workplace activity where written communication in languages other than English is required
- industry materials, such as routine reports, workplace documents and informational materials written in languages other than English.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- review of written communications prepared by the individual
- written or oral questioning to assess the individual's ability to read and interpret workplace documents written in a language other than English
- written or oral questioning to assess cultural knowledge and cross-cultural communication considerations
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment

The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example:

- SITTTSL304 Prepare quotations
- SITTTSL307 Process travel-related documentation.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Routine and non-routine workplace documents required to be read and understood may include:

- brochures and promotional material
- conference programs
- correspondence:
  - emails

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to read and write workplace information in a language other than English. It covers reading a range of documents and writing routine documents, such as letters and brief reports.

The unit does not cover interpreting and translating skills, which are described in units of competency in the PSP04 Public Sector Training Package.

There is no direct parity with any formal language proficiency ratings or assessment framework, but this unit broadly relates to International Second Language Proficiency Ratings (ISLPR) 3.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to all industry contexts and individuals working at many different levels of responsibility. This could include frontline, supervisory or management personnel.

This unit may be customised for training delivery and assessment of proficiency in any language. For reporting purposes, recognition is limited to those languages listed below which are of importance to the tourism industry. A specific code has been allocated for each of these languages. Each language must be indicated in brackets after the unit title.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- literacy skills in a language other than English to:
  - read and interpret documents to:
    - identify purpose, main ideas, key issues and facts, writer attitude and mood
    - determine type of response and action required
  - write routine workplace documents using appropriate language and cultural conventions.

Required knowledge

- linguistic knowledge and writing conventions for the language being assessed, including:
  - grammar, spelling and punctuation conventions
  - features specific to the language, including vocabulary and sentence structure
- technical vocabulary required to support specific workplace activities.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the ability to:

- read and write workplace information in a language other than English:
  - understand and identify document purpose, main ideas, key issues, facts, attitude and tone of written texts (some use of a dictionary may be made but infrequently)
  - understand meaning with reasonable accuracy when reading texts related to straightforward everyday situations
  - use linguistic knowledge and skills to communicate meaning effectively in routine workplace documents (some errors may occur in writing, provided facts are not distorted and meaning is clear):
    - answering queries about products and services
    - conducting simple product and service transactions

- providing factual information
- responding to requests for general assistance and factual information.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure use of:

- a real or simulated workplace activity where written communication in languages other than English is required
- industry materials, such as routine reports, workplace documents and informational materials written in languages other than English.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- review of written communications prepared by the individual
- written or oral questioning to assess the individual's ability to read and interpret workplace documents written in a language other than English
- written or oral questioning to assess cultural knowledge and cross-cultural communication considerations
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment

The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example:

- SITTTSL304 Prepare quotations
- SITTTSL307 Process travel-related documentation.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Routine and non-routine workplace documents required to be read and understood may include:

- brochures and promotional material
- conference programs
- correspondence:
  - emails

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to read and write workplace information in a language other than English. It covers reading a range of documents and writing routine documents, such as letters and brief reports.

The unit does not cover interpreting and translating skills, which are described in units of competency in the PSP04 Public Sector Training Package.

There is no direct parity with any formal language proficiency ratings or assessment framework, but this unit broadly relates to International Second Language Proficiency Ratings (ISLPR) 3.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to all industry contexts and individuals working at many different levels of responsibility. This could include frontline, supervisory or management personnel.

This unit may be customised for training delivery and assessment of proficiency in any language. For reporting purposes, recognition is limited to those languages listed below which are of importance to the tourism industry. A specific code has been allocated for each of these languages. Each language must be indicated in brackets after the unit title.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- literacy skills in a language other than English to:
  - read and interpret documents to:
    - identify purpose, main ideas, key issues and facts, writer attitude and mood
    - determine type of response and action required
  - write routine workplace documents using appropriate language and cultural conventions.

Required knowledge

- linguistic knowledge and writing conventions for the language being assessed, including:
  - grammar, spelling and punctuation conventions
  - features specific to the language, including vocabulary and sentence structure
- technical vocabulary required to support specific workplace activities.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the ability to:

- read and write workplace information in a language other than English:
  - understand and identify document purpose, main ideas, key issues, facts, attitude and tone of written texts (some use of a dictionary may be made but infrequently)
  - understand meaning with reasonable accuracy when reading texts related to straightforward everyday situations
  - use linguistic knowledge and skills to communicate meaning effectively in routine workplace documents (some errors may occur in writing, provided facts are not distorted and meaning is clear):
    - answering queries about products and services
    - conducting simple product and service transactions

- providing factual information
- responding to requests for general assistance and factual information.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure use of:

- a real or simulated workplace activity where written communication in languages other than English is required
- industry materials, such as routine reports, workplace documents and informational materials written in languages other than English.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- review of written communications prepared by the individual
- written or oral questioning to assess the individual's ability to read and interpret workplace documents written in a language other than English
- written or oral questioning to assess cultural knowledge and cross-cultural communication considerations
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment

The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example:

- SITTTSL304 Prepare quotations
- SITTTSL307 Process travel-related documentation.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Routine and non-routine workplace documents required to be read and understood may include:

- brochures and promotional material
- conference programs
- correspondence:
  - emails

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to read and write workplace information in a language other than English. It covers reading a range of documents and writing routine documents, such as letters and brief reports.

The unit does not cover interpreting and translating skills, which are described in units of competency in the PSP04 Public Sector Training Package.

There is no direct parity with any formal language proficiency ratings or assessment framework, but this unit broadly relates to International Second Language Proficiency Ratings (ISLPR) 3.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to all industry contexts and individuals working at many different levels of responsibility. This could include frontline, supervisory or management personnel.

This unit may be customised for training delivery and assessment of proficiency in any language. For reporting purposes, recognition is limited to those languages listed below which are of importance to the tourism industry. A specific code has been allocated for each of these languages. Each language must be indicated in brackets after the unit title.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- literacy skills in a language other than English to:
  - read and interpret documents to:
    - identify purpose, main ideas, key issues and facts, writer attitude and mood
    - determine type of response and action required
  - write routine workplace documents using appropriate language and cultural conventions.

Required knowledge

- linguistic knowledge and writing conventions for the language being assessed, including:
  - grammar, spelling and punctuation conventions
  - features specific to the language, including vocabulary and sentence structure
- technical vocabulary required to support specific workplace activities.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the ability to:

- read and write workplace information in a language other than English:
  - understand and identify document purpose, main ideas, key issues, facts, attitude and tone of written texts (some use of a dictionary may be made but infrequently)
  - understand meaning with reasonable accuracy when reading texts related to straightforward everyday situations
  - use linguistic knowledge and skills to communicate meaning effectively in routine workplace documents (some errors may occur in writing, provided facts are not distorted and meaning is clear):
    - answering queries about products and services
    - conducting simple product and service transactions

- providing factual information
- responding to requests for general assistance and factual information.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure use of:

- a real or simulated workplace activity where written communication in languages other than English is required
- industry materials, such as routine reports, workplace documents and informational materials written in languages other than English.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- review of written communications prepared by the individual
- written or oral questioning to assess the individual's ability to read and interpret workplace documents written in a language other than English
- written or oral questioning to assess cultural knowledge and cross-cultural communication considerations
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment

The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example:

- SITTTSL304 Prepare quotations
- SITTTSL307 Process travel-related documentation.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Routine and non-routine workplace documents required to be read and understood may include:

- brochures and promotional material
- conference programs
- correspondence:
  - emails

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to read and write workplace information in a language other than English. It covers reading a range of documents and writing routine documents, such as letters and brief reports.

The unit does not cover interpreting and translating skills, which are described in units of competency in the PSP04 Public Sector Training Package.

There is no direct parity with any formal language proficiency ratings or assessment framework, but this unit broadly relates to International Second Language Proficiency Ratings (ISLPR) 3.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to all industry contexts and individuals working at many different levels of responsibility. This could include frontline, supervisory or management personnel.

This unit may be customised for training delivery and assessment of proficiency in any language. For reporting purposes, recognition is limited to those languages listed below which are of importance to the tourism industry. A specific code has been allocated for each of these languages. Each language must be indicated in brackets after the unit title.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- literacy skills in a language other than English to:
  - read and interpret documents to:
    - identify purpose, main ideas, key issues and facts, writer attitude and mood
    - determine type of response and action required
  - write routine workplace documents using appropriate language and cultural conventions.

Required knowledge

- linguistic knowledge and writing conventions for the language being assessed, including:
  - grammar, spelling and punctuation conventions
  - features specific to the language, including vocabulary and sentence structure
- technical vocabulary required to support specific workplace activities.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the ability to:

- read and write workplace information in a language other than English:
  - understand and identify document purpose, main ideas, key issues, facts, attitude and tone of written texts (some use of a dictionary may be made but infrequently)
  - understand meaning with reasonable accuracy when reading texts related to straightforward everyday situations
  - use linguistic knowledge and skills to communicate meaning effectively in routine workplace documents (some errors may occur in writing, provided facts are not distorted and meaning is clear):
    - answering queries about products and services
    - conducting simple product and service transactions

- providing factual information
- responding to requests for general assistance and factual information.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure use of:

- a real or simulated workplace activity where written communication in languages other than English is required
- industry materials, such as routine reports, workplace documents and informational materials written in languages other than English.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- review of written communications prepared by the individual
- written or oral questioning to assess the individual's ability to read and interpret workplace documents written in a language other than English
- written or oral questioning to assess cultural knowledge and cross-cultural communication considerations
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.

Guidance information for assessment

The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example:

- SITTTSL304 Prepare quotations
- SITTTSL307 Process travel-related documentation.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Routine and non-routine workplace documents required to be read and understood may include:

- brochures and promotional material
- conference programs
- correspondence:
  - emails

Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure use of: • a real or simulated workplace activity where written communication in languages other than English is required • industry documents, such as reports and promotional materials written in languages other than English.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • review of written communications prepared by the individual • written and oral questioning to assess the individual's ability to interpret workplace documents • written or oral questioning to assess cultural knowledge and cross-cultural communication considerations • written or oral questioning to assess linguistic knowledge, generic structure and other specific language features, such as vocabulary and sentence structure • review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the individual.
Guidance information for assessment	The assessor should design integrated assessment activities to holistically assess this unit with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role, for example: • BSBWRT401A Write complex documents • SITTTSL304 Prepare quotations • SITTTSL307 Process travel-related documentation.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Workplace documents to be read and informally interpreted may include:	• brochures and promotional material • conference programs • correspondence

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to read and write a range of workplace documents in a language other than English at a high level of complexity and fluency, including summarising texts, and reproducing information from texts in one language to prepare a text in another.

The unit does not cover interpreting and translating skills, which are described in units of competency in the PSP04 Public Sector Training Package.

There is no direct parity with any formal language proficiency ratings or assessment framework, but this unit broadly relates to International Second Language Proficiency Ratings (ISLPR) 4 to 4+.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to all industry contexts and to individuals working at different levels of responsibility. This could include frontline, supervisory or management personnel.

This unit may be customised for training delivery and assessment of proficiency in any language. For reporting purposes, recognition is limited to those languages listed below which are of importance to the tourism industry. A specific code has been allocated for each of these languages. Each language must be indicated in brackets after the unit title.
