Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to run a business operation and covers the steps required to develop and implement a business plan. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals who are running an organisation or who take a senior role in determining the effective functioning and success of the organisation. As such, they may oversee the work of a number of teams and other managers. Business plans are critical tools for business growth and development. They will vary depending on the needs of the organisation. This unit covers the typical elements of a business plan and the standard approaches to be used in implementing a business plan. The business plan should be supported by a strategic plan, and may also be supported by a marketing plan and cash flow forecasts.

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
4. Gather data and information from respondents	4.1. Prepare and arrange resources for data gathering 4.2. Gather data and information using survey tools 4.3. Record data and information gathered in approved formats, in accordance with organisational procedures 4.4. Store and safeguard survey information and data in accordance with organisational procedures
5. Analyse research information	5.1. Conduct checks on quality of data and information collected 5.2. Select appropriate techniques to summarise data and information 5.3. Design software files for entering data and information 5.4. Process data using a method appropriate to research design 5.5. Interpret and aggregate data and information including categorisation, to provide observations relevant to research objectives
6. Prepare research reports	6.1. Collate and assess findings for relevance and usefulness to research objectives 6.2. Prepare research reports 6.3. Communicate research findings to relevant personnel and stakeholders in accordance with organisational procedures

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- culturally appropriate communication skills to relate to people from diverse backgrounds and people with diverse abilities
- information management skills to categorise, store and retrieve market research information
- innovation and creativity skills to conceptualise, test and refine qualitative and quantitative questionnaires and other tools
- literacy skills to prepare reports containing complex ideas

  • use of survey instruments
• requirements of house or other style manuals or protocols for written communication.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • developing and implementing a market research survey tool • accurately recording and securely storing survey data in accordance with organisational procedures

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

EVIDENCE GUIDE
	• utilising a range of methodologies to analyse market research information • documenting market research activities and findings in a research report.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to office equipment and resources including computer hardware and software • access to exemplar survey tools and recently used survey tools.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios • analysis of survey tools • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • observation of data collection techniques • observation of presentations of market research results • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge and understanding • review of authenticated documents from the workplace or training environment • review of testimony from team members, colleagues, supervisors or managers.

BSBMKG409A Design direct response offers

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to design, implement and evaluate direct response offers which match organisational business and marketing objectives and resolve marketing problems. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals working in a marketing assistant or account manager role who are required to design direct marketing offers for products or services. Such individuals may work in small, medium or large enterprises across a variety of industries; they usually work with a team and customers to design offers. Direct response offers include payment related promises such as offers in relation to exchanging goods and services for money; terms of payment; performance and quality guarantees; delivery method; and time, place and method of order placement. Offers may also be made that do not involve payment matters, such as the offer of a free brochure or catalogue in return for providing a name and address.

3. Select offer pricing structure	3.1. Evaluate factors affecting pricing to determine normal or average selling price of offer 3.2. Determine short-term pricing strategies 3.3. Select payment term options
4. Determine and design required customer service levels	4.1. Design process that ensures accepted offers are fulfilled promptly 4.2. Develop procedures to ensure prompt answers to queries and complaints regarding product or service 4.3. Ensure access to instant, accurate information about status of delivery of products or services and customer accounts, including after-hours, to provide enhanced customer service

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- creativity and innovation skills to design a range of direct response offers which elicit interest and response from customers
- culturally appropriate communication skills to relate to people from diverse backgrounds and people with diverse abilities
- interpersonal skills to build relationships with clients
- numeracy skills to determine pricing of offers
- organisational and time management skills to sequence tasks and to meet time lines
- problem-solving skills to provide solutions to customer requirements and to solve organisational direct marketing problems

Required knowledge

- teamwork skills to develop and refine direct response offers in response to customer feedback
- technology skills to use a range of office equipment (telephones, internet) and software (databases) to formulate and refine direct response offers.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • designing and testing a range of direct response offers which meet organisational marketing objectives • developing a pricing structure, customer service levels and relevant support materials for at least one product or service • presenting a direct response offer for a product or service.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to office equipment and resources.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios • assessment of examples of direct response offers • demonstration of design, testing and refinement techniques • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • observation of presentations • oral or written questioning • review of authenticated documents from the workplace or training environment • review of testimony from team members, colleagues, supervisors or managers • tests of knowledge on offer component, offer type, pricing structure, customer service and creative options for direct response offers.

BSBMKG410A Test direct marketing activities

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to design, construct and implement a direct marketing test program, analyse its outcomes, and act upon its findings in order to increase the likely success of direct marketing activities. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals working in a marketing assistant or account manager role who are required to design and test direct marketing activities in relation to a product or service. They may work in small, medium or large enterprises in a variety of industries and typically undertake controlled experiments to test direct marketing activities before designing and implementing the activity. The results of such testing can be analysed to predict the likely success of the proposed direct marketing activities. Direct marketing experiments may include testing the offer, media, communication, timing or response components of direct marketing activities.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to strategically manage the marketing process and marketing personnel within an organisation. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to senior marketing professionals who are responsible for managing the overall marketing process of an organisation and for managing marketing personnel. Typically they would manage a portfolio of products or services across the organisation, rather than a single product or few products. This unit targets more senior personnel who have a wider scope of marketing activities for a greater number of products or services, than BSBMKG514A Implement and monitor marketing activities.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to evaluate the international environment, to identify market factors and risks, and to assess the viability of international marketing opportunities. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to senior marketing or management personnel who are required to evaluate the international business environment in preparation for entering an international or export market for the first time, or to identify new marketing opportunities in markets in which their organisation already has a presence. This unit is different to BSBMKG501B Identify and evaluate marketing opportunities, which applies to senior marketing or general managers evaluating domestic marketing opportunities. While the underlying principles of the units are similar, this unit covers the increased complexity of the global business environment, and the cultural differences and international trade agreements to be addressed when conducting business internationally.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to conduct a strategic analysis to develop organisational marketing objectives. This involves reviewing the organisation's internal and external environments, evaluating past and current marketing performance, and exploring and evaluating new marketing opportunities. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to senior marketing professionals who are responsible for providing strategic direction to the marketing function of an organisation. Their responsibilities include analysing information on the internal and external business and marketing environment; examining current marketing performance; identifying new marketing opportunities arising from emerging trends; and devising strategies to achieve overall business objectives. Individuals operating at this level will generally conduct these activities using information gathered by people working under their direct and indirect supervision at lower levels of the organisation. This unit should be assessed either before or in conjunction with BSBMKG609A Develop a marketing plan, which covers the skills and knowledge to devise specific marketing strategies and tactics arising from formulation of marketing objectives.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
1. Contribute to the development of OHS hazard control options	1.1. Apply knowledge of OHS legislation, codes of practice, standards, regulations and workplace policies and procedures to contribute to the development of hazard controls 1.2. Apply principles of the hierarchy of control to identified hazards 1.3. Initiate the use of OHS specialists and technical advisors, where required, to assist in hazard identification and development of hazard controls for areas outside own expertise
2. Contribute to the selection of hazard control options	2.1. Determine the selection of hazard controls with relevant others 2.2. Determine the prioritisation of hazard controls with relevant others 2.3. Provide opportunities for employees to become involved in hazard control options 2.4. Identify and report factors impeding successful implementation of selected hazard controls 2.5. Provide information about selected hazard controls to stakeholders
3. Contribute to the implementation of hazard controls	3.1. Contribute to obtaining resources required to implement selected hazard controls 3.2. Contribute to the development and documentation of actions required to implement hazard controls 3.3. Communicate with stakeholders affected by hazard controls in a timely and clear manner

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills

• communication skills to contribute effectively on the selection of hazard controls and the selection of hazard controls
• culturally appropriate communication skills to relate to people with diverse backgrounds and people with diverse abilities and OHS roles in the workplace
• organisational and time management skills to sequence tasks and meet timelines
• literacy skills to prepare summary reports and memos for a range of target groups including:
  • employees
  • OHS committees
  • OHS representatives
  • managers
  • supervisors.

Required knowledge
• codes of practice and standard industry controls for a range of hazards • concept of risk and factors that affect risk • difference between a hazard and a risk • formal and informal communication processes and key personnel related to communication • hazard control options • hierarchy of control and considerations for choosing between different control measures such as possible inadequacies of particular control measures • how the characteristics and composition of the workforce impact on risk • incident investigation procedures • internal and external sources of information about OHS information and data • key personnel in the workplace • limitations of generic hazard and risk checklists and risk ranking processes • nature of workplace processes and hazards relevant to the workplace

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
• organisational design and structure • organisational policies and procedures regarding OHS • potential effects and likely consequences to people, materials, equipment, work practices and environment if risks associated with OHS hazards in the workplace are realised • principles of incident causation and injury processes • relevant state/territory and commonwealth OHS legislation, codes of practice, standards and guidance material • requirements for individual fitting, use, maintenance and storage of personal protective equipment (PPE) • types and characteristics of major physical, chemical, biological, radiological, nuclear, mechanical, psychosocial and environmental hazards which may be present in the workplace.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • contribution to the development, selection and implementation of OHS hazard control options in a workplace • knowledge of relevant state/territory and commonwealth OHS legislation, codes of practice, standards and guidance material.

Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure:
	• access to relevant information on OHS compliance requirements such as:
	  • organisational policies, standard operating procedures, procedures and plans
	  • relevant legislation, regulations, licensing requirements, codes of practice, standards
	• access to relevant internal and external data files.

Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios • assessment of documentation completed when controlling hazards • demonstration of the application of hazard control techniques • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of requirements for individual fitting, use, maintenance and storage of PPE • review of information provided to stakeholders about selected hazard controls • evaluation of communications with stakeholders affected by hazard controls.

Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • other OHS units.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Hazard controls may include:	• actions taken to eliminate hazards entirely
	• actions taken to minimise the risks associated with the hazard by:
	  • substituting another product or process to replace the hazard
	  • isolating the hazard
	  • using engineering controls
	  • improving administrative controls such as

RANGE STATEMENT

	changing policies, procedures or providing training
	• using PPE such as:
	  • head protection
	  • face and eye protection
	  • respiratory protection
	  • hearing protection
	  • hand protection
	  • clothing and footwear

Principles of the hierarchy of hazard control include:	• eliminating hazards
	• and where this is not practicable, minimising risk by:
	  • isolating hazard from personnel
	  • substitution
	  • using administrative controls (e.g. procedures, training)
	  • using engineering controls
	  • using PPE

Hazards may include:	• sources of potential harm in terms of human injury or ill health, damage to property, damage to the environment, or a combination of these, including:
	  • physical
	  • mechanical and/or electrical
	  • chemical
	  • biological
	  • psychosocial
	  • radiological
	  • nuclear
	  • environmental

OHS specialists and technical advisors may include:	• employees who have an OHS role and responsibilities
	• OHS specialists and testers such as:
	  • audiologists
	  • ergonomists
	  • health professionals
	  • occupational health professionals
	  • occupational hygienists
	  • safety engineers

RANGE STATEMENT

	• safety professionals
	• toxicologists
	• OHS technical advisors such as:
	  • engineers (design, acoustic, safety, mechanical and civil)
	  • maintenance and tradespeople
	  • safety representatives, inspectors and officers
	• workplace assessors with experience in language or disability issues

Factors impeding successful implementation of selected hazard controls may include:	• access to technology or information • an unsupportive workplace culture • cultural differences arising from ethnic diversity • geographic dispersal of employees • issues arising around the workplace and specific disabilities • lack of a systematic approach to managing OHS in the workplace • lack of support from key management • language and literacy • language, literacy and numeracy levels • remote locations or worksites • rosters or shift work • shift work and rostering arrangements • unrealistic timeframes • workplace organisational structures

Communication with stakeholders may include:	• contribution to development of policies and procedures
	• employee meetings
	• interviews and discussions
	• issue resolution meetings
	• memos
	• presentations to:
	  • external investigators
	  • inspectors
	  • consultants
	  • OHS specialists
	  • technical advisors
	• presentations to OHS committees

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to effectively contribute to the application of a systematic approach to managing occupational health and safety (OHS) to ensure that the workplace is, as far as is practicable, safe and without risks to the health of employees and others. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals with supervisory responsibilities for implementing and monitoring the organisation's OHS policies, procedures and programs in a work area. It includes contributing to the implementation of developed strategies, systems and plans, as well as recognising the need for expert advice. The unit may apply both in a work unit of a large organisation or in a small to medium enterprise.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
1. Contribute to the implementation of information and data systems	1.1. Identify and address requirements for record keeping 1.2. Identify, access and evaluate sources of OHS information and data for application in the workplace 1.3. Take actions to ensure that records are accurately completed, collected and stored 1.4. Provide information and data to managers and stakeholders in a readily understood format 1.5. Monitor and evaluate the effectiveness of recordkeeping actions taken
2. Contribute to the implementation of OHS strategies, systems and plans	2.1. Determine OHS priorities in consultation with appropriate managers and in line with other consultative arrangements in the workplace 2.2. Develop OHS action plans taking account of priorities 2.3. Identify and document OHS training needs

	2.4. Monitor action plans for achievement, and update as required 2.5. Seek input from OHS specialists and technical advisors if required
3. Support integration of OHS within the overall management approach	3.1. Identify other functional areas that impact on OHS 3.2. Implement strategies for addressing these impacts 3.3. Work with managers and stakeholders as appropriate to implement OHS action plans
4. Identify OHS implications of proposed changes to the workplace and provide advice to control risks	4.1. Evaluate proposed changes to the workplace for OHS implications 4.2. Identify resulting hazards and assess potential risks 4.3. Provide appropriate advice to control risks and action as appropriate
5. Identify implications of all sources of change to managing OHS and provide advice regarding those changes	5.1. Identify and evaluate changes to relevant legislation for implications for managing OHS 5.2. Identify and evaluate changes to relevant standards or industry practice for implications for managing OHS 5.3. Monitor sources of information and data for impact on hazards, risks and the management of OHS 5.4. Provide appropriate advice to address impact of change
6. Evaluate effectiveness of the approach to managing OHS	6.1. Access sources of external and internal OHS information and data as part of evaluation 6.2. Identify the need for any external input to evaluation and action as appropriate 6.3. Consult stakeholders for input to the evaluation 6.4. Identify, document and action areas for improvement

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • contribution to the implementation of a systematic approach to managing OHS • knowledge of relevant state/territory and commonwealth OHS legislation, codes of practice and standards.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to office equipment and resources • access to relevant legislation, standards, codes of practice and guidelines • access to workplace documentation.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios • demonstration of techniques used to manage OHS in the workplace • demonstration of the application of OHS legislation in implementing a systematic approach to managing OHS • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of principles relating to: hazard identification, hierarchy of control, risk management, systematic approaches to OHS • review of OHS action plans, documented OHS training needs and documented action areas for improvement.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example:

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Requirements for record keeping may include:	• OHS legislation and regulations governing reporting of incidents and maintenance of records related to specific hazards, including:
	  • chemical registers
	  • material safety data sheets (MSDSs)
	• organisational procedures
	• privacy legislation

Sources of OHS information and data may include:	• consultants • employees • government departments/agencies including OHS authorities and organisations such as the Office of the Australian Safety and Compensation Council • industry networks and associations • internet sites • manufacturers' manuals and specifications • newspapers and journals, trade/industry publications • OHS and other relevant legislation • OHS specialists • technical data
Consultative arrangements may include:	• employee and supervisor involvement in OHS activities, such as inspections and audits • employee and workgroup meetings • health and safety and other employee representatives • OHS and other consultative and planning committees

• research and data analysis skills to evaluate interactions between employees, their activities, equipment, environment and work systems • technology skills to access internal and external OHS data.
Required knowledge

• appropriate data collection methods for OHS purposes
• characteristics, mode of action and measurement of major hazard types
• concepts of risks, factors that affect risk and difference between a hazard and a risk
• internal and external sources for OHS information and data
• legislative requirements for:
  • consultation and communication
  • information and data collection
  • notification of incidents
  • record keeping
  • reporting of incidents
  • specific hazards
• organisational culture as it impacts on the workgroup
• organisational policies and procedures for managing OHS
• organisational work processes and structure
• principles and practices of systematic approaches to managing OHS
• principles of incident causation and injury processes
• principles of the hierarchy of control
• principles, tools and techniques to identify and control workplace hazards and manage risks in the OHS context
• relevant state/territory and commonwealth OHS legislation, codes of practice and standards
• requirements for individual fitting, use, maintenance and storage of a range of PPE items
• roles and responsibilities of personnel as specified in relevant OHS legislation
• sources of OHS data
• standard industry controls for a range of hazards.

EVIDENCE GUIDE
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • contribution to the development and implementation of risk control options to control risks associated with hazards in the workplace or simulated environment • contribution to the monitoring and evaluation of the effectiveness of risk controls implemented and the making of appropriate adjustments where necessary • knowledge of the principles of the hierarchy of control.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to office equipment and resources • access to relevant legislation, standards and guidelines • access to workplace documentation.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios • demonstration of techniques used to select, implement, monitor and evaluate risk controls • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • observation of the application of risk control techniques • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of the principles, tools and techniques to identify and control workplace hazards and manage risks in the OHS context • review of communication to stakeholders of recommendations for risk control • review of documented compliance with new procedures • evaluation of improvement plan.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • BSBOHS403B Identify hazards and assess OHS

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Hazard register may include:	• a list of hazards • location of hazards • range of possible scenarios or circumstances under which hazards may cause injury or damage • results of the risk analysis related to the hazards

Hazards may include:	• sources of potential harm in terms of human injury, ill health, damage to property, damage to the environment, or a combination of these, including:
	  • biological
	  • chemical
	  • environment
	  • mechanical and/or electrical
	  • physical
	  • psychosocial
	  • radiological
	  • nuclear

Risks may include:	• the chance of something occurring that will result in injury or damage measured in terms of consequences (injury or damage) and likelihood of the consequence
Principles of the hierarchy of control may include:	• eliminating hazards • and where this is not practicable, minimising risk by: • substitution

RANGE STATEMENT
	• isolating hazard from personnel • using engineering controls • using administrative controls (such as procedures, training) • using PPE
Stakeholders may include:	• community • employees • health and safety, and other employee representatives • managers • OHS committees • supervisors
Key personnel may include:	• managers from other areas • people involved in OHS decision making or who are impacted by decisions
OHS specialists may include:	• ergonomists • health professionals • injury management advisors • occupational hygienists
Technical advisors may include:	• engineers (design, acoustic, safety, mechanical, civil) • legal practitioners • maintenance and tradespeople • workplace trainers and assessors
Factors that may limit effectiveness of controls may include:	• cultural diversity • language • literacy and numeracy • shift work and rostering arrangements • training required • workplace culture related to OHS, including commitment by managers and supervisors, and compliance with procedures and training • workplace organisational structures (for example geographic, hierarchical)
Actions required to achieve change may include:	• development of new procedures or revision of existing procedures • purchase of equipment or modification of equipment • training
Personal protective equipment	• equipment designed to be worn by a person to

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to contribute to the implementation of planning and response procedures for emergencies. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals with supervisory responsibilities for managing occupational health and safety (OHS) in the workplace who contribute to the implementation of procedures for responding to emergencies. The unit assumes that expert advice will be available in identifying potential emergencies and in formulating the response plans. As the unit focuses on implementation of procedures already developed for short term emergency responses, it is less complex than BSBOHS508B Participate in the investigation of incidents, which has a greater scope both in situations addressed and the timeframe for action. Contributions to the actions to control OHS risks are covered in BSBOHS404B Contribute to the implementation of strategies to control OHS risk.

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
1. Identify potential emergencies	1.1. Apply knowledge of OHS hazards and standards to identify causes of potential emergencies 1.2. Seek input of stakeholders in identifying potential emergencies 1.3. Identify and liaise with appropriate specialist advisors and emergency agencies to identify causes of potential emergencies 1.4. Develop a risk register to identify potential emergencies and their causes
2. Identify options for initial response	2.1. Categorise major types of emergencies 2.2. Identify actions required to contain or limit potential emergencies 2.3. Identify actions required to limit impact on

	personnel, property and the environment 2.4. Identify requirements for liaison with emergency agencies 2.5. Prioritise actions to be taken during emergencies
3. Plan initial response procedures	3.1. Identify resources available and required for immediate response 3.2. Check emergency equipment to ensure serviceability, accessibility, cleanliness and correct location 3.3. Document actions required for a number of major types of emergency, taking account of standards, current industry practice, specialist advice and input by emergency agencies 3.4. Identify training needs and appropriate providers
4. Implement initial response procedures	4.1. Document and display actions for initial response 4.2. Understand and implement own role in emergency response
5. Contribute to post event activities	5.1. Identify and support other personnel in the second response phase 5.2. Make contributions to debriefing processes
6. Monitor emergency response and address deficiencies	6.1. Monitor responses to emergencies for efficiency and timeliness, in consultation with stakeholders and, as appropriate, specialist advisors and agencies 6.2. Document, and promptly and appropriately report results of monitoring to managers and key personnel 6.3. Identify areas for organisational and personal improvement and make recommendations for improvement in response to analysis of response taken

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills
• culturally appropriate communication skills to relate to people from diverse backgrounds and people with diverse abilities across all levels of an organisation

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- interpersonal skills to issue instructions in an authoritative manner during unusual circumstances
- literacy skills to prepare reports for a range of target groups
- observation skills to evaluate the impact characteristics and composition of the workforce have on managing OHS
- organisational and time management skills to sequence tasks and meet timelines
- research and data analysis skills to assess resources required to systematically manage OHS and to analyse relevant workplace information and data
- research and data analysis skills to evaluate interactions between employees, their activities, equipment, environment and work systems
- technology skills to access internal and external OHS data.

Required knowledge

- basic emergency prevention controls typically installed in a workplace, such as:
  - emergency alerting systems
  - emergency protection systems
  - fire and smoke alarms, and fire extinguishers
  - required safety wear
  - security systems
- emergency alerting systems and signals used in the workplace and their meanings
- enterprise physical site and work areas
- enterprise reporting procedures in an emergency
- essential actions of self and others in an emergency
- hazards and precautions to be taken during an emergency
- hazards arising from evacuation
- information needs of emergency response personnel during reporting, arrival and response to an emergency
- OHS information needs of work unit or work team
- internal and external sources of OHS information and data
- organisational policies and procedures for OHS and acting in an emergency situation
- organisational structure, roles and responsibilities
- powers of safety representatives and other authorised OHS personnel to cease work immediately if an immediate danger to OHS exists
- principles and priorities for evacuation, checking and accounting for people
- principles of fire protection and emergency response
- relevant state/territory and commonwealth OHS legislation, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material
- roles, responsibilities and authority of OHS personnel
- types of emergency responses typically used in workplaces.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to accurately use equipment to contribute to the monitoring of agents and/or conditions in the workplace including, but not be limited to noise, vibration, light, fibres, dusts, fumes, mists, heat and humidity, radiation, and biological agents such as insects, mites and bacteria. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals who contribute to the monitoring of agents and/or conditions in the workplace by using a range of measuring devices to identify hazards, assess risk and monitor the effectiveness of risk controls. Measurement of ergonomic factors and their impact on the human body has been excluded from this unit. This unit does not extend to interpreting results and developing control measures based on the outcomes of the monitoring, as this is addressed in BSBOHS404B Contribute to the implementation of strategies to control OHS risk.

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

Required skills

- literacy skills to prepare reports for a range of target groups
- organisational and time management skills to sequence tasks and meet timelines
- research and data analysis skills to assess resources required to systematically manage OHS and to analyse relevant workplace information and data
- research and data analysis skills to evaluate interactions between employees, their activities, equipment, environment and work systems
- technology skills to access internal and external OHS data
- evaluation skills to systematically manage required OHS resources and where appropriate access these resources
- analysis skills to evaluate relevant workplace information and data and to recognise limitations of data
- numeracy skills to carry out simple arithmetical calculations and to produce graphs of workplace data to identify trends
- technical skills to use basic measuring equipment and to read scales and dials applicable to selected hazards
- analysis skills to interpret results from workplace measurements
- maintenance skills to maintain equipment used for workplace monitoring
- investigate skills to recognise that health effects could be due to microbiological hazards and the need to refer to specialist advice and support.

Required knowledge

- basic physiology relevant to understanding mode of action of physical, biological and chemical agents on the body and how they produce discomfort or harm
- characteristics, mode of action and units of measurement of major hazard types
- environmental conditions that impact on measurements
- exposure standards, their limitations and their practical use
- mathematical knowledge of units of measurement, logarithmic scales, decimals and order of magnitude relevant to making and interpreting measurements and measurement error
- nature of workplace processes (including work flow, planning and control) and hazards relevant to the particular workplace
- requirements for individual fitting, use, maintenance and storage of a range of OHS equipment
- requirements for reporting under OHS and other relevant legislation including obligations for notification and reporting of incidents
- requirements for work permits/written authorities when conducting workplace monitoring activities
- requirements under hazard specific OHS legislation and codes of practice
- sampling techniques and developing valid sampling process
- state/territory and commonwealth OHS legislation (acts, regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material) including prescriptive and

	2.4. Promptly record and communicate to the workgroup the outcomes of consultation over OHS issues
3. Implement and monitor the organisation's procedures for providing OHS training	3.1. Systematically identify OHS training needs in line with organisational requirements 3.2. Make arrangements to meet OHS training needs of team members in consultation with relevant individuals 3.3. Provide workplace learning opportunities, and coaching and mentoring assistance to facilitate team and individual achievement of identified training needs 3.4. Identify and report to management the costs associated with providing training for work team, for inclusion in financial plans
4. Implement and monitor procedures for identifying hazards and assessing risks	4.1. Identify and report on hazards in work area in accordance with OHS policies and procedures 4.2. Promptly action team member hazard reports in accordance with organisational procedures
5. Implement and monitor the organisation's procedures for controlling risks	5.1. Implement procedures to control risks using the hierarchy of controls and organisational requirements 5.2. Identify and report inadequacies in existing risk control measures in accordance with the hierarchy of controls 5.3. Monitor outcomes of reported inadequacies, where appropriate, to ensure a prompt organisational response
6. Implement and monitor the organisation's procedures for maintaining OHS records for the team	6.1. Accurately complete and maintain OHS records of incidents of occupational injury and disease in work area in accordance with OHS legal requirements 6.2. Use aggregate information and data from work area records to identify hazards and monitor risk control procedures in work area

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
Required skills
• analytical skills to identify hazards, to assess risks in the work area and to review data relating to monitoring and evaluating incidents (accidents), environmental issues and the effectiveness of risk control measures • literacy skills to comprehend documentation and to interpret OHS requirements • coaching and mentoring skills to provide support to colleagues.
Required knowledge

• key provisions of relevant legislation from all levels of government that may affect aspects of business operations, such as:
  • anti-discrimination legislation
  • ethical principles
  • codes of practice
  • privacy laws
  • environmental issues
  • OHS
• legal responsibilities of employers, supervisors and employees in the workplace
• hazards and associated risks which exist in the workplace
• organisational policies and procedures relating to hazard management, fire, emergency, evacuation, incident (accident) investigating and reporting
• relevance of consultation as a key mechanism for improving workplace culture.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • applying organisational management systems and procedures to OHS within workgroup area • applying procedures for assessing and controlling risks to health and safety associated with those hazards, in accordance with the hierarchy of controls • providing specific, clear and accurate information and advice on workplace hazards to workgroup • knowledge of legal responsibilities of employers, supervisors and employees in the workplace.

Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to an actual workplace or simulated environment • access to office equipment and resources • examples of documentation relating to hazards in the work lace • examples of documents relating to workplace safety, hazard identification and risk assessment.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • review of records communicating the outcomes of consultation over OHS issues to the workgroup • analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios • demonstration of techniques • review of reports to management on the costs associated with providing training for the work team • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of workplace safety and hazards • examples of risk assessments • evaluation of actioning of team member hazard reports • review of OHS records of occupational injury and disease incidents in work area.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • management units • other OHS units.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
OHS legislation and codes of practice may include:	• common law duties to meet the general duty of care requirements • health and safety representatives and health and safety committees • prompt resolution of health and safety issues • provision of information, induction and training • regulations and approved codes of practice relating to hazards present in work area • relevant state/territory legislation • requirements for the maintenance and confidentiality of records of occupational injury and disease
Organisation's OHS policies, procedures and programs may include:	• consultative arrangements for employees in work area • dangerous goods transport and storage • emergency and evacuation procedures • first aid provision/medical practitioner contact and attention • hazard reporting procedures • hazardous substances use and storage • incident (accident) investigation • OHS arrangements for on site contractors, visitors and members of public • OHS audits and safety inspections • plant and equipment maintenance and use • procedures for hazard identification • procedures for risk assessment, selection and implementation of risk control measures • purchasing policy and procedures • safe operating procedures/instructions • site access • use and care of personal protective equipment

	• allocation of resources • communication and consultation • hazard management • planning • record keeping and reporting • review and evaluation for ongoing improvement • training and competency
OHS plan may include:	• a document that is usually developed annually but may be developed for a shorter or longer period and reviewed regularly • OHS performance indicators (i.e. objectives and targets that are achievable and practical) reflecting systematic approaches to managing OHS

Resources may include:	• financial requirement for implementation
	• personnel, including time allocation
	• equipment
	• specialised resources
	• access to other resources such as:
	  • OHS publications
	  • OHS internal sites
	  • industry-specific information

OHS specialists may include:	• ergonomists • injury management advisors • occupational health professionals • occupational hygienists
Technical advisors may include:	• engineers (such as design, acoustic, safety, mechanical and civil) • legal practitioners • maintenance and trades persons • workplace assessors and trainers
Policies and procedures may include:	• documents describing how tasks, projects, inspections, jobs and processes are to be undertaken • job/task statements • policies and procedures underpinning the management of OHS • purchasing and contracting procedures • quality system documentation

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to assist in designing and developing effective participative arrangements as an integral part of systematic approaches to managing occupational health and safety (OHS). This process will result in stakeholders having real opportunities to participate in OHS processes. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals with managerial responsibility for identifying, designing, developing and reviewing formal and informal processes to enable people to participate in OHS decision making. The unit also addresses influencing others from an OHS perspective and takes account of the responsibilities for managing OHS. This unit is underpinned by BSBOHS402B Contribute to the implementation of the OHS consultation process.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

1. Identify the need for OHS participative arrangements	1.1. Review OHS legislation to identify legal requirements for participative arrangements 1.2. Identify factors that may impact on the design of participative arrangements 1.3. Review organisational policies and procedures to identify requirements and opportunities for OHS consultation and communication 1.4. Review effectiveness of existing workplace arrangements, in consultation with stakeholders, for OHS consultation and communication 1.5. Define information and consultation requirements, in consultation with stakeholders and key personnel, for specific roles and groups
2. Assist in the design of participative arrangements	2.1. Design processes, in consultation with stakeholders, for providing required OHS information and data 2.2. Design processes, in consultation with stakeholders, to enable individuals and groups to be consulted regarding workplace OHS issues and to have input into OHS decision making 2.3. Identify and document training needs to enable effective participation 2.4. Review recommendations for participative arrangements, in consultation with stakeholders, to ensure they meet legislative requirements and are realistic, practical and acceptable in the workplace

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

3. Assist in developing participative arrangements	3.1. Develop policies and procedures for participative arrangements 3.2. Identify key personnel in the introduction and maintenance of participative arrangements 3.3. Develop strategies for the delivery of training 3.4. Identify and document resources necessary to introduce and maintain participative arrangements
4. Support the implementation of participative arrangements	4.1. Determine priorities for action in consultation with stakeholders 4.2. Develop action plans with allocated responsibilities and time lines 4.3. Provide advice and support to key personnel 4.4. Monitor implementation, in consultation with stakeholders, to ensure that participatory arrangements are effective in providing information and data to all groups and that they provide opportunity for participation in OHS decision making 4.5. Make recommendations for adjustments to the implementation as required
5. Evaluate the design and development of participative arrangements	5.1. Design the evaluation protocol in consultation with stakeholders 5.2. Develop a plan for collecting information and data 5.3. Analyse and evaluate information and data 5.4. Make recommendations for improvement in the participatory arrangements as a result of the evaluation findings 5.5. Provide a report to stakeholders and key personnel on the outcomes of the evaluation, and recommendations for further development and improvement 5.6. Seek feedback from stakeholders and develop an action plan for ongoing improvements

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- analytical skills to:
  - identify areas for improvement
  - analyse relevant workplace information and data, and to make observations of workplace tasks and interactions between people, their activities, equipment, environment and systems
  - contribute to the assessment of resources needed to systematically manage OHS and, where appropriate, access resources
- planning skills to apply continuous improvement and action planning processes
- research skills to access relevant OHS information and data
- numeracy skills to carry out simple arithmetical calculations (e.g. % change), and to produce graphs of workplace information and data to identify trends and recognise limitations
- communication skills to:
  - conduct effective formal and informal meetings and to communicate effectively with personnel at all levels of the organisation, OHS specialists and, as required, emergency services personnel
  - prepare reports for a range of target groups including OHS committee, OHS representatives, managers and supervisors
  - use language and literacy skills appropriate to the workgroup and the task
- consultation and negotiation skills to develop plans, and to implement and monitor designated actions
- project management skills to achieve change in OHS matters
- organisational skills to manage own tasks within a timeframe
- information technology skills to access and enter internal and external information and data on OHS, and to use a range of communication media.

Required knowledge

- concept of common law duty of care
- difference between common law and statutory law
- ethics related to professional practice
- formal and informal communication and consultation processes and key personnel related to communication
- how the characteristics and composition of the workforce impact on risk and the systematic approach to managing OHS, for example:

competency in this unit	• design and development of a participative approach to the management of workplace OHS • knowledge of relevant OHS legislation (acts, regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material).
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to workplace documentation and personnel • reports from other parties consulted in designing, implementing, managing and reviewing processes • access to relevant legislation, standards and guidelines.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • BSBOHS402B Contribute to the implementation of the OHS consultation process • other OHS units.

Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Participative arrangements are designed so that stakeholders are able to be involved in decision making that affects their health and safety. Participatory processes may include:	• employee and supervisor involvement in OHS activities, such as inspections and audits • health and safety, and other representatives • OHS and other consultative/planning committees • OHS included in management, staff and employee meetings • procedures for reporting hazards, and raising and addressing OHS issues
Factors that may impact on the design of participative arrangements include:	• language • shift work and rostering arrangements • timing of information and data provision • literacy and numeracy levels • workers with specific needs • workplace organisational structures (for example, size of organisation, geographic, hierarchical) • cultural diversity • management approach • workplace culture and approach to OHS by managers, supervisors and employees
Stakeholders include:	• managers • supervisors • employees • health and safety, and other employee representatives • OHS committees
Key personnel include:	• managers from other areas • people involved in OHS decision making or who are affected by OHS decisions
Training needs should be defined for:	• managers • supervisors • health and safety representatives

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to use a generic approach to identify hazards, and to assess and control occupational health and safety (OHS) risks. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals with managerial responsibility for providing a systematic approach to hazard identification, risk assessment and risk control, with the emphasis on elimination or, where this is not possible, minimisation of risk. It also includes conceptual models for understanding the nature of hazards. The unit provides a basis for the hazard specific competencies in BSBOHS505C Manage hazards in the work environment, and BSBOHS506B Monitor and facilitate the management of hazards associated with plant. This unit is underpinned by BSBOHS403B Identify hazards and assess OHS risks, and BSBOHS404B Contribute to the implementation of strategies to control OHS risk. A more advanced approach to risk assessment, which identifies the separate elements of risk analysis and risk evaluation, is provided in BSBOHS603B Analyse and evaluate OHS risk.

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
• roles and responsibilities under OHS legislation of employees, including supervisors and contractors • standard industry controls for a range of hazards • state/territory and commonwealth OHS legislation (acts, regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material) including prescriptive and performance approaches and links to other relevant legislation such as industrial relations, equal employment opportunity, workers compensation, rehabilitation • structure and forms of legislation including regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material • types of hazard identification tools, including job safety analysis (JSA)

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential:
	• products used in:
	  • the application of a risk management approach to identifying hazards
	  • assessing OHS risk
	  • controlling OHS risk
	• how these products were developed and implemented
	• knowledge of relevant OHS legislation (acts, regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material.

Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to workplace or simulated workplace • access to workplace documentation • access to office equipment and resources • access to relevant legislation, standards and guidelines relating to risks found in the workplace.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples

Workplace issues may include:	• changes in equipment, including technology
	• changes in social, political or community environment
	• changes in work organisation, including:
	  • contracting
	  • hire arrangements
	  • casualisation
	  • supervisory arrangements
	  • outworkers
	  • rosters
	  • shift work
	  • work hours
	  • work relations
	• changes in work practice
	• changes to legislation and standards
	• new knowledge on hazards
	• outcomes of court rulings.

Occasions when action for hazard identification is required may include:	• at design or pre-purchase of buildings, equipment and materials • at regular intervals during normal operations • before changes are made to workplace, equipment, work processes or work arrangements • commissioning or pre-implementation of new processes or practices • following an incident report • new forms of work and organisation of work • planning major tasks or activities, such as equipment shut-downs • prior to disposal of equipment, buildings or materials • when new knowledge becomes available.
Tools may include:	• audits • cause and effect diagrams • JSA • surveys.
Task demands may include:	• arousal and alertness • machine pacing or time pressure to complete a task • physical or physiological demands

RANGE STATEMENT
	• repetitive nature of task • required precision or accuracy.
Task environment may include:	• air quality • lighting • noise • thermal
Agents may be:	• biological • chemical • ergonomic • nuclear • physical • psychosocial • radiological.
Factors contributing to risk may include those associated with:	• equipment • frequency and duration of exposure • individual/operator • number of people exposed/involved • task • work environment • work organisation.
Relevant standards may include:	• Australian and industry standards • codes of practice • current knowledge related to the specific hazard and controls • current practice in the industry • legislation.
Prioritising hazards requiring further control action may include:	• other recognised processes • specially designed tools • standard ranking tools.
Risk assessment includes identification of:	• factors contributing to risk • current controls and their adequacy • discrepancy between current control and required standard • prioritisation or ranking of a number of risks, where appropriate.
Hierarchy of control may include:	• eliminating hazards • and where this is not practicable, minimising risk by: • substitution • isolating the hazard from personnel

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

RANGE STATEMENT
	• using engineering controls • using administrative controls (e.g. procedures, training) • using personal protective equipment (PPE).
Factors impacting on the effectiveness of controls may include:	• cultural diversity • language • literacy and numeracy levels • shift work and rostering arrangements • training required • workplace culture related to OHS including commitment by managers and supervisors and compliance with procedures and training • workplace organisational structures (size of organisation, geographic, hierarchical).
Risk register may include:	• list of hazards, their location and people exposed • possible control measures and dates for implementation • range of possible scenarios or circumstances under which the hazards may cause injury or damage • results of the risk analysis related to the hazards.

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills

• analytical skills to:
  • identify areas for hazard control
  • analyse relevant workplace information and data
  • contribute to the assessment of the resources needed to systematically manage OHS and, where appropriate, access resources
• attention to detail when making observations and recording outcomes
• research skills to access relevant OHS information and data
• numeracy skills to carry out simple arithmetical calculations (e.g. % change), and to produce graphs of workplace information and data to identify trends and recognise limitations
• technological skills to use basic measuring equipment including reading scales and dials applicable to selected hazards
• communication skills to:
  • conduct effective formal and informal meetings and to communicate effectively with personnel at all levels of the organization, OHS specialists and, as required, emergency services personnel
  • prepare reports for a range of target groups including OHS committee, OHS representatives, managers and supervisors
  • use language and literacy skills appropriate to the workgroup and the task
• consultation and negotiation skills to develop plans, and to implement and monitor designated actions
• project management skills to achieve change in OHS matters
• organisational skills to manage own tasks within a timeframe
• information technology skills to access and enter internal and external information and data on OHS and to use a range of communication media

Required knowledge
• organisational personnel at all levels

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
• OHS specialists and managers • report writing • location of information and data and advice from different sources to identify hazards • units of measurement to interpret measurement information and data • control strategies • software systems to assist in extraction, analysis and reporting of required information and data on specific hazards • word processing and other basic software for displaying visual information and data for reporting results and recommendations • relevant OHS legislation (acts, regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material)

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • hazard identification, analysis of the work environment and participation in the development of risk control for selected hazard types • knowledge of relevant OHS legislation (acts, regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material).
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • reports from other parties consulted in identifying hazards and conducting risk assessments.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

EVIDENCE GUIDE
	• demonstration of techniques used to identify hazards; assess associated risks; control, monitor and evaluate risks • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • observation of performance in role plays • observation of presentations • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of characteristics, mode of action and units of measurement of major hazard types • review of control strategies developed for the selected hazard • assessment of reports to stakeholders about the results of workplace measurements and interpretations.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • other OHS units.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
External sources of information and data may include:	• Australian Safety and Compensation Council • databases with national and state injury data such as National Industrial Chemicals Notification and Assessment Scheme (NICNAS) • employer groups • industry bodies • journals and websites • legislation, codes of practice and standards

	• manufacturers' manual and specifications • OHS regulatory authorities • OHS specialists • unions

Hazards may include:	• source or a situation with a potential for harm in terms of:
	  • injury
	  • ill health
	  • damage to property
	  • damage to the environment
	  • a combination of the above

Workplace sources of information and data may include:	• employees • hazard, incident and investigation reports • material safety data sheets (MSDSs) • minutes of meetings • OHS representatives • reports and audits • workplace inspections
Appropriate tools may include:	• checklists produced as part of codes of practice • notes or drawings • photographs • tools developed for a specific work environment, situation or hazard • tools provided by external sources or advisors
Stakeholders may include:	• employees • health and safety, and other employee representatives • managers • OHS committees • supervisors
Key personnel may include:	• managers in related areas • people involved in OHS decision making or who are or affected by OHS decisions
OHS specialists may include:	• engineers • ergonomists • occupational hygienists • organisational psychologists • toxicologists • workplace injury and return to work advisors

RANGE STATEMENT
Equipment may include basic instrumentation such as:	• goniometer • humidity measuring devices • light meters • simple gas sampling devices • sound level meters • temperature measuring devices
Strategies may include:	• focus groups • interviews • questionnaires
Recognised standards may include:	• codes of practice • exposure standards • guidance notes • national and industry standards • OHS regulations
Risks may include:	• the chance of something happening that will result in injury or damage which are measured in terms of consequences (injury or damage) and likelihood of the consequence

Risk register may include:	• list of:
	  • hazards
	  • location of hazards
	  • people exposed to the hazards
	• possible control measures and dates for implementation
	• range of possible scenarios or circumstances under which these hazards may cause injury or damage
	• results of the risk assessment

Hierarchy of control may include:	• eliminating hazards • and where this is not practicable, minimising risk by: • substitution • isolating the hazard from personnel • using engineering controls • using administrative controls (e.g. procedures, training) • using PPE
Personal protective equipment is equipment designed to be worn by a person to provide protection	• clothing and footwear • face and eye protection • hand protection

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to effectively identify hazards, and to assess and control risks associated with plant and equipment, including mobile plant, machinery, electrical equipment, pressure vessels and plant affecting public safety. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals with managerial responsibility for applying a systematic approach to monitoring the identification of hazards and assessing risk arising from the use of plant, and systems of work associated with plant. The focus is on eliminating the hazard or, where this is not practicable, minimising risks to health and safety arising from plant. The unit examines regulatory requirements for design, manufacture, testing, installation, commissioning, use, repair, alteration, dismantling, storage and disposal of plant. Identification and elimination of occupational health and safety (OHS) hazards at the design stage guides the selection and implementation of appropriate OHS risk controls throughout the life cycle of plant or equipment. BSBOHS504B Apply principles of OHS risk management, covers a generic approach to risk management and should be used as underpinning knowledge for this unit. While hazards associated with plant may include noise, chemicals and ergonomic hazards, these are specifically addressed under unit BSBOHS505C Manage hazards in

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
1. Identify hazards arising from the use of plant and associated systems of work	1.1. Access sources of information, data and advice on plant and equipment hazards to assist in identifying hazards associated with plant 1.2. Identify hazards in the design, manufacture, registration, supply, installation, commissioning, use, maintenance, testing, dismantling, storage and

Identify and analyse work environment, tasks and circumstances that may lead to hazardous situations or exacerbate risk associated with use of plant and equipment 1.4. In the process of hazard identification, identify and consult appropriate specialist advisors, stakeholders, relevant key personnel and other parties 1.5. Establish, report and review appropriate procedures for recording and reporting on hazards associated with plant as part of the systematic approach to managing OHS
2. Analyse OHS risk associated with plant	2.1. Determine the method of risk assessment in consultation with operators and stakeholders and, if required, specialist advisors 2.2. Identify and assess risks associated with hazards arising from plant in consultation with operators and stakeholders, taking into account the effectiveness of existing controls 2.3. Develop and regularly update risk registers for items of plant and associated equipment 2.4. Identify risks requiring further control action
3. Control risks associated with plant hazards	3.1. Source information, data and advice on risk control options for plant and machinery hazards 3.2. Involve operators, stakeholders and key personnel in the development of controls 3.3. Adopt control measures for ensuring the health and safety of persons accessing, using and/or maintaining plant by applying the hierarchy of control 3.4. Apply controls for access, egress, dangerous parts, guarding, operational controls, emergency stops and warning devices, registrations and design of plant, and operator certification risks associated with plant 3.5. Use and maintain workplace monitoring processes to eliminate or control risks properly 3.6. Report regularly and appropriately to stakeholders

Respond to and monitor, permit to work procedures or certification in liaison with relevant key personnel, ensuring a safe working environment 4.4. Implement and monitor isolation procedures in liaison with relevant key personnel, to ensure continued safety of maintenance and other personnel 4.5. Ensure purchasing procedures include actions to address OHS implications of plant and equipment 4.6. Develop, document and communicate maintenance procedures to ensure plant and equipment are safe for use 4.7. Take action to ensure that any modifications to plant or equipment are safe and suitable for the task, and appropriately document and modify work practices as required for safe operation 4.8. Monitor and evaluate maintenance systems for effectiveness, suitability and accuracy to ensure safe operation of plant and equipment, and take action as appropriate
5. Identify and advise on licensing and certification issues associated with plant and equipment	5.1. Identify types of plant (including plant design) requiring registration and tasks requiring operator licensing and/or certification in accordance with legislative requirements 5.2. Document and communicate to managers and relevant key personnel, OHS requirements to meet plant registration, operator licensing and certification, and other legal requirements 5.3. Document and communicate to managers and key personnel, training requirements to meet licensing, certification, registration and other legal requirements 5.4. Analyse training needs to ensure information, instruction and training prior to commencement of work on new plant and equipment and new operating methods 5.5. Monitor and report compliance with regulatory requirements for operator licensing, registration and certification in the workplace 5.6. Identify, document and maintain appropriate records for statutory and specialist plant and associated operator competencies
6. Review and evaluate	6.1. Review effectiveness of control measures and

Compare outcomes of OHS risk assessments with criteria to identify risks requiring further risk control and risks deemed as low as reasonably achievable (ALARA) 6.3. Involve stakeholders, key personnel, operators and appropriate specialist advisors, in developing relevant risk control plans for plant 6.4. Maintain appropriate records for the operating of the plant 6.5. Recommend or implement improvements arising from the review process with appropriate key personnel including manufacturers 6.6. Review the system of managing OHS to ensure plant safety

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- analytical skills to:
  - identify areas for hazard control
  - analyse relevant workplace information and data and to make observations of workplace tasks and interactions between people, their activities, equipment, environment and systems
  - contribute to the assessment of resources needed to systematically manage OHS and, where appropriate, access resources
- attention to detail when making observations and recording outcomes
- research skills to access relevant OHS information and data
- numeracy skills to carry out simple arithmetical calculations (e.g. % change), and to produce graphs of workplace information and data to identify trends and recognise limitations
- technological skills to use basic measuring equipment including reading scales and dials applicable to selected hazards
- communication skills to:
  - conduct effective formal and informal meetings and to communicate effectively with personnel at all levels of the organisation, OHS specialists and, as

RANGE STATEMENT

Controls for access and egress risks may include:	• accessing parts of plant which require cleaning and maintenance
	• access/egress to operator's workstation for normal and emergency conditions
	• systems to enable safe access and egress such as:
	  • emergency lighting
	  • safety doors
	  • alarm systems

Controls for dangerous parts risks may include:	• potential contact or entrapment points to which the operator may be exposed during:
	  • adjustment
	  • examination
	  • lubrication
	  • maintenance
	  • operation

Controls for guarding risk may include:	• permanently fixed physical barriers where no access of any part of a person is required • interlocking physical barriers where access to dangerous areas is required during operation • physical barriers securely fixed by means of fasteners or devices • presence-sensing safeguarding systems
Controls for operational controls plant risks may include:	• being capable of locking in 'off' position to enable disconnection of all motive power and forces • being guarded to prevent unintentional activation • being of 'fail safe' type • being readily and conveniently located • being suitability identified • having nature and function clearly indicated
Controls for emergency stops and warning devices risks may include:	• being able to avoid electrical or electronic circuit malfunction • colouring push buttons, bars or handles red • prominent, clear and durable markings
Controls for registrations and design of plant risks may include:	• relevant state and territory jurisdictional requirements
Controls for operator	• processes by which a certificate to use or operate industrial equipment is issued by a

Isolation procedures may include:	• devices such as:
	  • isolating switches
	  • locks
	  • safety bars
	  • shields
	  • full pressure blanks
	  • spectacle blanks to lock controls - especially moving parts, equipment, systems or devices with stored energy - to an 'off' position while a worker is in a vulnerable position such as:
	  • performing maintenance on rotating equipment, and electrical and hydraulic systems
	  • locking switches with keys needed to open the lock
	• devices used in conjunction with a danger tag system that promotes greater safety consciousness among the workforce for all situations in which danger to persons could arise from:
	  • operation of machinery, plant or equipment
	  • flow of steam, electricity, gases or liquids
	  • use of faulty or unsafe plant and equipment
	• devices characterised by multiple locking systems that involve written authorisation by a competent person

RANGE STATEMENT
Other personnel may include:	• general community • other employees and contractors • public • visitors
Modifications to plant and equipment may include:	• changes in specification of raw material or plant operating materials, such as lubricants • changes to physical specification of plant, parts or associated tools • changes to work processes and systems • introduction of contractual arrangements • introduction of new and emerging technology
Registration may include:	• administrative process by which a certifying authority requires an organisation or industry to register plant, machinery and equipment

Operator licensing and/or certification may include:	• any form of regulation that restricts entry to an occupation or a profession to those who meet competency related requirements stipulated by a regulatory authority, including:
	  • any physical or implied licence
	  • registration
	  • certification
	  • approval
	  • permit that is required by a person in order to gain employment/self employment

OHS requirements may include:	• compliance, licensing and certification competencies for operators applicable to state/territory ad commonwealth legislation • documentation requirements relating to plant • emergency preparedness • incident investigation • OHS consultation and participation • OHS obligations and responsibilities to provide safe equipment • OHS policies and procedures • OHS training and information • purchasing/procurement policy and procedures • safe behaviour and defensive driving practices • safe work procedures • systematic hazard identification, risk analysis and evaluation, and risk control • task observation

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to facilitate the application of principles of occupational health and implement strategies to control occupational health and safety (OHS) risk. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals with managerial responsibility for managing OHS in the workplace to consider the impact of agents in the workplace on the health of workers, and the physical and psychosocial impact on workers' health arising from work organisation and work processes. It covers knowledge of occupational health and strategies to deal with occupational health issues. The unit enables candidates to facilitate the application of principles of occupational health to control OHS risk in the workplace. OHS practitioners will identify occupational health hazards, and seek solutions and interventions to bring about change in the workplace. These practitioners will facilitate risk assessment and controls to reduce exposure to the effects of hazardous materials and hazardous conditions in the workplace. BSBOHS505C Manage hazards in the work environment, addresses hazards of both short term and long term latency, including those hazards that impact on health.

	1.4. Identify situations where health professionals may be required
2. Identify the potential for adverse effects on health related to the interaction of the work environment, work systems and people	2.1. Apply knowledge of sources of occupational disease and injury to analyse job characteristics, nature of work and the context of work to help identify situations with potential for physical or psychological harm to employees 2.2. Access workplace and internal sources of information and data, taking account of privacy requirements, to assist in identifying situations with a potential for physical or psychological harm to employees
3. Facilitate the control of risks to health in the workplace	3.1. Apply the hierarchy of control to control risks to occupational health 3.2. Examine workplace policies, procedures and schedules to minimise situations with a potential to cause physical or psychological harm to employees 3.3. Examine organisational communication processes to maximise clarity of roles and employee involvement in these processes
4. Participate in the development of strategies to communicate occupational health information and data	4.1. Research and identify characteristics of target groups 4.2. Interpret and discuss health effects with stakeholders that may result from work and the working environment 4.3. Implement communication strategies in accordance with legal and ethical requirements 4.4. Evaluate and monitor the effectiveness of health communication processes
5. Monitor and facilitate occupational health education and training	5.1. Identify the need for health information and data, and training in consultation with workplace stakeholders 5.2. Identify personnel including health professionals and resources to deliver occupational health training 5.3. Identify and allocate roles and responsibilities for the delivery of training 5.4. Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- analytical skills to:
  - identify areas for improvement where OHS risk is involved
  - analyse relevant workplace information and data, and to make observations of workplace tasks and interactions between people, their activities, equipment, environment and systems
  - contribute to the assessment of resources needed to systematically manage OHS and, where appropriate, access resources
- attention to detail when making observations and recording outcomes
- research skills to access relevant OHS information and data
- numeracy skills to carry out simple arithmetical calculations (e.g. % change), and to produce graphs of workplace information and data to identify trends and recognise limitations
- technological skills to use basic measuring equipment including reading scales and dials applicable to selected hazards
- communication skills to:
  - conduct effective formal and informal meetings and to communicate effectively with personnel at all levels of the organisation, OHS specialists and, as required, emergency services personnel
  - prepare reports for a range of target groups including OHS committee, OHS representatives, managers and supervisors
  - use language and literacy skills appropriate to the workgroup and the task
- consultation and negotiation skills to develop plans, and to implement and monitor designated actions
- project management skills to achieve change in OHS matters
- organisational skills to manage own tasks within a timeframe
- information technology skills to access and enter internal and external information and data on OHS and to use a range of communication media

Required knowledge

• basic knowledge of toxicology of hazardous materials and potential health effects in the workplace
• ethics related to professional practice
• formal and informal communication and consultation processes and key personnel related to communication
• hierarchy of control and considerations for choosing between different control measures, such as possible inadequacies of particular control measures
• how the characteristics and composition of the workforce impact on risk and the systematic approach to managing OHS, for example:
  • communication skills
  • cultural background/workplace diversity
  • gender
  • labour market changes
  • language, literacy and numeracy
  • structure and organisation of workforce e.g. part-time, casual and contract workers, shift rosters, geographical location
  • workers with specific needs
• internal and external sources of OHS information and data
• key personnel, including identifying 'change agents', within workplace management structure
• language, literacy and cultural profile of the workgroup
• methods of providing evidence of compliance with OHS legislation
• nature of workplace processes (including work flow, planning and control) and hazards relevant to the particular workplace
• organisational behaviour and culture as it impacts on OHS and on change
• organisational culture as it impacts on the workgroup
• organisational OHS policies and procedures
• requirements under hazard specific OHS legislation and codes of practice
• sources of occupational disease and their prevention
• structure and forms of legislation including regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material

EVIDENCE GUIDE
Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • facilitation of strategies to assist with controlling OHS risks associated with occupational health issues • knowledge of structure and forms of legislation including regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to office equipment and resources • access to relevant legislation, standards and guidelines • access to workplace or simulated workplace.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios • assessment of written reports on the effectiveness of OHS principles in the workplace • demonstration of techniques used to control OHS risk • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • observation of performance in role plays • observation of presentations • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of ethics related to professional practice • evaluation of discussions with stakeholders about health effects that may result from work and the working environment • review of evaluation plan • assessment of identification of situations that require health professionals.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • other OHS units.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
External sources of information and data may include:	• Australian Safety and Compensation Council • databases with national and state injury data, such as National Industrial Chemicals Notification and Assessment Scheme (NICNAS) • employer groups • industry bodies • journals and websites • legislation, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material • manufacturers' manuals and specifications • OHS regulatory authorities • OHS specialists • unions.
Agents may include:	• biological • chemical • ergonomic • nuclear • physical • psychosocial • radiological.
Workplace sources of information and data may include:	• audits • employees • hazard, incident and investigation reports • material safety data sheets (MSDSs) • minutes of meetings • questionnaires • reports • written and verbal complaints.
Health professionals may include:	• general practitioners

	• substitution • isolating the hazard from personnel • using engineering controls • using administrative controls (e.g. procedures, training) • using personal protective equipment (PPE).
Organisational communication processes may include:	• formal and informal communication processes • position descriptions and performance appraisal processes • training.

Characteristics of target groups may include:	• characteristics influencing communication strategies, such as access to information and data and empowerment
	• characteristics such as, but not limited to:
	  • cultural background
	  • language and literacy
	  • location
	  • size of workforce, group, team etc
	  • variability of roles, responsibilities etc.

Stakeholders may include:	• employees • families of employees • health and safety, and other employee representatives • local community • managers • OHS committees.
Legal requirements may include:	• equity and workers with specific needs • privacy legislation • relevant OHS legislative requirements related to use of certain chemicals and processes in the workplace.
Ethical requirements may include:	• confidentiality • equity • privacy • workplace diversity.
Resources may include:	• financial • physical.
Evaluation plan may include:	• appropriate communication strategies for the workplace • identification of relevant target groups

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to participate in the planning, conduct and reporting of investigations of incidents which have resulted in, or have a potential to result in, injury or damage. Situations may range from relatively minor through to major incidents. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals with managerial responsibility for occupational health and safety (OHS) who are required to participate in the investigation of incidents for prevention. It includes conducting an initial assessment of the situation; establishing the scope and legal parameters of the investigation; conducting a systematic analysis to identify underlying causes and actions for prevention; and reporting on the outcomes of the investigation. This competency may be applied to both straightforward investigations as well as formal investigations of complex situations. Where the investigation is of a complex situation or the application of the skills and knowledge is in a larger organisation, procedures for incident investigation should exist. In smaller organisations there may not be existing investigation procedures and external OHS expertise should be accessed where required.

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
• roles and responsibilities under OHS legislation of employees, including supervisors and contractors • standard industry controls for a range of hazards • state/territory and commonwealth OHS legislation (acts, regulations, codes of practice, associated standards&guidance material) including prescriptive and performance approaches and links to other relevant legislation such as industrial relations, equal employment opportunity, workers compensation, rehabilitation • structure and forms of legislation including regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • investigation of OHS incidents in a systematic manner • an initial assessment of the situation and the establishment of processes • recommendations made for prevention • dissemination of relevant information and data • knowledge principles and practices of continuity and validity of evidence retention for potential legal action.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to workplace documents and situation case studies and, where possible, to situations • access to office equipment and resources • access to other personnel involved in investigations.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

EVIDENCE GUIDE
	• demonstration of techniques used to conduct OHS incident investigations • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • observation of performance in role plays • observation of presentations • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of requirements for reporting under OHS and other relevant legislation including notification and reporting of incidents • review of authenticated documents from the workplace or training environment • evaluation of area checks after an incident • scoping of the investigation • recording of documentary evidence • researchof causative event/s.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • other OHS units.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Relevant government agencies may include:	• environment protection agencies • OHS authorities • police and other emergency services
Key persons within the organisation may include:	• employee assistance personnel • external specialist personnel and contractors • OHS specialists within organisation • organisational legal advisor

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

RANGE STATEMENT
	• personnel involved in incident/situation • senior management • supervisors • union or staff association representatives • workgroup members
Complexity may include:	• administrative implications • conflict of interest issues • existence of secondary hazards • international conventions • involvement of external agencies • language competencies of parties involved • legal implications arising from the incident or post incident related matters • level of public or political interest • number of other parties, including sub-contractors • seriousness of injury or other outcomes • technical implications
Stakeholders and interested parties may include:	• community • coroner • designers • employees and family members • employers • government agencies, including OHS and emergency services agencies • importers • installers • insurance companies • managers • manufacturers • media • organisation's board or advisory council • persons in control of workplaces • politicians • sub-contractors • suppliers and distributors • unions • workgroup members and people who may be exposed to similar situations
Investigation team should include	• familiar with the task and the work

persons:	environment • in authority in organisation such as company/organisational legal advisor and technical experts as required • in OHS representative role • responsible for performance standards within the work environment (e.g. supervisor) • with OHS expertise
Barriers to investigation may include:	• availability of research data and analysis or testing equipment • availability of technical design information and data relevant to the investigation • changes to incident scene • condition of witnesses • cultural issues • economic implications • geographical location and/or accessibility • lack of records • language • legal restrictions or limitations (temporary, short-term or long-term) • length of time from when incident occurred/first identified • limited resources available • management and employee attitude including desire to protect self and others • political and community stakeholder sensitivity • time limits imposed
Conceptual basis for the analysis should:	• emphasise analysis of the systems in place at the time of the incident • encourage an open minded, objective approach • focus on the 'why' and 'how' rather than the 'what' • not focus on individual behaviour or fault
Time line of events may include:	• events which extend back in time as far as required and not just focus on immediate events
Causative events may include:	• key events that together resulted in the particular outcome/s of injury or damage
Conditions may include:	• permanent situation such as: • type of equipment

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to establish, maintain and evaluate the organisation's occupational health and safety (OHS) policies, procedures and programs in the relevant work area in accordance with OHS legal requirements. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	Managers play an important role in ensuring the safety of the workplace and the wellbeing of their staff. This unit applies to managers working in a range of contexts. It takes a systems approach and ensures compliance with relevant legislative requirements. All those who have, or are likely to have, a management responsibility for OHS should undertake this unit. It is relevant for those with managerial responsibilities, either as an owner or employee-manager of a business.

  • analyse relevant workplace information and data, and to make observations of workplace tasks and interactions between people, their activities, equipment, environment and systems
  • contribute to the assessment of resources needed to systematically manage OHS and, where appropriate, access resources
  • contribute to the strategic OHS performance of the organisation
• attention to detail when making observations and recording outcomes
• research skills to access relevant OHS information and data, to interpret information and data, and to identify areas for improvement
• communication skills to:
  • conduct effective formal and informal meetings and to communicate effectively with personnel at all levels of the organisation, OHS specialists and, as required, emergency services personnel
  • write policies, procedures and plans
  • use language and literacy skills appropriate to the workgroup and the task
• data gathering skills such as brainstorming, polling, interviewing
• consultation and negotiation skills to develop plans, and to implement and monitor designated actions
• project management skills to achieve continuous improvement and to action processes in OHS matters
• organisational skills to manage own tasks within a timeframe
• information technology skills to access and enter internal and external information and data on OHS.

- development of tools such as positive performance indicators (PPIs) in assessment of OHS performance
- difference between common law and statutory law
- ethics related to professional practice
- formal and informal communication and consultation processes, and key personnel related to communication
- hierarchy of control and considerations for choosing between different control measures, such as possible inadequacies of particular control measures
- how the characteristics and composition of the workforce impact on risk and the systematic approach to managing OHS, for example:
  - communication skills
  - cultural background/workplace diversity
  - gender
  - labour market changes
  - language, literacy and numeracy
  - structure and organisation of workforce e.g. part-time, casual and contract workers, shift rosters, geographical location
  - workers with specific needs
- internal and external sources of OHS information and data
- key personnel, including identifying 'change agents', within workplace management structure
- language, literacy and cultural profile of the work group
- legislative requirements for OHS information and data, and consultation
- methods of providing evidence of compliance with OHS legislation
- nature and use of information and data that provides valid and reliable results on performance of OHS management processes (including PPIs and limitations of other types of measures)
- nature of workplace processes (including work flow, planning and control) and hazards relevant to the particular workplace
- organisational behaviour and culture as it impacts on OHS and on change
- organisational culture as it impacts on the workgroup
- organisational OHS policies and procedures
- other functional areas that impact on the management of OHS
- principles and practices of a systematic approach to managing OHS
- principles of duty of care including concepts of causation, foreseeability, preventability
- principles of effective meetings including agendas, action planning, chair and secretarial duties, minutes and action items
- principles of incident causation and injury processes
- professional liability in relation to providing advice
- requirements for record keeping that address OHS, privacy and other relevant

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • design and development of systematic approaches to managing OHS, either in an actual workplace, or simulation exercise • products developed for the design and development of systematic approaches and associated documentation • how these products were designed and developed • use of these products • knowledge of relevant OHS legislation (acts, regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material).
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to workplace or simulated workplace • access to workplace personnel and documentation • reports from other parties consulted in designing and developing OHS systematic approaches • access to relevant legislation, standards and guidelines.

Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios • assessment of written reports on the effectiveness of the OHS management system • demonstration of techniques used to implement and maintain systematic OHS approaches • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • observation of performance in role plays • observation of presentations • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of organisational behaviour and culture as it impacts on OHS and on change • review of strategic implementation plan and action plans • evaluation of elements for compliance with legal obligations • analysis and evaluation of information and data • review of recommendations made for improvement in the systematic management of OHS.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • other OHS units.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. regional contexts) may also be included.
External motivators may include:	• corporate image/reputation • customer/contract demand • legal obligations
Systematic approaches to managing OHS may include:	• developing, implementing, reviewing and maintaining the activities for managing OHS • use of OHS management systems developed in the workplace to meet the OHS situation in that particular workplace
Stakeholders may include:	• employees • health and safety, and other employee representatives • managers • OHS committees • supervisors
Internal motivators may include:	• financial • industrial relations • injury and illness prevention (ethical)
Workplace factors may include:	• consultation and communication processes • management commitment • management style, and OHS knowledge and skills of organisation • nature of hazards and level of risk • organisational structure • other management systems requiring interface or integration with systematic approaches to managing OHS • resources available • staff profile including language, literacy and numeracy, cultural diversity and specific needs of employees • whether certification is required • workplace culture, including industrial relations and safety culture
Relevant standards may include:	• Australian Standards • industry standards • standards developed by OHS authorities
Elements of systematic approaches to managing OHS may include:	• list of key requirements or major principles that are combined in a methodical and ordered manner to minimise the risk of injury or ill

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to design and develop occupational health and safety (OHS) information and data analysis, and reporting and recording processes that inform and contribute to the effectiveness of OHS in the workplace, and to evaluate the effectiveness of these processes. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This work applies to a formal OHS management system or other systematic approaches to managing OHS. The information and data system covers analysing workplace information and data in a systematic manner to ensure effective measurement and evaluation of OHS performance, with the objective of improving the management of OHS. This includes informing management and other stakeholders about OHS performance and meeting legislative requirements regarding the use, distribution and maintenance of records under relevant statutory provisions. This unit covers the design and development of a system for managing the collection, analysis and dissemination of OHS information and data, statistics and records, and is therefore more complex than BSBOHS502B Participate in the management of the OHS information and data systems, which addresses the management of an already developed OHS information and data system.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
1. Identify requirements for OHS information and data	1.1. Review relevant legislation and standards to identify obligations relevant to OHS information and data 1.2. Access policies and procedures to identify requirements for OHS information and data 1.3. Determine priorities, in consultation with relevant stakeholders, for OHS information and data collection and management 1.4. Identify workplace factors that may impact on the design and development of OHS information and

2. Make recommendations for the design of the OHS information and data processes	2.1. Identify and access relevant sources and types of OHS information and data 2.2. Investigate formats for, and availability of, databases to identify the most appropriate format 2.3. Address legal and ethical requirements in recommendations 2.4. Recognise limits of own professional expertise and seek advice from relevant specialists as required 2.5. Prepare specifications for the OHS information and data processes
3. Develop the OHS information and data, and reporting and recording processes	3.1. Identify and access or develop, tools for recording and collating information and data recognising the limitations of information and data, and measurement indices, and controlling for potential biases 3.2. Identify and facilitate links with other functional areas and management systems to ensure comprehensive information and data collection 3.3. Identify and allocate relevant roles and responsibilities 3.4. Develop policies, procedures and tools for collecting, collating and recording workplace OHS information and data, taking account of workplace factors and system requirements 3.5. Identify and document training needs for collecting, collating and analysing OHS information and data 3.6. Identify resources necessary for collecting, collating, recording, analysing and distributing OHS information and data
4. Record and analyse information and data to monitor OHS performance and to evaluate methods of prevention	4.1. Identify and apply descriptive and analytical techniques for systematic evaluation of OHS performance monitoring (including positive performance indicators [PPIs]) and areas for improvement 4.2. Access and apply information and data to determine potential associations between workplace

Ethically manage information and data collection, recording, analysis and application 4.5. Critically evaluate OHS information and data to ensure accuracy, reliability, relevance and validity 4.6. Appropriately format and disseminate outcomes of information and data analysis considering the target audience, and legal and ethical requirements 4.7. Identify appropriate strategies for improvement and formulate recommendations as a consequence of information and data analysis
5. Monitor and evaluate the effectiveness of information and data collection and analysis processes	5.1. Regularly review OHS information and data collection, recording, analysis and application processes to ensure relevance to the needs of the organisation in managing OHS and compliance with legislative requirements 5.2. Determine frequency, method and scope of review, in consultation with stakeholders 5.3. Make recommendations for improvement to OHS information and data processes as required 5.4. Implement improvement strategies arising from the review

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills

• analytical skills to:
  • analyse relevant workplace information and data, and to make observations of workplace tasks and interactions between people, their activities, equipment, environment and systems
  • contribute to the assessment of resources needed to systematically manage OHS and, where appropriate, access resources

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- contribute to the strategic OHS performance of the organisation
- attention to detail when making observations and recording outcomes
- numeracy skills to:
  - carry out simple arithmetical calculations (e.g. % change) and to produce graphs of workplace information and data, to identify trends and recognise limitations of information and data
  - carry out simple statistical analysis e.g. mean, standard deviation, regression
- research skills to access relevant OHS information and data, to interpret information and data, and to identify areas for improvement
- communication skills to:
  - conduct effective formal and informal meetings and to communicate effectively with personnel at all levels of the organisation, OHS specialists and, as required, emergency services personnel
  - employ consultation and negotiation skills, particularly in relation to developing plans, and implementing and monitoring designated actions
  - write policies, procedures and plans
  - use language and literacy skills appropriate to the workgroup and the task
- consultation and negotiation skills to develop plans, and to implement and monitor designated actions
- data gathering skills such as brainstorming, polling, interviewing
- project management skills to achieve continuous improvement and to conduct action planning processes in OHS matters
- organisational skills to manage own tasks within a timeframe
- information technology skills to access and enter internal and external information and data on OHS, and to produce effective graphical representations.

Required knowledge

- concept of common law duty of care
- development of tools such as PPIs in assessment of OHS performance
- difference between common law and statutory law
- ethics related to professional practice
- examples of OHS information and data management systems and tools
- formal and informal communication and consultation processes, and key personnel related to communication
- how the characteristics and composition of the workforce impact on risk and the systematic approach to managing OHS, for example:

- workers with specific needs
- key personnel, including identifying change agents, within workplace management structure
- organisational OHS policies and procedures
- language, literacy and cultural profile of the workgroup
- legislative requirements for OHS information and data, and consultation
- methods of collecting reliable information and data, commonly encountered problems in collection, and strategies for overcoming such problems
- nature and use of information and data that provides valid and reliable results on performance of OHS management processes (including PPIs) and limitations of other types of measures
- organisational culture as it impacts on the workgroup
- other functional areas that impact on the management of OHS
- principles and practices of a systematic approach to managing OHS
- principles and practices of continuity and validity of evidence retention for potential legal action
- principles of duty of care including concepts of causation, foreseeability, preventability
- requirements for record keeping that address OHS, privacy and other relevant legislation
- requirements for reporting under OHS and other relevant legislation including notification and reporting of incidents
- requirements of effective records management systems including collection, filing, retention, retrieval, archiving and disposal
- requirements of OHS and standards related to systematically managing OHS
- roles and responsibilities under OHS legislation of employees including supervisors, contractors, OHS inspectors
- roles and responsibilities in relation to communication and consultation for OHS committees, OHS representatives, line management, employees and inspectors
- standards related to OHS information and data, statistics and records management including requirements for information and data under elements of systematically managing OHS

RANGE STATEMENT
	• OHS committees • supervisors

Workplace factors may include:	• management commitment
	• management style and OHS knowledge and skills of organisation
	• nature of hazards and level of risk
	• organisational structure
	• other management systems requiring interface or integration with the information and data processes for OHS
	• required level of security for OHS system, including:
	  • prevention of theft and fraud
	  • access security
	  • prevention of interruption of services inadvertent release of material
	  • information and data destruction, corruption and alteration
	• resources available
	• size of organisation and industry type
	• staff profile including:
	  • language
	  • literacy
	  • numeracy
	  • cultural diversity
	• workplace culture, including industrial relations and safety culture

Sources of OHS information and data may include:	• external sources such as:
	  • Australian and industry standards
	  • Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS)
	  • Australian Safety and Compensation Council
	  • internet, journals and magazines
	  • manufacturers' manuals and specifications

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to conduct a formal risk assessment comprising analysis and evaluation of occupational health and safety (OHS) risk. It has been designed to be consistent with the Australian Standard, AS/NZS 4360: 2004 Risk management. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit addresses the knowledge, processes and techniques necessary to analyse and evaluate OHS risk as part of the risk management process. OHS risk analysis involves defining the range of consequences, assessing the effectiveness of existing controls and deciding the likelihood of each consequence, and combining these in some way to obtain a level of risk. Risk evaluation is the comparison of pre established criteria for tolerance and the subsequent ranking of risks requiring control. The situation to be analysed and evaluated may involve a single task or a process comprising a series of tasks. Application of this unit must be consistent with the pertinent sections of the Australian Standard, AS/NZS 4360: 2004 Risk management.

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
• toxicology of hazardous materials and potential health effects in the workplace • types of hazard identification tools including job system analysis (JSA).

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • OHS risk analysis and evaluation of a number of tasks as part of an OHS risk management process, either in an actual workplace, simulation exercise or scenario • products developed for management of these OHS processes • how these products were developed • use of the products • knowledge of pertinent sections of relevant Australian and other standards.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to actual workplace/s and stakeholder groups • access to office equipment and resources • access to relevant legislation, standards and guidelines • access to workplace documentation • access to reports from other parties consulted in conducting risk analysis and evaluation.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios • demonstration of techniques used to identify, analyse, evaluate, control and monitor risks • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party reports of

	on-the-job performance by the candidate • observation of performance in role plays • observation of presentations • oral or written questioning • review information and data communicated to stakeholders about the OHS risk • evaluation of ranking of OHS risks • assessment of comparison of outcomes of OHS risk analysis with criteria • review of documentation of process and outcomes of analysis and evaluation of OHS risk of a task or process.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • other OHS units

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Hazards may include:	• source or situation with a potential for harm in terms of human injury or ill health, damage to property or the environment, or a combination of these
Context may include:	• activities • controls currently in place • internal and external factors that impact on OHS risk • level of documentation required • stakeholders • workplace
Scope of OHS risk study may	• activities, job role, area, location to be

include:	analysed • who will use the output and for what purpose • why it is being done
Monitoring activities may include:	• air monitoring • medical monitoring • noise monitoring
Information and data about the OHS risk may include:	• mode/s of action of the hazard causing injury or damage • outcomes of OHS risk analysis
Stakeholders may include:	• customers/users of the product or process • employees and their representatives • managers, including boards of management • the community
Controls may include:	• actions implementing risk management decisions • monitoring • programs or policies • re-evaluation and compliance with decisions
Relevant standards may include:	• Australian and industry standards • codes of practice and guidance material • common law duty of care • current knowledge • current practice • legislation
Comprehensive analysis of information and data may include:	• engineering modelling • experience with enterprise, own/other industries • past records • published literature • research within exposed groups • specialist and expert groups
Comprehensive analysis of techniques may include:	• broad consultation • multidisciplinary focus groups • processes and techniques used by specialists, such as modelling, fault tree and Hazard and Operability Studies (HazOps) • questionnaires • structured interviews
OHS specialist advisors may	• engineers

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to apply ergonomic knowledge, principles and techniques to control occupational health and safety (OHS) risk. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit addresses the principles, processes and techniques of ergonomics including the study of the interaction between people, the equipment they use and their general environment. The unit focuses on aspects of work design and work planning such as work layout, work flow, skills, individual variations and environmental factors. The underpinning knowledge and skills required for this unit are outlined in BSBOHS504B Apply principles of OHS risk management, and BSBOHS505C Manage hazards in the work environment, and include knowledge of systematic approaches to OHS.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
1. Assess the degree of match between people and their activities, equipment, environment and systems	1.1. Identify the extent of human variability in the organisation 1.2. Determine demands placed on people in the organisation by their activities, equipment, environment and systems 1.3. Determine people's capacity to interact optimally with their activities, equipment, environment and systems 1.4. Determine the match between people and their activities, equipment, environment and systems 1.5. Identify specialist advisors and relevant stakeholders for sources of information and data, and consult them during the assessment process
2. Design ergonomic	2.1. Identify ergonomic interventions in the design

interventions to enhance the match between people and their activities, equipment, environment and systems	process to optimise the match between people and their activities, equipment, environment and systems 2.2. Design the work environment to optimise the match between people, their activities, equipment, environment and systems 2.3. Use tools and databases to assess tasks and designs to minimise risk 2.4. Make recommendations to optimise the integration of controls and display the decision making processes within the work system
3. Implement ergonomic interventions to enhance the match between people and their activities, equipment, environment and systems	3.1. Provide advice on the impact of legislation, codes of practice and standards on the selection and implementation of ergonomic interventions 3.2. Consult key personnel, stakeholders and users when developing, selecting and implementing ergonomic interventions 3.3. Make links with other functional areas and management systems 3.4. Facilitate implementation of the agreed intervention 3.5. Identify and document training needs 3.6. Identify and document resources necessary to introduce and maintain the agreed interventions 3.7. Report the outcomes of ergonomic assessments and interventions to key personnel and stakeholders
4. Evaluate ergonomic interventions	4.1. Evaluate quality and outcomes of ergonomic interventions in consultation with stakeholders and users 4.2. Facilitate modification of interventions, as required, as a result of the evaluation findings 4.3. Make recommendations regarding future interventions as a result of the evaluation

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills
• analytical skills to:

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- identify areas for improvement with OHS incidents
- analyse relevant workplace information and data, and to make observations of workplace tasks and interactions between people, their activities, equipment, environment and systems
- contribute to the assessment of resources needed to systematically manage OHS and, where appropriate, access resources
- contribute to the strategic OHS performance of the organisation

- attention to detail when making observations and recording outcomes
- numeracy skills to carry out simple arithmetical calculations (e.g. % change) and to produce graphs of workplace information and data, to identify trends and recognise limitations of information and data, and effectively use anthropometric tables
- research skills to access relevant OHS information and data to interpret information and data, to identify areas for improvement
- communication skills to:
  - conduct effective formal and informal meetings and to communicate effectively with personnel at all levels of the organisation, OHS specialists and, as required, emergency services personnel
  - write policies and procedures, plans
  - use language and literacy skills appropriate to the workgroup and the task
- consultation and negotiation skills to develop plans, and to implement and monitor designated actions
- project management skills to achieve continuous improvement and change
- organisational skills to manage own tasks within a timeframe
- information technology skills to access and enter internal and external information and data on OHS and to use a range of media

Required knowledge

- basic human cognitive and perceptual capabilities relevant to the design of human-machine interfaces
- basics of anthropometry and biomechanics
- characteristics, mode of action and units of measurement of major hazard types
- difference between hazard and risk
- direct and indirect influences that impact on OHS and the environment in the design of product/s
- ethics related to professional practice
- formal and informal communication and consultation processes, and key personnel related to communication
- hierarchy of control and considerations for choosing between different control measures, such as possible inadequacies of particular control measures
- how the characteristics and composition of the workforce impact on risk and the systematic approach to managing OHS, for example:
  - communication skills

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- cultural background/workplace diversity
- gender
- labour market changes
- language, literacy and numeracy
- structure and organisation of workforce e.g. part-time, casual and contract workers, shift rosters, geographical location
- workers with specific needs

- human error and implications for design of equipment, work practices and controlling ergonomic hazards
- interdependent relationships between ergonomics and workplace stressors such as psychosocial factors, occupational violence, shift work, repetitive work, awkward postures, lighting, thermal environment and work layout
- internal and external sources of OHS information and data
- key personnel, including identifying 'change agents', within workplace management structure
- language, literacy and cultural profile of the workgroup
- legislative requirements for OHS information and data, and consultation
- limitations of generic hazard and risk checklists, and risk ranking processes
- nature of workplace processes (including work flow, planning and control) and hazards relevant to the particular workplace
- organisational behaviour and culture as it impacts on OHS and on change
- organisational culture as it impacts on the workgroup
- organisational OHS policies and procedures
- other functional areas that impact on the management of OHS
- pertinent sections of relevant Australian and other standards such as AS/NZS 4360: 2004 Risk management, National Standard for the Storage and Handling Workplace Dangerous Goods [NOHSC: 1015(2001)] and National Standard for Manual Handling [NOHSC: 1001 (1990)]
- physiology and functional anatomy relevant to identifying and controlling ergonomic hazards
- principles and practices of a systematic approach to managing OHS
- principles of duty of care including concepts of causation, foreseeability, preventability
- principles of human behaviour and response to interactions with human, physical and task environment to identify psychosocial hazards
- requirements under hazard-specific OHS legislation and codes of practice
- risk as a measure of uncertainty and the factors that affect risk
- risk factors for manual handling injury and risk assessment techniques for manual handling
- roles and responsibilities under OHS legislation of employees including supervisors, contractors, OHS inspectors
- standard industry controls for a range of hazards

	• ergonomic factors such as:
	  • body position in relation to use of equipment or controls/awkward postures
	  • harmful repetitive work
	• psychosocial factors such as:
	  • exposure to harmful/psychological stress at work due to work demand, environment.

Hazards may include:	• source or situation with a potential for harm in terms of human injury or ill health, damage to property or the environment, or a combination of these.
OHS specialists and other advisors may include:	• allied health • engineers (ventilation, mechanical, chemical, electrical) • equipment manufacturers and suppliers • ergonomists • injury management and return to work advisors • internal and external OHS professionals • occupational health advisors • specialist occupational hygienists • substance manufacturers, importers and suppliers • toxicologists.
Sources of exposure may include:	• needle stick exposures • noise etc. produced by plant and machinery • occupationally related contact • substances/products created or generated by work processes, for example fume, carbon monoxide and dust • working with animals and animal products.
Related factors may include:	• dose related impacts • synergistic/potentiation effects (increased

BSBOHS606B Develop and implement crisis management processes

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to develop and implement the planning and management to prevent or mitigate the occupational health and safety (OHS) outcomes of a crisis. The focus is on the development of a number of management processes including emergency assessments, plans and preparation, analysis, monitoring, training and post incident support. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit addresses knowledge, processes and techniques necessary for developing and implementing crisis planning where a 'crisis' is defined as an event with a potentially high consequence outcome in terms of personal injury or damage. Emergency preparedness and management is an important part of crisis management in that it addresses the elements of technical and tactical response. Crisis management involves a number of steps including threat analysis, crisis planning and crisis containment. Useful underpinning knowledge and skills for the OHS practitioner that support this unit are available from BSBOHS404B Contribute to the implementation of strategies to control OHS risk, BSBOHS405B Contribute to the implementation of emergency procedures, and BSBOHS504B Apply principles of OHS risk management.

	1.4. Develop an emergency sources of risk register
2. Analyse and evaluate sources of risk	2.1. Access sources of information and data on risk and vulnerability within the context of existing control measures to characterise the risk 2.2. Identify and consult appropriate specialist advisors and agencies in analysing and evaluating sources of risk 2.3. Evaluate and prioritise risks for action
3. Advise on requirements for crisis management	3.1. Develop and document crisis management plan 3.2. Identify and document equipment needs 3.3. Identify and document emergency communication requirements and processes for internal and external stakeholders and resources 3.4. Identify and document liaison and communication processes with emergency response agencies and other external stakeholders 3.5. Identify and document training needs
4. Monitor and report on the effectiveness of crisis management	4.1. Regularly audit and review crisis management and develop and implement actions 4.2. Routinely check emergency response equipment for currency and functionality 4.3. Report to management on a regular basis, status of crisis management, including emergency response processes
5. Participate in the emergency control organisation	5.1. Structure the emergency control organisation so it acts to minimise consequences 5.2. Ensure understanding of and implement own role in, the emergency control organisation during an emergency 5.3. Undertake appropriate liaison with internal personnel and external agencies
6. Advise and support key personnel in the post response/recovery phase to minimise consequences	6.1. Ensure recovery phase procedures focus on minimising consequences to the people involved, the environment and the organisation 6.2. Identify and access external support and resource services as appropriate to assist recovery phase 6.3. Conduct debriefing, involving key personnel and external agencies as appropriate 6.4. Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- analytical skills to:
  - identify areas for improvement with OHS incidents
  - analyse relevant workplace information and data, and to make observations of workplace tasks and interactions between people, their activities, equipment, environment and systems
  - contribute to the assessment of resources needed to systematically manage OHS and, where appropriate, access resources
- numeracy skills to evaluate a range of information and data formats including graphs, maps, matrices, technical reports
- research skills to:
  - access relevant OHS information and data to interpret information and data to identify areas for improvement
  - use information and data gathering techniques such as brainstorming, polling, interviewing
- communication skills to:
  - conduct effective formal and informal meetings and to communicate effectively with personnel at all levels of the organisation, OHS specialists and, as required, emergency service personnel

Required knowledge

  - write policies, procedures and plans
  - use language and literacy skills appropriate to the workgroup and the task
  - issue instructions in an authoritative manner during unusual circumstances
- consultation and negotiation skills to develop plans, and to implement and monitor designated actions
- project management skills to achieve continuous improvement and change
- organisational skills to manage own tasks within a timeframe
- information technology skills to access and enter internal and external information and data on OHS and to use a range of media.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • development and implementation of crisis management processes, either in an actual workplace or simulation exercise • products developed for implementing crisis management plans • how these products were developed and use of these products • knowledge of emergency-specific requirements under relevant legislation, codes of practice and standards including hazardous substances, dangerous goods and environment protection.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to scenario resources • access to regular training and planning emergency rehearsals • access to office equipment and resources • access to workplace documentation.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • demonstration of techniques used develop and implement crisis management processes • observation of performance in role plays • observation of presentations • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of principles of effective liaison with emergency services personnel including ensuring that there is no interference or hindrance to their action • review of authenticated documents from the workplace or training environment • evaluation and prioritisation of risks for action • review of crisis management plan • assessment of emergency sources of risk register.

Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • BSBOHS404B Contribute to the implementation of strategies to control OHS risk • BSBOHS405B Contribute to the implementation of emergency procedures • BSBOHS504B Apply principles of OHS risk management • other OHS units.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Organisational context may include:	• arrangements or industry/community partnerships • hazards to which the organisation is exposed • legislation under which the organisation operates • operating environment which may be influenced by political, industrial or other internal or external factors
Crisis may include:	• emergencies requiring evacuation • explosion and bomb scares • external emergencies such as flood, storm and traffic accident impacting on organisation • fires and explosions • hazardous substance spills • internal emergencies such as loss of power or water supply • security emergencies such as armed robberies, intruders and disturbed persons • serious injury events

Environment may include:	• conditions or influences that are part of, surround or interact with, the organisation such as:
	  • built environment (buildings and other assets)
	  • physical environment (natural environment including topography, water bodies and vegetation)
	  • social environment (including people interactions, internal and external politics, economic and culture)

Sources of risk may include:	• biological hazards • civil/political hazards including civil/political unrest, terrorism, sabotage and hostage • management activities and controls including deficiencies in areas of non compliance with internal management systems, legislation, and agreements/contracts • natural hazards and/or disasters • technological hazards (failure of technology)
Elements at risk may include:	• assets • commercial reputation and goodwill • environment • people • quality of life
Vulnerability may include:	• degree of susceptibility and resilience of the organisation and the environment to the risk, which is influenced by the characteristics of the organisation in terms of its capacity to anticipate, cope with and recover from the crisis

Specialist advisors may include:	• specialists in emergency management, evacuation, fire, security and safety who use advanced techniques such as:
	  • Hazard and Operability Studies (HazOps)
	  • Management Oversight and Risk Tree (MORT)

RANGE STATEMENT
	• computer modelling • scenario analysis
Emergency response agencies may include:	• fire • police • ambulance • State Emergency Services (SES) • government departments • OHS authorities
Emergency sources of risk register may include:	• comprehensive list of events or conditions to be evaluated, their location, together with a range of possible scenarios or circumstances under which a crisis may occur • crisis risk management documentation such as risk assessments
Sources of information and data may include:	• enforcement notices and actions • inspection and incident records • international and national standards, codes of practice and guidelines • material safety data sheets (MSDSs) • organisational records and files • research literature • specialist advisors
Characteristics of the risk may include:	• significant features of the sources of risk such as: • area affected • duration • impact, taking account of the coping capacity of the organisation • intensity • likelihood • perceptions of severity • speed of onset
Crisis management plan may include:	• crisis risk management documentation, such as: • communications strategies • identification of issues • risk assessments/evaluations • risk management team lists • risk registers • treatment strategies

	• vulnerability profiles • initial response instructions for various roles/areas • policy, emergency response structure • program review and monitoring processes • resource inventory for response and recovery • responsibility and authority of individual roles • training requirements • warning systems
Stakeholders may include:	• external stakeholders such as local community (directly or via the media), representatives of special interest groups, insurance agencies, OHS regulators, local government and other relevant statutory bodies • internal stakeholders such as the board of management, managers, employees (and their families), contractors, visitors and others on site
Resources may include:	• community support agencies • personnel and equipment

Audit and review may include:	• evaluation of ongoing relevance of emergency and crisis plans considering likelihood and consequences of risks
	• analysis of the organisation to respond considering factors such as:
	  • available resources
	  • effectiveness of training, knowledge and skills of key personnel

Emergency control organisation may include:	• structured group within the organisation that includes roles such as emergency controller, communications recorder, media liaison and employee support personnel
External support and resource services may include:	• agencies such as Red Cross, government health departments, State Emergency Service and local government • community liaison and reference groups • counselling services • employer associations • local, non-official sources • unions
Reports may include:	• assumptions

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to advise on applying safe design principles to control occupational health and safety (OHS) risk during a product's life cycle. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	The central feature of safe design is the application of relevant information and data about human capabilities and behaviour to the design of objects, facilities, procedures and environments that people use. BSBOHS504B Apply principles of OHS risk management, and BSBOHS505C Manage hazards in the work environment, provide underpinning knowledge and skills for this unit. Knowledge of systematic approaches to managing OHS also underpins this unit.

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
1. Advise on the OHS requirements of the design process	1.1. Inform decision makers about their responsibility for the safety of downstream users and beneficiaries 1.2. Advise decision makers of their obligation under law to design and supply a safe designed product by eliminating OHS hazards and controlling for residual OHS risk 1.3. Promote OHS within the design requirements and include an overall risk evaluation of the designed product's life cycle 1.4. Source and make available to decision makers the most current information of OHS principles, materials, technology and systems for application in the design of the product 1.5. Identify and make available required education and training to enable decision makers to have the necessary skills and knowledge to identify and eliminate OHS hazards, and to control OHS risk in the design phase

	1.6. Identify and access relevant sources of information and data, for equipment users in particular 1.7. Consult potential users of the equipment during the design phase 1.8. Identify situations where specialist advisors may be required
2. Develop a systematic hazard identification and OHS risk evaluation system for safe design	2.1. Identify OHS hazards and conduct a risk analysis of associated risks across the life cycle of the designed product 2.2. Guide the selection and implementation of the most appropriate OHS risk controls for the designed product from a systematic analysis of the likelihood and consequences of injury or illness arising from exposure to identified OHS hazards 2.3. Ensure hazard identification and risk analysis includes potential alterations to the designed product during its life 2.4. Document decision making during the OHS risk evaluation process and make accessible to all parties 2.5. Establish a residual risk register, recording OHS hazards not eliminated in the design together with possible control strategies, and distribute this information to those involved in the downstream or subsequent life cycle stages 2.6. Monitor the design as it evolves to identify potential new OHS hazards and to manage risks if they become evident
3. Advise on principles of OHS risk control	3.1. Base design to minimise risk on the hierarchy of control 3.2. Minimise the impact of possible failure or defect, by ensuring the designed product includes fail-to-safe action
4. Advise on consultation processes between people involved in the life cycle of the designed product	4.1. Advise decision makers to consider the needs of the range of people who will use or interact with the designed product 4.2. Arrange consultation between all parties during the concept and detailed design phases to identify and eliminate OHS hazards and minimise risk 4.3. Appropriately communicate residual OHS risk in the designed product to those who will use or interact with the designed product throughout its life cycle
5. Advise on contractual	5.1. Advise decision makers involved in purchasing and

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- analytical skills to analyse relevant workplace information and data and to make observations of workplace tasks and interactions between people, their activities, equipment, environment and systems
- research skills to:
  - access relevant OHS information and data
  - use information and data gathering techniques such as brainstorming, polling, interviewing
- communication skills to:
  - conduct effective formal and informal meetings and to communicate effectively with personnel at all levels of the organisation, OHS specialists and, as required, emergency services personnel
  - use language and literacy skills appropriate to the workgroup and the task
  - prepare reports for a range of target groups including OHS committee, OHS representatives, managers, supervisors and other stakeholders
- project management skills to achieve continuous improvement and change
- organisational skills to manage own tasks within a timeframe
- information technology skills to access and enter internal and external information on OHS and to use a range of media
- attention to detail when making observations and recording outcomes

Required knowledge

- basic human cognitive and perceptual capabilities relevant to the design of human-machine interfaces
- basics of anthropometry and biomechanics
- difference between hazard and risk
- direct and indirect influences that impact on OHS and the environment in the design of product/s

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

• ethics related to professional practice
• formal and informal communication and consultation processes, and key personnel related to communication
• hierarchy of control and considerations for choosing between different control measures, such as possible inadequacies of particular control measures
• human error and implications for design of equipment, work practices and controlling ergonomic hazards
• how the characteristics and composition of the workforce impact on risk and the systematic approach to managing OHS, for example:
  • labour market changes
  • structure and organisation of workforce e.g. part-time, casual and contract workers, shift rosters, geographical location
  • language, literacy and numeracy
  • communication skills
  • cultural background/workplace diversity
  • gender
  • workers with specific needs
• interdependent relationships between ergonomics and workplace stressors such as psychosocial factors, occupational violence, shift work, repetitive work, awkward postures, lighting, thermal environment and work layout
• internal and external sources of OHS information and data
• key personnel, including identifying 'change agents', within workplace management structure
• legislative requirements for OHS information and data, and consultation
• organisational behaviour and culture as it impacts on OHS and on change
• pertinent sections of relevant Australian and other standards such as AS/NZS 4360: 2004 Risk management, National Standard for the Storage and Handling Workplace Dangerous Goods [NOHSC: 1015(2001)] and National Standard for Manual Handling [NOHSC: 1001 (1990)]
• principles and practices of a systematic approach to managing OHS

EVIDENCE GUIDE
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • application of OHS risk controls within a collaborative safe design process • products developed for effective application of knowledge and skill in applying OHS risk controls in a safe design process • use of these products • knowledge of professional liability in relation to providing advice.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to reports from other parties consulted in developing appropriate interactions between people involved in the life cycle of the designed product • access to relevant legislation, standards and guidelines, research or industry data • access to workplace documentation.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • demonstration of techniques used to apply principles to control OHS risk • observation of performance in role plays • observation of presentations • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of direct and indirect influences that impact on OHS and the environment in the design of product/s • review of information made available in relation to OHS principles, materials, technology and systems for application in the design of the product • evaluation of consultation of potential users of the equipment during the design phase • review of residual risk register established • assessment of decision making documented during the OHS risk evaluation process.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Decision makers may include:	• any party with influence over the specifications of the designed product including: • designer • client or commissioning agent • financier • manufacturer • supplier • purchaser • installer • user • insurer • importer • erector • maintainer • regulator • employees of these agents.
Hazards may include:	• source or situation with a potential for harm in terms of: • human injury or ill health • damage to property • damage to the environment • a combination of the above.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

RANGE STATEMENT
Sources of information and data may include:	• Australian and international anthropometric databases • commonwealth, state and territory OHS and other regulatory bodies • employer groups and unions • government and other advisory bodies such as Commonwealth Scientific and Industrial Research Organisation (CSIRO), National Health and Medical Research Council (NHMRC), Australian Consumers Association, Australian Safety and Compensation Council • industry advisory bodies • international and Australian Standards, codes of practice and guidance material • professional associations such as Ergonomics Society of Australia, Engineers Australia, Safety Institute of Australia • research literature.
Specialist advisors may include:	• architects, interior designers and builders • building surveyors and certifiers • design professionals • drafts people, quantity surveyors and surveyors • engineers (such as design, acoustic, safety, mechanical, chemical, civil) • health professionals • insurers • legal practitioners • maintenance and trades personnel • manufacturers • occupational hygienists • specialist ergonomists • suppliers and distributors • technical professionals • workplace trainers and assessors.
Risk analysis may include:	• defining the range of consequences • assessing the effectiveness of existing controls • deciding the likelihood of each consequence • combining these is some way to obtain a level of risk.
Life cycle may include:	• design • construction/manufacture

	• supply/installation • use • maintenance/servicing • decommissioning/dismantling • disposal.
Documenting decision making may include:	• assumptions • description of consequences and their likelihood • effectiveness of existing controls • factors affecting level of risk • further information and data, and investigation required • groups involved/consulted • information and data used in estimates • methods used • uncertainty in analysis.
OHS risk evaluation involves:	• comparison of risk with pre-established criteria for tolerance (or as low as reasonably achievable) and the subsequent ranking of risks requiring control

Risk register may include:	• list of the risks including:
	  • an indication of the likelihood of the consequence/s occurring
	  • possible consequence/s or outcome/s in terms of injury or damage
	  • scenarios or circumstances under which damage or injury may occur.

Hierarchy of control may include:	• eliminating the hazard • and where this is not practicable, minimising risk by: • substitution • isolating the hazard from personnel • using engineering controls • using administrative controls (e.g. procedures, training) • using personal protective equipment (PPE).
Parties may include:	• builder • commissioning agent • contractors • designer

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to conduct an internal or external occupational health and safety (OHS) audit that may or may not be part of certification against a recognised benchmark. It involves systematic examination against audit criteria to determine conformance with planned arrangements and the effectiveness of the organisation's approaches to managing OHS. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit covers the conduct of an OHS audit including developing an audit plan and tools to gather OHS information and data, ensuring client/management liaison and briefing, arranging access to information, setting up entry and exit meetings, and coordinating evaluation/audit and audit team against time lines and the submission of reports. This unit does not cover the evaluation (an integral part of an OHS audit), which is addressed in BSBOHS609B Evaluate an organisation's OHS performance. People having responsibility for an OHS audit will require competence in both units BSBOHS608B Conduct an OHS audit, and BSBOHS609B Evaluate an organisation's OHS performance. This unit applies to the auditing of systematic approaches to managing OHS, which may or may not be formalised as part of an OHS management system, and can apply to internal or external benchmarks. The scope and benchmark criteria for the audit will be agreed before the commencement of OHS information and data gathering and may address all areas of the organisation or an identified function, business or geographical area. An OHS audit may be conducted by an individual or by a team and may be concurrent with other management system audits or conducted as a stand alone exercise.

1. Plan an OHS audit	1.1. Define the scope, objectives and benchmark of the audit 1.2. Identify and obtain relevant documentation, including preliminary material, on the operation of the organisation 1.3. Identify and arrange resources required to conduct the audit 1.4. Assign timing, schedule and responsibilities for the audit
2. Develop an OHS audit plan	2.1. Ensure nature of information and data collected provides valid and reliable evidence of the systematic approach to managing OHS and risk controls within the context of the organisation 2.2. Include in sources of evidence key personnel and stakeholders 2.3. Ensure information and data collection strategies address issues of security, confidentiality, impartiality and equity 2.4. Include opportunities for corroborating evidence in information and data collection strategies 2.5. Develop and document the audit plan and submit to client 2.6. Modify the audit plan as a result of client input and preliminary trialling, and to adapt to contingencies as they arise 2.7. Re-submit audit plan to client for comment as appropriate 2.8. Negotiate issues concerning the audit plan with the client and amend documents where required
3. Develop an OHS audit tool	3.1. Ensure audit tool/s accurately reflect the criteria of the benchmark, nature of risks, identified relevant information and data types 3.2. Ensure audit tools focus on evaluation of performance of the OHS management processes 3.3. Ensure audit tools can be used with consistent outcomes by all members of the audit team 3.4. Enable audit tools to collect evidence in a timely and efficient manner 3.5. Modify audit tools as a result of preliminary trial/s

5. Undertake OHS audit activities	5.1. Undertake preliminary evaluation 5.2. Undertake initial meetings and worksite familiarisation 5.3. Monitor progress of the audit plan with the client and/or audit team members to ensure resources are being used as planned, and that the audit objectives and audit time lines are being achieved 5.4. Progressively document and retain records of evidence and findings, in an appropriate format 5.5. Report in a prompt manner to the appropriate person/s, including supervisor and/or person in control of the workplace, hazards identified during the audit 5.6. Address own health and safety during the audit in accordance with organisational requirements and standards for safe work practices 5.7. Ensure information and data collection and evaluation activities comply with legal requirements and are carried out ethically 5.8. Undertake exit meetings with key personnel and stakeholders as appropriate
6. Report on the outcomes of the OHS audit	6.1. Present summary audit findings and recommendations to the client at the closing meeting, after consultation with key personnel and stakeholders 6.2. Compare results of the evaluation against the audit criteria 6.3. Present objective evidence with clear and concise findings, including benefits to be achieved by adoption of the audit report recommendations 6.4. Anticipate possible challenges to the report and prepare further explanations to promote acceptance 6.5. Recommend to the client corrective action and

• professional liability in relation to providing advice • principles of effective meetings including agendas, action planning, chair and secretarial duties, minutes and action items • nature of workplace processes (including work flow, planning and control) and hazards relevant to the particular workplace • formal and informal communication and consultation processes, and key personnel related to communication • language, literacy and cultural profile of the workgroup.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • conduct of an internal or external OHS audit. ensuring underpinning knowledge of hazard identification, risk assessment and OHS risk management approaches are reflected in the audit tool/s and the methods used for collecting evidence • products developed for the design and development of audit plans, tools, associated documentation and the systematic examination against defined criteria to determine conformance to planned arrangements • how these products were developed • use of these products • knowledge of auditing methods and techniques.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to organisation documentation, information and data • access to workplace, including personnel involved in areas audited.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

	• analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • demonstration of techniques used in conducting an OHS audit • observation of performance in role plays • observation of presentations • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of nature of workplace processes (including work flow, planning and control) and hazards relevant to the particular workplace • review of audit plan • evaluation of audit tools developed and appropriateness of modifications • assessment of reporting on hazards identified during the audit • review of audit findings and recommendations.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Benchmark may include:	• Australian or international standards • industry standards • standards developed by OHS authorities • standards developed internally by the organisation or by commercial organisations
Relevant documentation may	• codes of practice

include:	• guidance material • industry standards • OHS legislation • organisational documents
Resources may include:	• equipment • specialist personnel

Information and data collected may include:	• claims
	• legal reports
	• complaints
	• hazard logs
	• incident and injury reports
	• enforcement notices and actions
	• surveillance audits
	• information and data changes since last audit such as new equipment, processes, products, substances or projects
	• interviews with management, supervisors, work groups, employees and other parties across a range of levels and roles including:
	  • health and safety representatives
	  • OHS committee members
	  • design personnel
	  • contractors
	• management system documentation including:
	  • policies and procedures
	  • position descriptions

	industry risk profiles • reports and management reviews • training materials and records

Systematic approach to managing OHS may include:	• comprehensive set of processes that are combined in a methodical and ordered manner to minimise the risk of injury or ill health in the workplace such as:
	  • allocation of resources
	  • review and evaluation for ongoing OHS improvement
	  • communication and consultation
	  • hazard management
	  • processes of OHS planning
	  • record keeping and reporting
	  • training and competency

Key personnel and stakeholders may include:	• management, persons in control of the workplace, supervisors
	• employees and other parties across a range of levels and roles including:
	  • health and safety representatives
	  • OHS committee members
	  • design personnel
	  • where appropriate, contractors
	• customers/clients

Audit plan may include:	• information and data required to be on hand • locations to be inspected • meetings to be scheduled, people to be interviewed • personnel involved • sampling methodology including statistical measures • scope of audit • time lines

Audit tool/s may include:	• instruments for collecting evidence and conducting the analysis and evaluation (they are not the same as the audit criteria or benchmark), which may be:
	  • adapted from existing tools
	  • developed specifically for the purpose
	  • purchased or accessed from existing tools

	  • descriptions of required characteristics to be checked
	  • limitations for and instructions for use
	  • performance checklists
	  • sets of questions to be asked

Alternative methods may include:	• alternate sampling methodologies • alternative information and data • discussion groups • how evidence deficiencies will be addressed • interviewing • modified audit checklists • observation • surveys
Preliminary evaluation may include:	• off-site consultations • reviews of relevant organisational documentation, information and data
Objective evidence may include:	• information and data obtained through observation, measurement, tests or other means

Follow-up processes may include:	• agreed meeting date with the client organisation, following sufficient time for implementation of corrective actions, and may include:
	  • checks of the rigour of original audit findings
	  • provision of new non-conformance report/s if required
	  • verification of effectiveness of recommendations and control action/s, particularly in correction of non-compliance

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to make judgements as a consequence of an occupational health and safety (OHS) audit and to evaluate an organisation's arrangements for identifying hazards, assessing and controlling risks, and monitoring and improving the effectiveness of the management of OHS and compliance against agreed benchmarks. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit focuses on evaluation of the effectiveness of an organisation's management of OHS. Aspects of the integration with other organisational management systems, the appropriateness of participative arrangements and OHS improvements are some components of the evaluation. The scope may cover OHS performance measures and outcomes, strategies, policies, programs, procedures and the organisation's resources. This unit applies to the auditing of systematic approaches to managing OHS, which may or may not be formalised as part of an OHS management system, and can apply to internal or external benchmarks. The scope and benchmark criteria for the OHS audit will be agreed before the commencement of information and data gathering, and may address all areas of the organisation or an identified function, business or geographical area. Achievement of this competency requires a demonstrated knowledge of the requirements to evaluate the OHS management system (OHSMS) that is in place. An OHSMS is that part of the organisation's overall management system that, for example, covers developing, implementing, reviewing and maintaining the activities for managing OHS risks. Thus, an OHSMS is one systematic approach to managing OHS. This unit is a companion unit to BSBOHS608B Conduct an OHS audit; together the units address the knowledge and skills required to conduct an OHS audit and to evaluate an organisation's OHS performance. People aspiring to skills for overall responsibility of an OHS audit will require competence in both units.

Elements and Performance Criteria

1. Evaluate effectiveness of systematic approaches to identifying OHS hazards	1.1. Identify workplace hazard identification activities being undertaken and compare them with organisational policies and procedures 1.2. Examine products, processes and systems to determine whether hazards of long latency and low frequency/high consequence are included and minimised 1.3. Examine products, processes and systems to determine whether risks to persons other than employees are identified and minimised 1.4. Identify organisational factors that impact on OHS 1.5. Review outcomes of the evidence gathering with specialist personnel, if required
2. Evaluate the effectiveness of systematic approaches to OHS risk management	2.1. Evaluate appropriateness of the organisation's risk assessment tool/s and processes 2.2. Assess outcomes of the risk assessment process for validity, reliability and inclusion of all major OHS risks, in particular demonstrated use of risk assessment methods in the organisation 2.3. Evaluate risk controls for suitability and effectiveness in relation to the organisation's systematic management of OHS
3. Evaluate the effectiveness of systematic OHS monitoring processes	3.1. Evaluate the scope of organisational processes to monitor the implementation and status of systematic approaches to managing OHS 3.2. Evaluate the quality of information and data obtained from the monitoring processes 3.3. Evaluate the managerial level of response to the issues raised in the monitoring process in relation to the level of risk
4. Assess whether the OHS management approaches have produced improved performance	4.1. Evaluate performance indicators, including positive performance indicators (PPIs) to determine whether they provide a true, reliable and timely measure of the effectiveness of the OHS management approaches to reducing OHS risk 4.2. Compare reported performance with evidence gathered and document differences 4.3. Evaluate outcomes of performance and document them in a clear and objective manner
5. Assess and advise on	5.1. Undertake systematic analysis to identify areas of

organisational OHS compliance against agreed benchmarks	OHS compliance and non-compliance with benchmarks 5.2. Provide advice on the impact of legislation and standards on the selection, suitability and implementation of a range of OHS performance interventions 5.3. Document outcomes of evaluation of compliance and report to key personnel and stakeholders

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- analytical skills to:
  - use information and relevant workplace information and data, and to make observations of workplace tasks and interactions between people, their activities, equipment, environment and systems
  - interpret information and data, to identify areas for improvement
- research skills to:
  - access relevant OHS information and data
  - use information and data gathering techniques such as brainstorming, polling, interviewing
- communication skills to:
  - relate effectively with personnel at all levels of the organisation, OHS specialists and, as required, emergency services personnel
  - prepare reports for a range of target groups including OHS committee, OHS representatives, managers, supervisors and other stakeholders
  - employ consultation and negotiation skills to develop plans, and to implement and monitor designated actions
  - conduct effective formal and informal meetings
  - use language and literacy skills appropriate to the workgroup and the task
- project management skills to achieve continuous improvement and change, and to contribute to strategic OHS performance of the organisation
- numeracy skills to carry out simple statistical analysis e.g. mean, standard deviation, regression
- organisational skills to manage own tasks within a timeframe
- information technology skills to:

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- access internal and external information and data on OHS
- prepare reports and to analyse and evaluate a range of information and data formats including graphs, maps, matrices, technical reports
- use electronic information and data systems to enter workplace information and data and to produce effective graphical representation
- use a range of communication media
- attention to detail when making observations and recording outcomes.

Required knowledge

- roles and responsibilities under OHS legislation of employees including supervisors, contractors, OHS inspectors
- principles of duty of care including concepts of causation, foreseeability, preventability
- legislative requirements for OHS information and data, and consultation
- roles and responsibilities in relation to communication and consultation for OHS committees, OHS representatives, line management, employees and inspectors
- state/territory and commonwealth OHS legislation (acts, regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material) including prescriptive and performance approaches and links to other relevant legislation such as industrial relations, equal employment opportunity, workers compensation, rehabilitation
- structure and forms of legislation including regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- principles of human behaviour and response to interactions with human, physical and task environment to identify psychosocial hazards
- hierarchy of control and considerations for choosing between different control measures, such as possible inadequacies of particular control measures
- standard industry controls for a range of hazards
- types of hazard identification tools including job system analysis (JSA)
- limitations of generic hazard and risk checklists, and risk ranking processes
- sampling methodologies, application and related statistical measures
- principles and practices of a systematic approach to managing OHS
- range of risk analysis/assessment techniques and tools, and the application and limitations of those techniques and tools
- requirements of OHS and standards related to systematically managing OHS
- other functional areas that impact on the management of OHS
- internal and external sources of OHS information and data
- how the characteristics and composition of the workforce impact on risk and the systematic approach to managing OHS, for example:
  - labour market changes
  - structure and organisation of workforce e.g. part-time, casual and contract workers, shift rosters, geographical location

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to contribute to the control of a project's scope by assisting with the identification of objectives, deliverables, constraints, assumptions and outcomes; and by applying controls once the project has commenced. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to a project team member working under the direction of a project manager with other project team members. The individual may be operating within an organisation or as a consultant. The skills should be applied in the context of multiple complex projects, with the individual operating as part of a specialist project management team. In the context of this unit a complex project is defined as a project which involves: • a comprehensive and multi faceted project plan • a formal internal or external communications strategy • a dedicated and diverse project budget • multiple administrative components • multiple operational components • a wide range of stakeholders • a project operations team. The functions performed by a worker managing a straightforward project or a section of a larger project where project management is not the main focus of the job

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- literacy skills sufficient to interpret potentially complex project plans and documentation
- planning and organisational skills to monitor and respond to compliance issues and to measure progress against agreed objectives
- teamwork and communication skills to liaise with other members of the project team on a range of project scope management issues and challenges.

Required knowledge

- elements which make up a project scope management plan
- methods for measuring work outcomes and progress against plans
- factors likely to impact on project scope
- methods for segmenting and documenting the work of a project.

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Delegated authority means:	• in a multi-disciplinary environment subject to frequent change • under limited guidance and supervision • within agreed authorisation and limits • within established organisational framework, procedures and routines
Project scheduling tools and techniques may include:	• assisting in qualitative and/or quantitative time analysis, such as schedule simulation, work breakdown structure, decision analysis, contingency planning and alternative strategy development • using personal experience and/or experts • using specialist time analysis tools to provide output to assist in the decision making process
Progress may refer to:	• diaries, incident logs, occurrence reports and other similar documentation • lists of potential schedule events • project and/or organisation files and records
Others may include:	• relevant authority • project manager • project specialists or other personnel • team members
Review of project outcomes may include:	• achievement of agreed major milestones, for example phases and sub-contracts • change of key personnel • delivery of major deliverables • finalisation of project and other agreed milestones

Release 2	New release of this Qualification released with version 6 of BSB07 Business Services Training Package. • Inclusion of 'audit of environmentally sustainable supply practices' in the Range Statement

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to assist with contracting and procurement for a project. It covers identifying procurement and contract requirements, assisting with contractor selection, conducting contracting and procurement activities and assisting with finalisation of activities for the project.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to a project team member working under the direction of a project manager with other project team members. The individual may be operating within an organisation or as a consultant. The skills should be applied in the context of multiple complex projects, with the individual operating as part of a specialist project management team.

In the context of this unit a complex project is defined as a project which involves:

- the need for a comprehensive and multi faceted project plan
- the need for a formal internal or external communications strategy
- a dedicated and diverse project budget
- multiple administrative components
- multiple operational components
- a wide range of stakeholders
- a project operations team.

The functions performed by a worker managing a straightforward project or a section of a larger project where project management is not the main focus of the job role are covered by BSBPMG510A Manage projects.

The functions performed by a project manager to manage procurement for the whole project are addressed in BSBPMG509A Manage project procurement.

Monitor and control contractors and suppliers and their activities for compliance with designated responsibilities, deliverables, time/cost and quality conformance and other requirements
4. Conduct finalisation activities	4.1. Test and accept supplies to ensure quality and suitability for purpose 4.2. Provide assistance in the ongoing review of project outcomes using available records and information to determine the effectiveness of contracting and procurement activities 4.3. Report contracting and procurement management issues and responses to others for application in future projects

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills
• organisational skills to participate in contract and procurement management • literacy skills to read and interpret contracts and procurement documentation • interpersonal skills to communicate effectively with contractors and suppliers about contract performance and obligations.
Required knowledge
• contract and procurement management framework as applied to project management • project procurement and contract management tools and techniques • broad legal contractual obligations of each party.

Evidence Guide

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • application of procurement and contract management techniques in relation to multiple complex projects • knowledge of the place and role of procurement in the project life cycle.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to examples of project contract and procurement documentation • access to records of project team participation in procurement tasks and activities.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skill and knowledge. The following assessment methods are appropriate for this unit: • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • analysis of responses addressing different case studies and scenarios which present issues and problems in procurement • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of strategies for project procurement and contracting and their application to different situations • review of procurement and contract management plans and other documentation associated with procurement processes • evaluation of information gathered on potential suppliers • assessment of recommendations made to assist in selecting preferred contractors • assessment of reports produced about contracting and procurement management issues.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • other units from the Certificate IV in Project Management.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Delegated authority means:	• subject to frequent change in a multi-disciplinary environment • under limited guidance and supervision • within agreed authorisation and limits • within established organisational framework, procedures and routines
Procurement activities may include:	• conducting transfer and disposal actions • confirming details and obtaining additional information about quotes etc. • formally receipting goods and services or providing formal notice of delivery of goods and services • identifying occupational health and safety (OHS) issues • liaising with client, contractors, sub-contractors and other stakeholders • maintaining registers and lists • obtaining approvals from higher project authorities • obtaining quotes from potential suppliers, providing quotes to potential clients or collaborating agencies and alliances • planning, specifying and/or conducting test and acceptance procedures • audit of environmentally sustainable supply practices • processing payment documentation
Reviews may include evaluations of:	• agreed major milestones, for example phases and sub-contracts • changes of key personnel • delivery of major deliverables • finalisation of project and other agreed milestones
Records may include:	• assets and disposal actions • lists of suppliers • procurement logs, registers

BSBPMG505A Manage project quality

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to manage quality within projects. It covers determining quality requirements, implementing quality assurance processes, and using review and evaluation to make quality improvements in current and future projects. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to an individual who is clearly and solely responsible for the management and leadership of a complex project, either as an employee of an organisation or an external consultant. In the context of this unit a complex project is defined as a project which involves: • the need for a comprehensive and multi faceted project plan • the need for a formal internal or external communications strategy • a dedicated and diverse project budget • multiple administrative components • multiple operational components • a wide range of stakeholders • a project operations team. The functions performed by a program manager to manage quality within multiple projects are addressed in BSBPMG605A Direct quality management of a project program.

	achievement of quality and overall project objectives 1.4. Include agreed quality requirements in the project plan and implement as basis for performance measurement
2. Implement quality assurance processes	2.1. Measure and document results of project activities and product performance throughout the project life cycle to determine compliance with agreed quality standards 2.2. Identify causes of unsatisfactory results, in consultation with client, and recommend appropriate actions to a higher project authority to enable continuous improvement in quality outcomes 2.3. Conduct inspections of quality processes and quality control results to determine compliance of quality standards to overall quality objectives 2.4. Maintain a quality management system to enable effective recording and communication of quality issues and outcomes to a higher project authority and stakeholders
3. Implement project quality improvements	3.1. Review processes and implement agreed changes continually throughout the project life cycle to ensure continuous quality improvement 3.2. Review project outcomes against performance criteria to determine the effectiveness of quality management processes and procedures 3.3. Identify and document lessons learned and recommended improvements, and pass on to higher project authority for application in future projects

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills
• literacy skills to develop quality objectives and criteria • communication and leadership skills to motivate staff, convey expectations and ensure outcomes are met • analytical skills to monitor achievement of project outcomes against quality criteria

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
• coaching and mentoring skills to boost performance.
Required knowledge

• quality management theory, techniques, tools and methodologies
• roles and responsibilities in project management
• methods for managing and improving performance
• relevant legislation codes and national standards:
  • award and enterprise agreements and industrial instruments
  • industry codes of practice
  • legislation from all levels of government that affects business operation, especially in regard to occupational health and safety and environmental issues, equal opportunity, industrial relations and anti-discrimination.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • demonstrated evidence of successfully managing project staff so that quality outcomes were achieved on multiple complex projects • knowledge of a range of quality management tools, techniques and methodologies.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to project documentation which includes quality criteria and evidence of quality monitoring and improvement practices • consideration of feedback from project stakeholders regarding project quality management.
Method of assessment	This unit applies to an individual who is clearly and solely responsible for the management and leadership of a complex project, either as an employee of an organisation or an external consultant. • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of strategies for managing project quality and their application to different situations • analysis of candidate responses in addressing case studies and scenarios which present project quality management issues and problems • review of project plan quality requirements • review of implementation of agreed changes • evaluation of review of project outcomes against performance criteria.

Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • other units from the Diploma of Project Management.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Quality objectives may include:	• negotiated trade-offs between cost, schedule and performance • requirements from a higher project authority • requirements from the client and other stakeholders • those quality aspects which may impact on customer satisfaction
Quality management plan may include:	• authorisations and responsibilities for quality control • continuous improvement • established processes • quality assurance

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to manage a straightforward project or a section of a larger project. This unit addresses the management of projects including the development of a project plan, administering and monitoring the project, finalising the project and reviewing the project to identify lessons learnt for application to future projects. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	The unit focuses on the application of project management skills and the requirement to meet time lines, quality standards, budgetary limits and other requirements set for the project. The unit does not apply to specialist project managers. For specialist project managers, the units of competency in the Project Management competency field will be applicable.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
1. Define project	1.1. Access project scope and other relevant documentation 1.2. Define project stakeholders 1.3. Seek clarification from delegating authority of any issues related to project and project parameters 1.4. Identify limits of own responsibility and reporting requirements 1.5. Clarify relationship of project to other projects and to the organisation's objectives 1.6. Determine and access available resources to undertake project
2. Develop project plan	2.1. Develop project plan including timelines, work breakdown structure, role and responsibilities and other details of how the project will be managed in relation to the project parameters 2.2. Identify and access appropriate project management tools

	2.3. Formulate risk management plan for project, including occupational health and safety (OHS) 2.4. Develop and approve project budget 2.5. Consult team members and take their views into account in planning the project 2.6. Finalise project plan and gain any necessary approvals to commence project according to documented plan
3. Administer and monitor project	3.1. Take action to ensure project team members are clear about their responsibilities and the project requirements 3.2. Provide support for project team members, especially with regard to specific needs, to ensure that the quality of the expected outcomes of the project and documented time lines are met 3.3. Establish and maintain required record keeping systems throughout the project 3.4. Implement and monitor plans for managing project finances, resources (human, physical and technical) and quality 3.5. Complete and forward project reports as required to stakeholders 3.6. Undertake risk management as required to ensure project outcomes are met 3.7. Achieve project deliverables
4. Finalise project	4.1. Complete financial record keeping associated with project and check for accuracy 4.2. Assign staff involved in project to new roles or reassign to previous roles 4.3. Complete project documentation and obtain any necessary sign offs for concluding project
5. Review project	5.1. Review project outcomes and processes against the project scope and plan 5.2. Involve team members in the project review 5.3. Document lessons learnt from the project and report within the organisation

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills
• communication and negotiation skills to work with team members and other stakeholders to maintain project schedules • literacy skills to read, write and review a range of documentation • planning and organising skills to develop, monitor and maintain implementation schedules • numeracy skills to analyse data, and to compare time lines and promotional costs against budgets • culturally appropriate communication skills to relate to people from diverse backgrounds and people with diverse abilities.
Required knowledge

• relevant legislation from all levels of government that may affect aspects of business operations, such as:
  • anti-discrimination legislation
  • ethical principles
  • codes of practice
  • privacy laws
  • environmental issues
  • OHS
• organisational structure, and lines of authority and communication within the organisation
• how the project relates to organisation's overall mission, goals, objectives and operations.

competency in this unit	• development of a project plan • details of monitoring arrangement/s and evaluation of the project plan's efficacy to address time lines and budgets of project • knowledge of relevant legislation.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to workplace project documentation.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • observation of presentations • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of how the project relates to the organisation's overall mission, goals, objectives and operations • review of project risk management plan and project plan • evaluation of project reports forwarded to stakeholders • analysis of documentation reviewing project outcomes and processes against the project scope and plan • evaluation of documentation outlining lessons learnt from the project.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • other project management units.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. BSBPMG601A Direct the integration of projects

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to manage the integration of all functions of project management in a program or multiple project context. This covers managing conflicting priorities between projects, directing project managers in re aligning projects within the program, directing the internal environment with the needs and expectations of the external environment, and directing projects within the program throughout their life cycle. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	A program is defined as a set of interrelated projects, each of which has a project manager. Multiple projects (sometimes called a portfolio of projects) refers to a number of projects related in some way and managed by the same person as a program to achieve a common organisational objective/s. For the purposes of this unit someone who manages a suite of projects (a program) will be referred to as a program manager. The functions performed by a project manager to manage integration within individual projects are addressed in BSBPMG501A Manage application of project integrative processes.

	project plans into a structured, cohesive program plan for ongoing program management 1.4. Derive integrated program control mechanisms from project plans, to establish program control requirements 1.5. Use project plans to develop consolidated program budgets, schedules and interdependencies, and to identify program risks
2. Direct the internal project environment to meet external needs and expectations	2.1. Direct the internal project working environment to ensure project managers' work is conducted effectively throughout multiple, aligned project life cycles 2.2. Establish and maintain links to direct the alignment between projects and organisational objectives within the program 2.3. Evaluate project proposals (scope definitions) against the organisation's strategic objectives 2.4. Coordinate and direct conflicting requirements of individual projects to achieve program objectives 2.5. Modify, where necessary, individual project objectives to achieve overall program objectives 2.6. Coordinate the impact of external environmental influences on individual projects to achieve program objectives
3. Direct projects throughout project life cycles	3.1. Direct all project managers to provide project phases, approval points, review points and other milestones, to allow program integration 3.2. Establish project baselines and report progress in relation to these baselines, to measure program performance throughout the business reporting cycle 3.3. Progressively review project baselines to ensure nominated benefits are consistent with organisational expectations 3.4. Direct finalisation plans, procedures and activities to ensure final outcomes are met and that projects meet agreed program objectives 3.5. Review projects finalised in a program management reporting period to evaluate benefits to the business 3.6. Pass on integration management lessons learned to higher project authority and provide feedback for application to other projects

Monitor internal and external influences on program costs and, where necessary, seek approval from business management for changes to the approved program budget
3. Direct financial completion	3.1. Provide direction for project finalisation activities to achieve integrated financial and physical project completion within program and therefore client and organisational expectations 3.2. Review project outcomes from available records at the finalisation of each project, and analyse information to determine the effectiveness of cost management systems 3.3. File program lessons learned as a resource for future reference and, where necessary, refer to higher project authority for application in planning strategic direction changes and business outcomes for future projects

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- technology skills to oversee project financial performance
- numeracy skills to develop and interpret project budgets and to provide financial information
- literacy skills to communicate decisions and to write quality reports
- leadership skills to inspire trust and confidence in teams, managers and stakeholders
- communication and interpersonal skills to convey expectations, resolve conflict and motivate performance
- planning skills to review project resource requirements and to cost estimates
- problem-solving skills to resolve costing issues.

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
Required knowledge
• regulatory and legislative financial reporting requirements • methods for costing and estimating project resources • methods for monitoring and controlling project expenditure.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • demonstrated experience in directing cost management approaches across a range of concurrent projects • knowledge of regulatory and legislative financial reporting requirements.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to financial documentation and files • consideration of feedback from project team and other stakeholders as to how program costs were managed.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skill and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance of scope management techniques by the candidate • analysis of responses addressing different project cost management case studies and scenarios • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of strategies for managing project costs and their application to different situations • review of written reports on financial outcomes of projects • review of how cost management systems were developed and maintained.

Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • other units in the Advanced Diploma of Project Management.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Cost estimation may take account of:	• availability of information at the time • contingencies to allow for identified risks and uncertainty • government regulations, industry codes of practice and organisational influences • overhead and profit margin • stage in each project's life cycle
Cost management plans and activities throughout program management may:	• be conducted non-routinely to meet complex and changing circumstances • be done independently or by taking the lead in a team environment • involve consultation with, and selective involvement of, appropriate project stakeholders • involve the selection, modification and supervision of the use of appropriate cost management methods, processes, procedures, tools and techniques • take into account the impact of organisational and environmental change on the project/program and vice versa

Management of project finances may include:	• approval processes • audit and review • communication, reports and briefs • financial authorisations/delegations • invoice procedures
Development of cost management systems may involve:	• application of personal judgement • authorising and revising financial delegations • cost modelling and estimating • financial analysis, for example benefit-cost analysis, cash flow analysis, earned value analysis • modification of program methodologies and procedures • program obligation, expenditure forecasting and long-term planning • progress and financial change management

Finalisation activities may include:	• comparison of one project's cost management outcomes with success rates of other projects and with overall (organisation) budgetary expectations
	• direction of project team managers in their:
	  • final audit/reconciliation
	  • close-out of account codes and other financial documentation
	  • settling of financial liabilities
	  • transfer of assets to the client or originating owner
	  • transition of responsibility/ownership of project deliverables/products
	  • warranty requirements resolution

Records may take the form of:	• budgets, commitment and expenditure • cost management lessons learned • cost management plans • financial charts and graphs • financial summaries • program and/or organisation files and records • records of potential and actual costs • reports to higher authority

BSBPMG605A Direct quality management of a project program

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to direct quality management across multiple projects and within the overall program. It covers directing the development of quality requirements, directing quality assurance management, and reviewing and improving the quality of projects and the program. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	A program is defined as a set of interrelated projects, each of which has a project manager. Multiple projects (sometimes called a portfolio of projects) refers to a number of projects related in some way and managed by the same person as a program to achieve a common organisational objective/s. For the purposes of this unit someone who manages a suite of projects (a program) will be referred to as a program manager. The functions performed by a project manager to manage quality within individual projects are addressed in BSBPMG505A Manage project quality.

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	A program is defined as a set of interrelated projects, each of which has a project manager. Multiple projects (sometimes called a portfolio of projects) refers to a number of projects related in some way and managed by the same person as a program to achieve a common organisational objective/s. For the purposes of this unit someone who manages a suite of projects (a program) will be referred to as a program manager. The functions performed by a project manager to manage procurement within individual projects are addressed in BSBPMG509A Manage project procurement. It should be noted that conflicting priorities between projects are managed with higher project authority support, in this case project governance committees or senior management.

BSBREL701A Develop and cultivate collaborative partnerships and relationships

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to establish collaborative partnerships and relationships with business and industry stakeholders to promote and advance learning programs. The unit also covers communicating to influence others, cultivating new and existing partnerships, establishing positive collaborative relationships, leading the establishment of a partnership program and establishing reporting mechanisms. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to leaders or managers working in either an educational organisation or a non educational enterprise where learning is used to build capabilities. It includes forming partnerships or other collaborative arrangements to achieve improved learner, community, career, or work outcomes. Educational leaders gain the respect of colleagues, contacts, clients and the community through demonstrating professionalism in all aspects of their work; this professionalism is underpinned by their educational expertise and effective interpersonal and communication skills. In the vocational education and training sector, learning leaders and managers must build partnerships and lead in a collaborative manner to ensure learning has a strategic role in the ever changing context, and in the face of complex influences that affect learning.

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to undertake legal research using secondary sources and under supervision. This includes identifying research requirements and sources of information, applying information to a set of facts, evaluating the quality of the information, and preparing and producing reports. A range of legislation, rules, regulations and codes of practice may apply to this unit at the time of endorsement, depending on job roles and jurisdictions.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals who apply a well established, sound theoretical knowledge base in performing a range of research tasks and preparing a range of reports in a legal context. Its application in the workplace will be determined by the job role of the individual and the legislation, rules, regulations and codes of practice relevant to different jurisdictions.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
1. Identify specific legal data and information requirements	1.1. Liaise with designated person to clarify specific legal data and information needs 1.2. Prepare research plan and prioritise activities 1.3. Identify resources and technical requirements 1.4. Assign timelines to tasks and delegate tasks where appropriate
2. Undertake research	2.1. Identify sources of legal data and information 2.2. Research and identify key information to be extracted
3. Review research	3.1. Check information to ensure that extracted details are acknowledged and recorded for copyright and other legal requirements 3.2. Analyse legal data and information for relevance to facts 3.3. Edit and collate legal data and information to fit

Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential:
	• formulating a research proposal or plan which includes:
	  • specific research questions or hypotheses
	  • valid population or sample size
	  • description of the geographical, cultural, social or institutional context within which the research will be carried out
	  • full description of the data collection methods
	  • analysis of the limitations to research design
	• designing an applied research project using appropriate tools and techniques
	• research report with analysis of data, and valid and reliable findings
	• utility and relevance of the research results
	• knowledge of applied research techniques.

Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • research activity relates to an actual workplace or simulated context and topic • competence is consistently demonstrated over time, over a range of applied topics, and using a range of tools and techniques appropriate to the given situations and research topic.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • applied projects or assessment activities relating to conducting applied research • observation of contextual application of skills • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of applied research.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended,

	• occupational health and safety • predetermined service user group • skill or competency profile • socioeconomic background
Applied research strategy may cover:	• analysis of industry specific trends, statistics and issues • collection of data to assist informed decision making, planning or risk management • data and information relating to strategy, policy, practices, or work processes developed and implemented by an organisation • formation of solutions to complex problems • information and analysis needed to develop a campaign, strategic plan, industry or sector plan and strategy, or to bargain effectively with employers • information and analysis to conduct a strategic or community campaign or activity • relationship or relevance of a theory, principle or practice to an immediate practical problem, issue or to test a proposed solution
Factors affecting reliability and validity may include:	• sample size • type or survey used (e.g. comparing types and methods to increase validity) • capacity to generalise findings across the whole population • access appropriate population
Hypothesis is:	• conceptual or operational proposition or explanation that will be tested through the conduct of the applied research
Tools may be:	• designed for electronic or physical presentation • involve a range of technologies (online or computer-based)
Resources may include:	• components required • design specifications • infrastructure • monetary • physical • technical manuals • samples
Applied research methods and	• methods such as:

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
1. Identify classes of records justifying review	1.1. Compile and review a list of the criteria for review to be met by records and formats 1.2. Apply the records in the subject jurisdiction criteria 1.3. Identify and document the records that meet the criteria
2. Review disposal authority and access conditions	2.1. Identify disposal authority, disposal class references and any access and security conditions for records, in accordance with industry practice 2.2. Identify and document records for which neither a disposal authority nor an access restriction exist, in accordance with industry practice 2.3. Assemble copies of related appraisal reports and access conditions for analysis 2.4. Make comparisons and take notes of any anomalies arising from the comparison, and recommend changes to existing disposal authorities and access conditions

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

3. Prepare new appraisal reports	3.1. Prepare new appraisal reports including reference to criteria justifying the review 3.2. Make new interpretations of existing access criteria in light of criteria justifying the review 3.3. Expose new appraisals and access interpretations to appropriate stakeholders for comment, and submit for approval
4. Implement recommendations and re interpretations	4.1. Prepare methodology for implementation and assemble necessary resources 4.2. Produce and promulgate revised disposal authorities and access conditions 4.3. Document progress throughout implementation and record any issues or implications arising from revised disposal authorities and access conditions 4.4. Document implementation process and outcomes in organisation's business or recordkeeping systems

Required skills
• communication skills to explain and clarify procedures, and to consult with users of a records or business system • literacy skills to read and interpret record content, functions and problems • problem-solving and analysis skills to interpret and apply access and security rules, retention and disposal skills • self management skills to accurately record metadata.
Required knowledge

• key provisions of relevant legislation from all forms of government, regulations, standards and documentation that may affect aspects of business operations, such as:
  • AS 5044.1:2002 AGLS Metadata element set
  • AS 5090:2003 Work process analysis for recordkeeping
  • AS ISO 15489:2004 Records management

Required skills
• privacy and freedom of information • archives and records legislation • occupational health and safety • general principles and processes of records management and records management systems, such as: • systems of control • records continuum theory • mandate and ownership of business process • organisational business functions, structure and culture • organisational policies, strategies and procedures, particularly those relating to records access and security.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • defining issues in relation to a review of records • identifying potential recordkeeping implications of a change in the disposal status of records.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to an actual workplace or simulated environment • access to office equipment and resources • access to examples of records, recordkeeping systems and policies • access to workplace reference materials such as procedural manuals and company policies.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

EVIDENCE GUIDE
	• direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • review of revised disposal authorities and access conditions • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of general principles and processes of recordkeeping systems.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • administration units • other knowledge management units.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Compiling and reviewing criteria may include:	• considering requirements for vital records including:
	  • legal liabilities
	  • ownership rights or entitlements
	  • policy records, precedents and decisions
	  • rights or entitlements of individuals
	• consulting identifying documentation found in:
	  • databases
	  • lists
	  • notes in relation to the records
	  • proforma
	• consulting retention and disposal schedules, which may be:
	  • continuing
	  • functional

	• general
	• multiple
	• one-time
	• single
	• identifying:
	  • access restrictions
	  • any extenuating impediments to the destruction of records
	  • how information is likely to be presented and manipulated
	  • how information is likely to be retrieved
	  • how many people will need to retrieve the information
	  • what information is needed

Criteria for review may include:	• particular subject, for example, having political, educational, scientific, sociological or other interest • sustainability - voluminous record that is not used sufficiently frequently might not justify the resources its preservation consumes • sensitivity - some records may be deemed so sensitive that they may never be used for research • data extraction - previously unused means of extracting data from a particular record may increase its value • environmental context - business environments, community expectations, governance frameworks, legislative and regulatory mandates or relevant recordkeeping principles and standards

Records and formats may include:	• different stages of use:
	  • active
	  • archival
	• digital:
	  • remote drives
	  • servers
	  • CDs
	  • DVDs
	  • imaging systems

BSBRKG403C Set up a business or records system for a small business

Modification History

Release	Comments
Release 1	This version first released with BSB07 Business Training Package version 6.0. Revised unit. Required knowledge and Range Statement changed to include environmentally sustainable practices. Replaces BSBRKG403B Set up a business or records system for a small business

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to research, develop and implement business or records systems for a small office.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to individuals who are required to demonstrate understanding of a broad knowledge base incorporating some theoretical recordkeeping concepts. The application is in relation to individuals working in a range of 'small' office environments where, in most cases, recordkeeping is only part of the individual's responsibilities; the unit addresses the less formal recordkeeping requirements of micro or small businesses or branches and technical operations centres of larger organisations.

Typically, the individual would report to a supervisor or manager within the organisation and be solely responsible for the development and implementation of business or records systems, including training users of the system.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • monitoring usage of online business or records system • monitoring application of system procedures • managing records as they are created, updated, migrated and disposed of.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • examples of real or simulated records, recordkeeping system and policies. • workplace reference materials such procedural manuals and company policies.

Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios • demonstration of techniques in a workplace or simulated environment • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • review of authenticated documents from the workplace or training environment • tests of knowledge on general principles and processes of recordkeeping systems.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • general administration units • other knowledge management units.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Systems relating to online records may include:	• archival control systems
	• business systems
	• cash register-based systems
	• characteristics relating to:
	  • aggregations
	  • context
	  • entities

RANGE STATEMENT
	• metadata • current business or records systems • ERDMS (Electronic Records and Document Management System) • informal • paper-based accumulation and card systems • PC-based accounting systems, employee and tax records systems • proprietary recordkeeping package • storage facilities systems

Records may include:	• digital, such as:
	  • remote drives
	  • servers
	  • CDs
	  • DVDs
	  • imaging systems
	  • PC-based applications
	  • mainframe
	  • server

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to set the operational frameworks for the creation, capture and use of records and to monitor and review these frameworks and activities within a business or records system of a specific business domain. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals who are required to demonstrate understanding of a broad knowledge base, incorporating theoretical concepts with substantial depth in some areas. The application is in relation to managing and monitoring business and records systems or work carried out in specialist recordkeeping environments, such as archives. While these people will work closely with other staff members throughout an organisation, they may also have a degree of individual responsibility and autonomy.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
1. Determine requirements or modifications	1.1. Identify and document core business, supporting activities, resources, business and social context, using observation and consultation
	1.2. Determine security and access requirements for business or records system content from analysis of organisation's activities
	1.3. Analyse organisational reporting and accountability requirements in the context of the business documentation
	1.4. Identify organisational functions and activities for which records must be kept, from analysis of business and context documentation
	1.5. Determine nature, detail, and format of records (content and metadata) for each organisational function from analysis of the business and its context

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

2. Devise an appropriate recordkeeping system	2.1. Determine metadata needed to manage records (store, locate and retrieve) in a business or records system 2.2. Select scale, and number of business or records systems appropriate to scale and nature of business operations 2.3. Select technological requirements of business or records systems appropriate to scale and nature of business operations 2.4. Select cost structure for business or records systems appropriate to scale, nature, and organisational cash flow requirements 2.5. Ensure maintenance, disposal and updating requirements of business or records system conform to scale, nature, and culture of the organisation 2.6. Select business or records system suited to the projected growth of the organisation
3. Develop an implementation plan	3.1. Identify and document recordkeeping responsibilities of individual personnel or organisational units 3.2. Develop measurable performance indicators for recordkeeping activities 3.3. Develop procedures and guidelines for capturing and controlling records 3.4. Communicate an implementation plan to users of the system and other relevant organisational staff
4. Monitor and review business or records system	4.1. Monitor and notify staff in accordance with approved timeframes, frequency, and organisational policies and guidelines where applicable 4.2. Record details of variation from business or records system's rules, standards and procedures that exceed agreed limits 4.3. Provide required reports to appropriate authority relating to use and maintenance of records 4.4. Designate responsibilities to staff for record creation and capture activities in accordance with organisational policies
5. Identify and respond to problems and changes	5.1. Identify any problems and changes that require a systemic response using the monitoring reports and external events 5.2. Make recommendations for revisions to systems, procedures, and strategic plans in response to identified variations, changes and problems 5.3. Devise amendments to systems and implementation or other plans where required 5.4. Prepare recommendations for system amendments, planning and implementation 5.5. Authorise or gain authorisation, for procedures for using the business or records systems, and for any subsequent alterations and amendments to the procedures

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication skills to explain and clarify procedures, and to interview users to identify their records or information needs
- literacy skills to read and interpret nature of record content, functions and problems
- negotiation skills to achieve suitable results for the organisation's recordkeeping practices
- problem-solving and analysis skills to interpret and apply recordkeeping principles and practices
- research skills to investigate changes and innovation in design and operation of business or records system
- self management skills to accurately record metadata.

Required knowledge

- construction and use of language in the organisation in relation to recordkeeping (past and present)
- key provisions of relevant legislation from all forms of government, regulations, standards and documentation that may affect aspects of business operations, such as:
  - AS 5044.1:2002 AGLS Metadata element set

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to document or reconstruct a business or records system and its context over time. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals who are required to demonstrate understanding of a broad knowledge base, incorporating theoretical concepts with substantial depth in some areas. The application is in relation to those who work closely with other members of an organisation and have individual responsibility for documenting or reconstructing systems, and to those who work in specialist recordkeeping environments, such as archives. The unit can be applied equally to all types of collections of records, although historically it has been understood to relate only to traditional archival work. A business or records system may need to be reconstructed for a variety of reasons, including: • capturing into archival control systems for access and control purposes • changes to the system of control including computerisation or migration between systems • transfer of an organisation's ownership or control arising from amalgamation, takeover or bankruptcy • administrative change, closure of offices or changes in accommodation.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to develop new or modified vocabulary controls and classification schemes for business or records systems based on an organisation's functions and activities. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals who are required to demonstrate understanding of a broad knowledge base, incorporating theoretical concepts with substantial depth in some areas. The application is in relation to those who work closely with other staff members throughout an organisation, and who may also have individual responsibility for the development and implementation of systems, or may be working in a specialist recordkeeping environment such as archives. Generally, where no formal vocabulary controls exist in an organisation there is a form of controlled titling. This unit covers the formalisation of such informal schemes. Vocabulary control, or controlled language, is commonly called a 'thesaurus' in some sectors of the recordkeeping industry. Where a new system of vocabulary controls is put in place, or amendments to current controls are introduced, many organisations may choose to implement training or development programs to assist users with implementation.

2. Develop draft terminology and classification scheme	2.1. Prepare draft vocabulary controls and titling rules 2.2. Ensure draft vocabulary controls reflect organisation's business culture, operational realities and business language 2.3. Identify broad classification groups from a functional analysis 2.4. Analyse and decompose broad classification groups to the level required for an organisation's use 2.5. Document draft classification scheme
3. Validate draft terminology and classification scheme	3.1. Prepare methodology for the validation process taking local imperatives and environment into consideration 3.2. Conduct consultation with users to identify issues, problems, inconsistencies and any required amendments or additions to draft classification scheme, existing language and vocabulary controls 3.3. Conduct testing and encourage feedback from users to identify any problems and inconsistencies with draft classification scheme and terminology 3.4. Document outcomes throughout the validation process
4. Implement and review terminology and classification scheme	4.1. Prepare classification scheme and terminology from validation and research 4.2. Undertake negotiations with competing interests within the organisation to ensure common understanding and appropriateness of work use and definitions 4.3. Note where existing system requires modification, and prepare specific recommendations in accordance with organisational guidelines 4.4. Prepare final report of terminology and classification scheme, in accordance with organisational practice and Australian Standards and international standards 4.5. Evidence Guide

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to an actual workplace or simulated environment • access to office equipment and resources • access to examples of records, recordkeeping system and policies • access to workplace reference materials such as procedural manuals and company policy.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios • demonstration of techniques • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • review of methodology prepared for the validation process • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of general principles and processes of recordkeeping systems.

EVIDENCE GUIDE
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • administration units • other knowledge management units.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Examining the work of an organisation may include review of:	• annual reports • controlled language schemes from existing and other organisations • legislation • memoranda and articles • organisational charts • policies • procedural manuals • publicity brochures and leaflets • service directories • strategic and business plans
Other relevant materials and documents may include:	• organisational charts • policies • procedural manuals • service directories • strategic and business plans • vocabulary control tools from other organisations
Classification may be organised by:	• body of knowledge • organisation function and/or activity • subject
Draft classification scheme	• hierarchical structure, that is specific to an organisation

should include:	• sufficient classes and sub-classes to include all business functions and activities being documented • terminology in accordance with organisational and industry standards for terminology and usage
Methodology for the validation process may include:	• focus groups • interviews • number and location of sites • resources available • size of organisation • survey • targeting and involvement of key individuals and groups • testing • time available • user-driven
Final report may include:	• implications for implementation • inclusion in organisational policy • provision for review • scope of compliance
Appropriate individual or body for review may include:	• business managers • business owner • nominated senior management representative/s • senior management team • system users

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to define, identify and establish the recordkeeping framework for an organisation or business unit at functional level. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals with understanding and specialist knowledge, with depth in some areas of business or records systems. The application is in relation to senior staff in a specialist recordkeeping environment with responsibility for a team, though the unit may also apply to individuals with sole responsibility for recordkeeping systems within larger enterprises. The development of a recordkeeping framework enables employees to create records that will adequately document the business activities in which they take part. It will also ensure that the information and processing systems which support business activities create appropriate records as part of their role in supporting those activities. The recordkeeping framework includes regulatory requirements, areas of risk, evidence to be captured as records, and responsibilities for recordkeeping to develop business systems.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to determine the structure, content and context of records to document a business function. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals with understanding and specialist knowledge, with depth in some areas of business or records systems. The application is in relation to individuals with specialist knowledge in business or records systems. These people will generally be senior staff in a specialist recordkeeping environment with responsibility for a team, though they may also be individuals with sole responsibility for recordkeeping systems within larger enterprises. Note that the record requirements for a given function tend to have a longer life span than any system developed to manage its records; this is particularly the case with computerised systems in which specifications tend to change with each cycle of software upgrade.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to effectively measure current resource use and to carry out improvements including reducing the negative environmental impact of work practices. This unit requires the ability to access industry information, and applicable legislative and occupational health and safety (OHS) guidelines. While no licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply holistically to this unit at the time of publication, relevant national, state and territory legislation, regulations and codes of practice impact upon this unit.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to operators/team members under supervision or guidance, who are required to follow workplace procedures and instructions, and to work in an environmentally sustainable manner. It covers: efficient resource use potential environmental hazards regulatory compliance improving environmental performance (within the scope of competency, authority and own level of responsibility). It addresses the knowledge, processes and techniques necessary to participate in environmentally sustainable work practices.

2. Comply with environmental regulations	2.1. Follow workplace procedures to ensure compliance 2.2. Report breaches or potential breaches to appropriate personnel
3. Seek opportunities to improve resource efficiency	3.1. Follow organisational plans to improve environmental practices and resource efficiency 3.2. Work as part of a team, where relevant, to identify possible areas for improvements to work practices in own work area 3.3. Make suggestions for improvements to workplace practices in own work area

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- analytical skills to comply with all relevant legislation associated with job specifications and procedures
- communication and problem-solving skills to question, seek clarification and make suggestions relating to work requirements and efficiency
- communication and teamwork skills to recognise procedures; to follow instructions; to respond to change, such as current workplace environmental/sustainability frameworks; and to support team work and participation in a sustainable organisation
- literacy, numeracy and technology skills to interpret workplace information in relation to work role, and to document and measure resource use
- technology skills to select and use technology appropriate for a task.

Required knowledge

- environmental and resource hazards/risks
- environmental or sustainability legislation, regulations and codes of practice applicable to own work role
- OHS issues and requirements
- organisational structure, and reporting channels and procedures
- relevant environmental and resource efficiency systems and procedures
- sustainability in the workplace
- terms and conditions of employment including policies and procedures, such as

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • accessing, interpreting and complying with a range of environment/sustainability legislation and procedural requirements relevant to daily responsibilities • accurately following organisational information to participate in and support an improved resource efficiency process and reporting as required • developing and/or using tools such as inspection checklists, to collect and measure relevant information on organisation resource consumption, within work role • identifying organisational improvements by applying efficient resource use to daily activities • knowledge of environmental and resource hazards/risks.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to an actual workplace or simulated environment • evidence is relevant to the particular workplace role, including work area, equipment, systems, and documentation • review of current work area directly relating to own work, to assess measurement of resources used, hazards and compliance • individual or team discussion about potential for increased resource efficiency within current work area • access to workplace documents, information and resources (such as compliance obligations, enterprise plans, work responsibilities).

Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used t assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • observation of demonstrated techniques over time and in a range of situations • analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios • review of documentation measuring current resource usage • evaluation of techniques used to document and measure current usage of resources • review of identified and reported workplace environmental hazards • evidence of active participation in organisational plans to improve environmental practices and resource efficiency.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • BSBINN201A Contribute to workplace innovation • BSBSMB301A Investigate micro business opportunities • BSBWOR202A Organise and complete daily work activities.

efficiency issues may include:	• minimising environmental risks • promoting more efficient production and consumption of natural resources, for example minimising waste by participating in or using a waste management system • using resources efficiently such as material usage, energy usage (seeking alternative sources of energy or energy conservation) or efficient water usage
Appropriate techniques may include:	• examining and documenting resources in work area • examining invoices from suppliers • examining relevant information and data • measuring resource usage under different conditions • reports from other parties involved in the process of identifying and implementing improvements

Compliance may include:	• meeting relevant laws, by-laws and regulations or best practice to support compliance in environmental performance and sustainability at each level as required (such as Environmental Protection or Biodiversity Conservation Act):
	  • international
	  • commonwealth
	  • state/territory
	  • local government
	  • industry
	  • organisation

Organisational plans may include:	• documented policies and procedures • work plans to minimise waste or to increase efficiency of resources such as a green office program, supply chain program for purchasing sustainable products or an environmental management framework
Suggestions may include ideas that help to:	• improve energy efficiency • increase use of renewable, recyclable, reusable and recoverable resources • maximise opportunities such as use of solar power or other alternative forms of energy, where appropriate

BSBWOR201A Manage personal stress in the workplace

Modification History

Release	Comments
Release 2	New release of this Qualification released with version 6 of BSB07 Business Services Training Package. Outdated advice removed

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to manage personal stress in a customer contact environment.

Application of the Unit

This unit requires an awareness of sources of personal stress, the development of strategies to effectively manage stress, time management and recovery from stressful contacts or situations. This particularly applies in a contact centre environment due to the very measured, structured, high volume and potentially repetitive nature of the work but could apply in any work environment.

Competence in this unit requires resilience and self management of the stress that can be encountered in a customer contact environment.

This work is undertaken with some guidance and supervision.

BSBWRK509A Manage industrial relations

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to manage industrial relations matters within an organisation, with day to day involvement. It includes strategic planning and policy development for industrial relations as well as negotiation, conflict management and dispute resolution. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals with a well established, sound theoretical knowledge base in human resources management and industrial relations who are proficient in using a range of specialised technical and managerial techniques to plan, carry out and evaluate their own work and/or the work of a team. They may or may not have responsibility for supervising the work of others but are authorised to oversee industrial relations in the organisation. However they will have knowledge of current industrial relations trends and legislation. The unit addresses staff who have responsibility for working across the organisation to ensure that there is a policy infrastructure which ensures legislative compliance and clarifies issues. It also addresses the requirement for responding to industrial conflict and grievances.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:

- general knowledge of activity/event components and different roles and responsibilities in the relevant work context
- ability to complete tasks safely and follow work instructions
- practical demonstration of skills through the provision of assistance with an activity or event.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure:

- interaction with others to reflect the communication aspects of the unit
- access to a location in which events or activities take place
- access to an activity or event on which the candidate can work.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate
- direct observation of the candidate completing tasks during set up or operation of an activity/event
- oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of event components, typical procedures, safety issues.

Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example:

- CUFSAF01B Follow health, safety and security procedures.

CUFWRT302A Write simple stories

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to write simple stories. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	People with the skills outlined in this unit are able to use both linear and non-linear structures to write simple stories. They could be writing stories for a wide range of products, e.g. interactive media, animations, e-learning resources and the print media. They would typically be writing stories in response to a clearly-defined brief under the supervision of a senior writer or editor. Stories would be short, e.g. a story for one or two animated objects, a dialogue between characters in a learning resource, or a creative piece for a magazine. Skills associated with writing more complex stories are covered in: • CUFWRT402A Write extended stories.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • original linear and non-linear stories written for at least two of the delivery platforms listed in the range statement • ability to write simple stories that engage the target audience and meet the requirements of a storytelling brief.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to word processing software • access to a range of information sources as listed in the range statement • access to appropriate learning and assessment support when required • use of culturally appropriate processes and techniques appropriate to the language and literacy capacity of learners and the work being performed.

Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • evaluation of simple stories written by the candidate in line with relevant criteria as listed in the range statement • case studies and problem-solving exercises to determine ability to write simple stories that engage the target audience and meet the requirements of a storytelling brief • written or oral questioning to test knowledge of basic elements of a simple story • written or oral questioning to test knowledge of information sources • review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • BSBCRT301A Develop and extend critical and creative thinking skills • CUFANM301A Create 2D digital animations.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to edit written material. People in editorial roles refine and amend text to enhance the clarity of written communication. They may also be involved in making decisions about the placement of visual material in relation to text. When editing text, they take into account the needs of the readership, the author's intention, available resources and the type of publication. A thorough knowledge of grammar, syntax, spelling and punctuation is essential, along with an eye for detail and a systematic approach to work. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit covers the role of editors or subeditors working in contexts such as book publishing, magazines and journals, corporate, online media, government and not-for-profit organisations. It also covers the role of freelance editors. Even though people in this role work with a fair degree of autonomy, they report to a manager or, in the case of freelance editors, to a client.

CUFWRT402A Write extended stories

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to write extended stories. It builds on the skills covered in: • CUFWRT302A Write simple stories. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	People with the skills outlined in this unit are able to write extended stories in a range of contexts using appropriate structures and creative narrative development techniques. They could, for example, be writing stories for the print media, television, radio, animations, e-learning resources, games, and fiction or non-fiction projects. They are typically writing stories in response to creative conceptualisations or project briefs, which could be self-generated or developed by others. Examples of extended stories include fully developed non-linear stories for animations or games, learning resources with complex learning and assessment approaches, extended creative responses such as novels or novellas, and non-fiction projects such as biographies.

Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
The role of consumer credit includes:	• enabling approved applicants the ability to purchase items (goods and/or services) where the cost of the item exceeds current savings available.

Advantages and disadvantages of credit may include:	• advantages:
	  • obtain and can use purchased item immediately
	  • minimises the need to carry cash or write cheques
	  • allows for instalment payments on expensive items
	  • convenient form of payment when travelling, especially overseas
	• disadvantages:
	  • may increase cost of items purchased due to interest accrued
	  • usually attracts other fees such as account servicing fees
	  • can lead to compulsive buying habits
	  • creates a false sense of wealth.

Consumer credit	• fixed:

facilities may include:	• personal loans • leases including mobile phones, cars, business premises, office equipment including personal computers • hire purchase • 'buy now, pay later' schemes • revolving: • credit cards • store cards • overdraft.
Differences between unsecured and secured loans include:	• a secured loan is supported by an underlying asset while an unsecured loan is not • unsecured loans attract higher interest rates due to increased risk to the lending institution.
Implications of default on secured loans include:	• any shortfall in sale of repossessed asset against outstanding loan amount must be paid by borrower • repossession of the underlying asset by the lending institution.
Fees and costs associated with different credit options may include:	• account servicing fees • credit purchase fees • late payment fees • loan establishment fees • withdrawing from a foreign Automatic Teller Machine (i.e. the ATM of a lending institution other than your own).
Fees and costs may be analysed and compared using:	• manually, comparing fees and costs drawn from tables and charts provided by financial institutions and analysed using a calculator • online, web-based, calculation tools • software applications such as spreadsheets.
Ways to compare advertised interest rates may include:	• informing the client of the 'comparison rate' which includes all associated fees and charges.
Strategies to minimise fees on credit may include:	• consolidating savings and credit facilities with the one institution where account servicing fees can be cancelled out • knowing how many free transactions come with the card • paying the minimum monthly instalment on time.
Ways to avoid credit	• not disclosing Personal Identification Number (PIN) to anyone

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

RANGE STATEMENT
card fraud include:	• selecting a PIN only the card holder would know • signing the back of the credit card.
Credit reference reports refers to:	• reports established and maintained by credit reference agencies which record all negative events (i.e. defaults) listed by creditors against debtors.
Implications of establishing a poor credit history may include:	• higher interest rate penalties • inability to obtain finance in the future • may disadvantage applications for rental accommodation • necessity to obtain guarantor in future loans.
Methods of obtaining own credit reference file may include:	• writing, emailing or telephoning the relevant agency requesting a copy of your file, having provided relevant details to identify self.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the ability to: • successfully develop a sales plan based on analysis of the market • implement a sales strategy including putting appropriate sales training in place • evaluate and make necessary adjustments to ensure the success of a sales plan.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • competency is demonstrated in the context of the financial services work environment and conditions specified in the range statement either in a relevant workplace or a closely simulated work environment • access to and the use of a range of common office equipment, technology, software and consumables • access to financial services product information.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples, in combination, are appropriate for this unit: • evaluating an integrated activity which combines the elements of competency for the unit or a cluster of related units of competency • observing processes and procedures in workplaces or role plays • verbal or written questioning on underpinning knowledge and skills • setting and reviewing business simulations or scenarios • accessing and validating third party reports.

Employability Skills Information

The required outcomes described in this unit of competency contain applicable facets of Employability Skills

The Employability Skills Summary of the qualification in which this unit of competency is packaged will assist in identifying Employability Skill requirements

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements define the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.

The Performance Criteria specify the level of performance required to demonstrate achievement of the Element. Terms in italics are elaborated in the Range Statement.

Element	Performance Criteria
1 Establish a workplace first aid facility	1.1 Plan a first aid facility in the workplace to address workplace and legislative requirements
	1.2 Identify potential workplace hazards and assess associated risks as a basis for determining first aid resource requirements
	1.3 Identify and prepare first aid equipment and resources required to address identified workplace requirements
	1.4 Identify personnel requirements in line with legislative and workplace requirements
	1.5 Establish and maintain links with relevant first aid bodies and professional organisations to maintain currency in the field and for referral purposes
	1.6 Access and provide information in the workplace to encourage risk minimisation and facilitate access to first aid facilities as appropriate
2 Manage a workplace first aid facility	2.1 Monitor and maintain availability of adequate resources to support workplace first aid response
	2.2 Conduct regular inspections of stock and equipment to ensure currency and operational readiness in line with workplace requirements
	2.3 Ensure equipment is recovered and reprocessed and that waste is disposed of safely according to legislative and workplace procedures
	2.4 Ensure equipment and resources are stored and maintained in line with relevant legislation and manufacturer's/supplier's instructions
	2.5 Contribute to the review of risks in the workplace and validation of organisation policies and procedures relating to the provision of first aid
	2.6 Contribute to planning for response to major workplace incidents
	2.7 Deploy appropriate equipment, resources and personnel to ensure timely and effective first aid response in line with workplace requirements

		2.8 Use safe manual handling techniques
3	Manage workplace first aid records	3.1 Ensure documentation is completed as required according to legislation and workplace procedures
		3.2 Maintain first aid records in line with legislative requirements and workplace security practices
		3.3 Send relevant documents to appropriate bodies in line with workplace and legislative requirements
		3.4 Maintain confidentiality of records and information in line with privacy principles and statutory and/or organisation policies
4	Evaluate the provision of first aid in the workplace	4.1 Evaluate management of workplace incidents and develop an action plan in consultation with relevant parties to improve first aid response in the workplace if required
		4.2 Participate in debriefing/evaluation in order to improve future operations and address individual needs
		4.3 Ensure first aid response is provided in a culturally aware, sensitive and respectful manner
		4.4 Implement and evaluate workplace management procedures in accordance with risk assessment
		4.5 Formulate and review contingency planning to identify and select alternative management principles and procedures as required

Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Working knowledge of:

Legal responsibilities and duty of care

Australian Resuscitation Council (ARC) Guidelines relating to provision of first aid

Procedures for dealing with major and minor accidents in the workplace

How to gain access to and interpret material safety data sheets (MSDSs)

Company/organisation standard operating procedures (SOPS)

Priorities of management in first aid

Occupational health and safety requirements in the provision of first aid

First aiders' skills and limitations in relation to first aid response in the workplace

First aid risk assessment practices and procedures

Safe storage and handling of medication in the workplace

First aid equipment and resources to manage injuries and illnesses addressed in HLTFA301B: Apply first aid and HLTFA402B: Apply advanced first aid

First aid management procedures for conditions identified in the Range Statement

Infection control principles and procedures, including using standard precautions

State/territory regulations, legislation and policies relating to:

workplace first aid provision

occupational health and safety requirements in the provision of first aid

first aid training

currency of first aid skills and knowledge

Stress management techniques and available support

Social issues, with particular reference to workplace culture, issues and resources and associated organisation requirements:

importance of first aid response to be culturally aware, sensitive and respectful debriefing counselling procedures consent and confidentiality

own skills and limitations

Essential skills:

Ability to:

Manage a first aid response in an identified workplace context

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Assess workplace first aid requirements

Maintain first aid equipment and resources in operational condition

Conduct an initial casualty assessment and prioritisation

Conduct/review first aid risk assessment

Plan an appropriate first aid response in line with established first aid principles, ARC Guidelines and/or State/Territory regulations, legislation and policies and respond appropriately to contingencies in line with own level of skills and knowledge

Apply first aid principles in the workplace

Implement OHS guidelines

Demonstrate:

safe manual handling

adequate infection control procedures - use of standard precautions consideration of the welfare of casualties and first aiders incident management skills

safe storage and handling procedures for pressurised gases

safe storage and handling of medication in the workplace

Interpret, use and maintain records of the range of documentation required by the workplace and regulatory authorities

Communicate effectively and assertively and show leadership in an incident

Use high level literacy and numeracy skills as required to read, interpret, address and communicate guidelines, protocols and reporting requirements

Make prompt and appropriate decisions relating to managing an incident in the workplace

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects of assessment:	Assessment must include demonstrated evidence of specified Essential Knowledge and Essential Skills identified in this competency unit Consistency of performance should be demonstrated over the required range of

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- Logistic management skills for identified resources and procedures skills (e.g. when IT hardware, software and resources required for disaster recovery are identified and documented according to project specifications and cost constraints)
- Negotiation skills in relation to self and other team members and applied to a defined range of predictable problems (e.g. when business-critical functions are identified from project documentation and discussion with client business area and project team)
- Project planning skills in relation to scope, time, cost, quality, communications, risk analysis and management (e.g. when business-critical functions are identified from project documentation and discussion with client business area and project team, and when contingency possibilities are identified and evaluated according to project specifications and cost constraints)
- Research skills for specifying, analysing and evaluating broad features of a particular business domain and best practice in system development (e.g. when threats to the system are identified, taking into consideration security analysis and internal and external business environment)
- Facilitation and presentation skills in relation to transferring and collecting information and gaining consensus on concepts (e.g. when business-critical functions are identified from project documentation and discussion with client business area and project team, and when disaster recovery plan is documented and submitted to higher authorities for review and sign-off

Required knowledge
• Broad knowledge of basic engineering (e.g. when evaluating threats) • Broad knowledge of fire/safety knowledge (e.g. when formulating prevention and recovery strategy) • Detailed knowledge of back-up methodologies (e.g. when formulating prevention and recovery strategy) • Broad knowledge of systems engineering (e.g. when evaluating threats) • Specific components of the business planning process relevant to the development of IT business solutions (e.g. when evaluating impact of system on business continuity) • Broad knowledge of the client business domain (e.g. when evaluating impact of system on business continuity) • Detailed knowledge of the system's current functionality (e.g. when evaluating impact of system on business continuity)

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • Assessment must confirm the ability to specify contingencies that minimise down time for business-critical functions. • Assessment must confirm the ability to clearly specify directions on how to handle serious down time. • Assessment must confirm the ability to coordinate, plan and articulate flexible logistics requirements. To demonstrate competency in this unit the learner will require access to: • A vulnerability assessment and general definition of

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

	requirements • Business impact analysis • Acceptance test plan • Information technology security assurance specifications
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment of this unit of competency could include review of the disaster recovery/contingency plan developed by the learner to ensure the following is covered: • Defined recovery requirements from the perspective of business functions • The impact of an extended loss on operations and key business functions • The contingency plan is understandable, easy to use and easy to maintain • Contingency planning considerations may be integrated into ongoing business planning and system development processes • The disaster recovery plan is not a one-off activity, but rather an ongoing process The plan should cover: • Physical security • System failure, accident, sabotage (hackers) • Denial of service • Virus attack • Telecommunications failure Disaster recover plans are critical for organisations that rely on IT for business operations. The breadth, depth and complexity covering planning and initiation of alternative approaches to skills or knowledge applications across a broad range of technical and/or management requirements, evaluation and coordination would be characteristic. Assessment must ensure: • The demonstration of competency may also require self-directed application of knowledge and skills, with substantial depth in some areas where judgement is required in planning and selecting appropriate equipment, services and techniques for self and others. • Applications involve participation in development of strategic initiatives as well as personal responsibility and autonomy in performing complex technical operations or organising others. It may include participation in teams including teams concerned with planning and evaluation functions. Group or team coordination may also be involved.

Method of assessment	The purpose of this unit is to define the standard of performance to be achieved in the workplace. In undertaking training and assessment activities related to this unit, consideration should be given to the implementation of appropriate diversity and accessibility practices in order to accommodate people who may have special needs. Additional guidance on these and related matters is provided in ICA05 Section 1. • Competency in this unit should to be assessed using summative assessment to ensure consistency of performance in a range of contexts. This unit can be assessed either in the workplace or in a simulated environment. However, simulated activities must closely reflect the workplace to enable full demonstration of competency. • Assessment will usually include observation of real or simulated work processes and procedures and/or performance in a project context as well as questioning on underpinning knowledge and skills. The questioning of team members, supervisors, subordinates, peers and clients where appropriate may provide valuable input to the assessment process. The interdependence of units for assessment purposes may vary with the particular project or scenario.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended.

EVIDENCE GUIDE
	An individual demonstrating this competency would be able to: • Demonstrate understanding of a broad knowledge base incorporating theoretical concepts, with substantial depth in some areas • Analyse and plan approaches to technical problems or management requirements • Transfer and apply theoretical concepts and/or technical or creative skills to a range of situations • Evaluate information, using it to forecast for planning or research purposes • Take responsibility for own outputs in relation to broad quantity and quality parameters • Take some responsibility for the achievement of group outcomes • Maintain knowledge of industry products and services

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Business-critical functions may include but are not limited to:	• financial systems • customer service functions • payroll
Documentation may follow:	• ISO/IEC/AS standards • audit trails • naming standards • version control • project management templates and report writing • maintaining equipment inventory

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

RANGE STATEMENT
	• client training • satisfaction reports
Project team may include:	• solution developers and business clients working together • individual business analysts • a number of third-party solution developers working together • a number of different businesses working in partnership
Software may include but are not limited to:	• commercial • in-house • packaged or customised software
Specifications may include but are not limited to:	• technical requirements • user problem statement • current system functionality
Constraints may include but are not limited to:	• time • budget • resource • hardware • software • policy • legal constraints
System may include but are not limited to:	• databases • applications • servers • operating systems • gateways • application service provider • ISP
Appropriate person may include:	• supervisor • teacher • authorised business representative • client
Threats may include:	• Weather (storms, earthquake) • Security • Information technology failure (hardware, software) • Accident • Espionage • Sabotage (hackers)

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

RANGE STATEMENT
	• Telecommunications network failure • Denial of service • Virus attack Supplementary questioning of the client may be used during the assessment phase, where necessary, to ensure that all issues relating to threats to the system are considered and appropriate choices made given the need to prevent, limit, recover, respond and recover from disasters
Back-up strategy may include:	• hot standby site • warm standby site • cold standby site • mobile van • supplier • bureau • contacts through user group • third parties
Contingency plans will vary in format and content detail, but will typically:	• identify weaknesses and provide for the implementation of a disaster prevention program • minimise disruption to business operations • provide a coordinated approach to the disaster recovery process
Cut-over criteria may include:	• estimate of time before system is operational • estimate of business impact • authorisations to cut-over • actual system down time • refresher of cut-over plan
Security environment	• Includes legislation, organisational security policies, customs, expertise and knowledge that are, or may be, relevant. The security environment also includes the threats to security that are, or are held to be, present in the environment
Statutory requirements	• May include legislation (e.g. Privacy Act), industry-imposed controls and standards. In certain organisations (e.g. health and banking), there may be strict laws regarding confidentiality and reporting of data

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

RANGE STATEMENT
Commercial requirements	• Back-up • Storage and recovery of data • Access to internal network • Passwords/logons • Encryption • Firewalls • Hacking • Confidentiality • Integrity • Availability
Standards may include:	• ISO/IEC/AS standards • organisational standards • project standards (for further information refer to the Standards Australia website at: www.standards.com.au)

EVIDENCE GUIDE
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • Assessment must confirm the competency to plan and implement appropriate processes and procedures that ensure that quality expectations are met. Standards should be quantitative and applied universally wherever possible. Quality assurance standards should be well documented and disseminated. To demonstrate competency in this unit the following resources will be needed: • Quality guidelines • Access to related quality standards • Data related to the business model
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Managing processes related to business involves analysis, documentation and process re-engineering across a broad range of technical and managerial functions, including identifying technical and human processes interactions. Contribution to the development of a broad quality plan is involved and accountability and responsibility for self and others in achieving the outcomes is expected. Implementing quality assurance processes involves significant judgement in planning, design, evaluation, technical or leadership/guidance and communications functions related to products, services, operations, processes and procedures. The degree of emphasis on breadth as against depth of knowledge and skills may vary. The breadth, depth and complexity involving analysis, design, planning, execution and evaluation across a range of technical and/or management functions including development of new criteria or applications or knowledge or procedures would be characteristic.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

EVIDENCE GUIDE
	Assessment must ensure: • application of a significant range of fundamental principles and complex techniques across a wise and often unpredictable variety of contexts in relation to either varied or highly specific functions. Contribution to the development of a broad plan, budget or strategy may be involved and accountability and responsibility for self and others in achieving the outcomes may also be characteristic. • Applications involve significant judgement in planning, design, technical or leadership/guidance functions related to products, services, operations or procedures would be common.
Method of assessment	The purpose of this unit is to define the standard of performance to be achieved in the workplace. In undertaking training and assessment activities related to this unit, consideration should be given to the implementation of appropriate diversity and accessibility practices in order to accommodate people who may have special needs. Additional guidance on these and related matters is provided in ICA05 Section 1. • Competency in this unit should to be assessed using summative assessment to ensure consistency of performance in a range of contexts. This unit can be assessed either in the workplace or in a simulated environment. However, simulated activities must closely reflect the workplace to enable full demonstration of competency. • Assessment will usually include observation of real or simulated work processes and procedures and/or performance in a project context as well as questioning on underpinning knowledge and skills. Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the ability to: • connect to and access the internet • send and receive emails • secure internet access and email communications • use search tools to locate information • research and select appropriate website • undertake online interactions • make an informed assessment of the accuracy, currency, authority and reliability of the site and information located.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure access to: • use of PC or digital device with internet • search engines currently used in industry • organisational policies on internet usage • appropriate learning and assessment support when required. Where applicable, physical resources should include equipment modified for people with special needs.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • verbal or written questioning to assess candidate's knowledge of internet access requirements, email features and search engine attributes • direct observation of candidate accessing the internet, using email, and searching and interacting with consumer sites using advanced search features • direct observation of candidate undertaking online interactions • review of search results, including assessment of the accuracy, currency and reliability of the site and information located.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, where appropriate. Assessment processes and techniques must be culturally appropriate, and suitable to the communication skill level, language, literacy and numeracy capacity of the candidate and the work being performed. Indigenous people and other people from a non-English speaking background may need additional support. In cases where practical assessment is used it should be combined with targeted questioning to assess required knowledge.

ICAICT203A Operate application software packages

Modification History

Version	Comments
ICAICT203A	This version first released with ICA11 Information and Communications Technology Training Package version 1.0

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to identify, select and operate three commercial software packages, including a word-processing and a spreadsheet application package.

The unit identifies the requirement to use a word-processing, spreadsheet and third software application package to ensure that the individual develops the skills required to cover a range of basic office software requirements.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to information and communications technology (ICT) personnel who need to use several different software applications to produce diverse documents within a small to large office environment.

The ability to use and present a variety of key software application packages is a key component of any ICT business or office environment.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement but users should confirm requirements with the relevant federal, state or territory authority.

Pre-Requisites

Not applicable.

Employability Skills Information

This unit contains employability skills.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the ability to: • investigate client support requests and provide a documented solution after consultation with client • convey comprehensive technical information to clients in a clear, concise, jargon-free and coherent manner • access technical manuals and 'help' documentation.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure access to: • sites, peers and supervisors for obtaining information • software, hardware and networks • help-desk repository, technical records and documentation • appropriate learning and assessment support when required • modified equipment for people with special needs.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, where appropriate. Assessment processes and techniques must be culturally appropriate, and suitable to the communication skill level, language, literacy and numeracy capacity of the candidate and the work being performed. Indigenous people and other people from a non-English speaking background may need additional support. In cases where practical assessment is used it should be combined with targeted questioning to assess required knowledge.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Client may include:	• employee • external organisation • individual • internal department.
Investigation may include:	• active listening to clients and colleagues • contacting vendor or maintenance organisations • on-site examination • questions and answers • reviewing technical advice about the organisation.

Advice and support may include:	• hardware supported by the organisation:
	  • CD or DVD drives
	  • laptops
	  • notebooks
	  • printers
	  • reconfiguration of settings
	  • scanners
	  • screens
	• identification of training needs for referral to supervisor
	• manuals
	• one-to-one training
	• provision of client documentation
	• software supported by the organisation:
	  • creation of templates
	  • generation of a complex report on a database
	  • password and log-on procedure
	  • statistical functions of spreadsheets
	  • use of macros
	• vendor documentation.

Solution may include:	• hardware:
	  • new
	  • upgrade
	• implementing a new system

	• software:
	  • new
	  • upgrade
	• user training.

Documentation may include:	• additional support requirements • amount of technical support the client requires • client support solutions • collection of records for computer program, OS or hardware device • support issues affecting the client.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
1. Access the internet	1.1. Open an internet browser and set a home page of personal choice by setting internet options 1.2. Adjust the display of the internet browser to suit personal requirements 1.3. Modify toolbar to meet user and internet browser needs 1.4. Access a particular website, note privacy and other conditions of use and retrieve data 1.5. Enter a uniform resource locator (URL), in the address line of the internet browser
2. Search the internet	2.1. Locate and select appropriate search engine and define search expressions based on the data required

	2.2. Save search expression results and present them in a report according to the information requirements 2.3. Create a bookmark within the internet browser or a link for the required web page and save it in a bookmark folder 2.4. Modify the internet browser options for printing and print a web page 2.5. Close the internet browser
3. Research and apply 'netiquette' principles	3.1. Select search engine and using key word search research the concept of netiquette (or web etiquette) 3.2. Review rules of good online manners from at least two netiquette sites 3.3. Develop a personal list of netiquette principles to be applied to email and newsgroup discussions 3.4. Check that these are consistent with organisational policies
4. Send and organise messages	4.1. Open an email application package and create a new email message 4.2. Add addressee to the email message 4.3. Compose the text of an email message according to organisational guidelines 4.4. Create and add an automatic signature for the user, so that it appears automatically in every new email message that the user creates 4.5. Attach files to the email message, using the attachment feature 4.6. Determine and set a priority for an email message and spell check and edit text as required 4.7. Send the email message 4.8. Reply to received messages and forward as appropriate, using the carbon copy and forward features 4.9. Open and save an attachment to the relevant folder 4.10. Search for an email message and set a priority setting or delete as necessary 4.11. Sort inbox according to sender's name and date received 4.12. Save email messages in a folder 4.13. Compact folder to save space 4.14. Print an email message
5. Create an address	5.1. Manually add an email address to the email package

book	address book 5.2. Update the address book by transferring the email address from a received message 5.3. Create a distribution list and send out email message

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills
• Ability to implement workstation adjustment according to OH&S guidelines • Basic analysis in relation to a limited range of routine tasks • Low-level decision making in relation to a limited range of routine tasks • Problem solving skills in known areas during normal routine activities • Reading and writing at a level where basic workplace documents are understood • Clear and precise communication • Ability to interpret user manuals • Using a PC and peripherals • Cultural understanding
Required knowledge
• Makeup and structure of an internet addresses • Basic technical terminology in relation to reading help files and prompts • Log-on procedures for accessing a PC • Modem speed, traffic loads in relation to times of accessing the internet • Evaluating and assessing the authority, reliability and authenticity of information • Organisational guidelines on internet and email usage ('web etiquette' or netiquette) • Different types of search engines (eg. Google, Alta Vista, Infoseek) • Different types of messages that occur (e.g. error messages, updates, need for installing plug-ins)

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Context of and specific resources for assessment	This competency provides one of the fundamental foundation skills for interacting online. In this context, individuals must recognise their own responsibility in having access to the vast services, sites, systems and people provided by the internet. The breadth, depth and complexity of knowledge and skills in this competency would prepare a person to perform a defined range of activities many of which may be routine and predictable. Assessment must ensure • Applications may include a variety of employment related skills including preparatory access and participation skills, broad-based induction skills and/or specific workplace skills. They may also include participation in a team or work group.
Method of assessment	The purpose of this unit is to define the standard of performance to be achieved in the workplace. In undertaking training and assessment activities related to this unit, consideration should be given to the implementation of appropriate diversity and accessibility practices in order to accommodate people who may have special needs. Additional guidance on these and related matters is provided in ICA05 Section 1. • Competency in this unit should be assessed using summative assessment to ensure consistency of performance in a range of contexts. This unit can be assessed either in the workplace or in a simulated environment. However, simulated activities must closely reflect the workplace to enable full demonstration of competency. • Assessment will usually include observation of real or simulated work processes and procedures and/or performance in a project context as well as questioning on underpinning knowledge and skills. The questioning of team members, supervisors, subordinates, peers and clients where appropriate may provide valuable input to the assessment process. The interdependence of units for assessment purposes may vary with the particular project or scenario.

Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • ICAS1193B Connect a workstation to the internet • ICAU1128B Operate a personal computer • ICAU1129B Operate a word processing application • ICAU1213B Conduct on-line transactions • ICAS2243B Detect and protect from spam and destructive software An individual demonstrating this competency would be able to: • Demonstrate knowledge by recall in a narrow range of areas • Demonstrate basic practical skills, such as the use of relevant tools • Perform a sequence of routine tasks given clear direction • Receive and pass on messages and information

Overview of assessment
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Locating and using online information is an increasingly important business and personal function. Many organisations encourage activities and transactions to be conducted online. An increasing number of government provided information services and transactions require online user capability for effectiveness. The sourcing and verification of online information is an increasingly important research task for both individuals and organisations as a growing proportion of suppliers and customers use online facilities to market or secure good and services. The breadth, depth and complexity of knowledge and skills in this competency would prepare a person to perform a defined range of activities many of which may be routine and predictable. EVIDENCE GUIDE
The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Context of and specific resources for assessment	This unit brings together a range of basic computer skills and knowledge consistent with general expectations around computer usage in the workplace. The breadth, depth and complexity of knowledge and skills in this competency would prepare a person to perform in a range of varied activities or knowledge applications where there is a clearly defined range of contexts in which the choice of actions required is usually clear. There would generally be limited complexity in the range of operations to be applied. Assessment must ensure: • Performance of a prescribed range of functions involving known routines and procedures and some accountability for the quality of outcomes would be characteristic. • Applications may include some complex or non-routine activities involving individual

This section describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level, required for this unit.

Required skills:

Look for evidence that confirms skills in:

- applying objective and impartial evaluation of conflicting requirements
- using ethical decision making
- preparing written advice and reports requiring accuracy of expression
- accessing legislation and codes of ethics electronically or in hard copy
- tailoring communication to suit different audiences
- responding to diversity, including gender and disability
- applying occupational health and safety procedures relating to ethical work practices

Required knowledge:

Look for evidence that confirms knowledge and understanding of:

- the nature of ethics and ethical values
- fundamental ethical principles such as justice, respect for persons, procedural fairness, confidentiality, responsible care
- values of public sector office
- natural justice/procedural fairness
- equal employment opportunity, equity and diversity principles
- where to access ethical decision making/problem solving models, organisational codes and procedures
- procedures for declaring conflicts of interest
- protocols for reporting fraud, corruption and maladministration
- occupational health and safety procedures relating to ethical work practices carry out assessment

- ethics-related legislation and guidelines
- codes of conduct and codes of ethics
- public sector standards, procedures and protocols
- ethical decision making/problem solving models
- manager/mentor/network who role models ethical conduct

Where and how to assess evidence

Valid assessment of this unit requires:

- a workplace environment or one that closely resembles normal work practice and replicates the range of conditions likely to be encountered when working ethically in a public sector environment, including coping with ambiguity, difficulties, irregularities and breakdowns in routine
- ethical conduct in a range of (3 or more) contexts (or occasions, over time) where contexts may be generalist or specialist work activities such as building and maintaining networks, delivering client services, using financial resources, procuring goods or services etc.

Assessment methods should reflect workplace demands, such as literacy, and the needs of particular groups, such as:

- people with disabilities
- people from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds
- Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- women
- young people
- older people
- people in rural and remote locations.

Assessment methods suitable for valid and reliable assessment of this competency may include, but are not limited to, a combination of 2 or more of:

- case studies
- portfolios
- questioning
- scenarios
- simulation or role plays
- authenticated evidence from the workplace and/or training courses

For consistency of assessment

Evidence must be gathered over time in a range of contexts to ensure the person can achieve the unit outcome and apply the competency in different situations or environments

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor

This unit covers the requirement to contribute to conflict management in the workplace between self and others, such as staff or clients. It includes recognising the presence of conflict, dealing with emotions, overcoming barriers to communication, gathering the facts, agreeing on and implementing action. It does not include managing conflict between two other parties, formal negotiation, counselling or conducting mediation.

In practice, contributing to conflict management may overlap with other generalist or specialist public sector work activities such as acting ethically, complying with legislation, working effectively, working with diversity, using workplace communication strategies, etc.

This is one of 4 units of competency in the Working in Government and Human Resource Management Competency Fields that deal with conflict. Related units are:

PSPGOV411A Deal with conflict

PSPGOV508A Manage conflict

PSPHR603B Provide advisory and mediation services

This is a new unit of competency, added to the Working in Government Competency Field of the Training Package in 2004.

PSPPM402B Manage simple projects

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor

This unit covers management of generally low risk projects that may be small scale and managed by one person or a person with a small team. It includes implementing project start-up activities, coordinating project implementation, monitoring the project and arranging follow-up activities. Contract management requirements are not included as this aspect is addressed by units of competency within the Competency field of Procurement and Contract Management.

In practice, managing simple projects overlaps with other generalist and specialist work activities such as applying government processes, using resources, gathering information, managing contracts etc.

When this unit is completed in conjunction with PSPPM401B Design simple projects and PSPPM403B Close simple projects, the three units together are equivalent to the eight private sector Business Services project management competencies: BSBPM401A - BSBPM408A inclusive.

This unit, and unit PSPPM405A Administer simple projects, are mutually exclusive. One or the other, but not both, may contribute to a qualification.

This unit replaces and is equivalent to PSPPM402A Implement projects.

PSPPROC406B Procure goods and services

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit covers the expenditure of public monies for simple procurement of low value/low risk goods and services using contractual arrangements that include simple tendering and requests for quotation. The unit requires analysis and decision making in the procurement process, which is undertaken under limited supervision. It includes planning and undertaking procurement, managing contractors and completing contractual arrangements. In practice, procuring goods and services overlaps with other generalist and specialist public sector or local government work activities, such as upholding and supporting the values and principles of public service, identifying and treating risks, exercising delegations, applying government processes, encouraging compliance with legislation in the public sector or local government, planning procurement, developing and distributing requests for offers, selecting providers and managing contracts. This unit is not recommended for those who specialise in procurement. It cannot be included in the Certificate IV in Government (Procurement and Contracting). No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to those who enter into contracts or go out to tender or manage the procurement but are not procurement professionals. Those undertaking this unit may be developing a request for tender but procurement is not a major part of their role.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
1. Plan for procurement of goods or services.	1.1. Market assessment is used to identify and select options for procuring goods or services in accordance with business plan requirements, legislation, policy and procedures, and probity requirements. 1.2. Commercial strategy is identified to achieve the procurement outcome set out in the business plan, achieve value for money, and meet legal and probity requirements. 1.3. Risk planning is conducted for the procurement activity according to procedures, delegations and guidelines.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

	1.4. Process and criteria for evaluation of offers from suppliers or service providers are identified to meet public sector probity requirements, and are recorded in a tender evaluation plan. 1.5. Procurement plan is developed to manage procurement process and contractual arrangements in accordance with legislation, policy and procedures, and probity requirements. 1.6. Stakeholders are consulted about the planned procurement and their feedback is incorporated into the procurement process.
2. Undertake procurement.	2.1. Method for requesting and receiving offers is chosen to suit the procurement activity and comply with organisational policy and procedures and probity requirements. 2.2. Specialist expertise is used to assist in evaluation of offers as required. 2.3. Evaluation and selection of the offer are made according to tender evaluation plan, and organisational policy and procedures. 2.4. Notification of successful and unsuccessful suppliers/providers is undertaken according to procurement plan, and organisational policy and procedures. 2.5. Work does not commence and payment is not made until contractual arrangements are formalised. 2.6. Contractual arrangements that are legally binding to all parties and suitable to the procurement activity are negotiated, formalised and reported according to organisational policy and procedures.
3. Manage contractors.	3.1. Communication strategies are established to build and maintain relationships with contractors. 3.2. Performance is monitored against contract performance indicators for quality assurance of the goods or services and to ensure compliance with contract specifications. 3.3. Contract performance indicators are regularly reviewed to ensure relevance. 3.4. Approvals are obtained for contract variations according to organisational and contractual requirements. 3.5. Disputes or complaints are investigated, documented and resolved or referred according to contractual

Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment	Competency must be demonstrated in the ability to procure goods and services consistently in accordance with legislative and organisational requirements.
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Assessment must confirm the ability to: • plan a procurement activity, using templates where these are available, to a level of detail commensurate with the complexity and risk profile of the procurement • implement the procurement plan in a way that reflects the legislative and policy environment applicable to the organisation • develop a suitable contract management plan, using templates if available • manage the performance of contractors to ensure that the goods or services are delivered in accordance with the contract • act within own delegations and refer issues to higher authority when necessary. Consistency in performance Competency should be demonstrated by providing evidence of undertaking a range of relevant work tasks in an actual or simulated procurement environment on at least two separate occasions.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	The unit of competency is to be assessed in the workplace or a simulated workplace environment. Access may be required to: • legislation, policy, procedures and protocols relating to procuring goods and services • codes of conduct and codes of practice • workplace scenarios and case studies relating to a range of procurement activities • case studies that incorporate dilemmas, and probity requirements relating to procurement of goods and services.
Method of assessment	The following assessment methods are suggested: • questions to assess understanding of relevant legislation and procedures • review of strategies selected for procurement • review of procurement plans, requests for quotation/tender, tender evaluation plans, selection reports, contracts, contract management plans and reports, and other documentation prepared by the candidate in a range of contexts • feedback from peers or supervisors on actions taken to monitor and review contract performance. In all cases, practical assessment should be supported by questions to assess underpinning knowledge and those aspects of competency which are difficult to assess directly. Questioning techniques should suit the language and literacy levels of the candidate.

Guidance information for assessment	Evidence must be gathered over time in a range of contexts to ensure the person can achieve the unit outcome and apply the competency in different situations or environments. Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • PSPETHC401A Uphold and support the values and principles of public service • PSPGOV417A Identify and treat risks • PSPGOV421A Exercise delegations • PSPLEGN401A Encourage compliance with legislation in the public sector • PSPPROC411A Plan procurement • PSPPROC412A Develop and distribute requests for offers • PSPPROC413A Select providers and develop contracts • PSPPROC414A Manage contracts.

PSPPROC407A Establish procurement need

Modification History

Unit Descriptor

This unit covers the establishment, justification and approval of procurement requirements to achieve required outcome. It includes defining and justifying the need, researching potential impact and risks, and securing organisational support to proceed with procurement activity.

The unit is suitable for any personnel who identify the need for procurement, and would not necessarily apply to procurement specialists whose role would typically begin as a result of procurement need being established and approved (including approval of appropriation).

In practice, establishment of procurement need may overlap with other public sector generalist and specialist work activities such as acting ethically, complying with legislation, applying government processes, working with diversity, using resources, etc.

This unit replaces PSPPROC401A Plan procurement. The units are not equivalent, as overlap between PSPPROC401A and PSPPROC402A has been removed, and the unit is more tightly focused on pre-procurement planning.

There is multi-unit equivalence between new and superseded units. The combination of:

PSPPROC401A Plan procurement + PSPPROC402A Request and receive offers+ PSPPROC403A Award contracts is equivalent to the combination:

PSPPROC408A Develop requests for offersPSPPROC409A Receive and select offers

Elements and Performance Criteria

Element	Performance Criteria
1 Define and justify procurement need	1.1 Consultation is undertaken with stakeholders and experts to determine whether viable alternatives to procurement exist to address identified procurement need
	1.2 A representative sampling of clients, experts and suppliers is consulted to define and clarify requirements
	1.3 Procurement need is justified through consultation and negotiation with stakeholders and experts
	1.4 Other issues and opportunities are investigated for integration into procurement activity
2 Research potential procurement impact and risks	2.1 Options are developed and the impacts, risks and costs of each are determined
	2.2 Recommendation is made and justified
	2.3 Identification and assessment of risks are undertaken using risk analysis tools that meet policy guidelines
	2.4 Stakeholder input is obtained and taken into account in the development of the procurement requirement
	2.5 Procurement requirement is developed which contains risk analysis, outcome measures, responsibilities and timelines
	2.6 Procurement requirement is outlined from transition to close-out, and meets legislative, policy and probity requirements
3 Secure organisational support for procurement	3.1 Constraints or limitations of authority and approval requirements are identified
	3.2 Resource allocations and appropriation are confirmed for whole-of-life

PSPPROC410A Administer contracts

Modification History

Unit Descriptor

This unit covers the administration of contracts by officers who administer contracts as part of their role, rather than as their primary role. They are not specialist contract managers.

Specialist contract managers are catered for by the units PSPPROC501A - 504A, added to the Procurement&Contract Management Competency field of the Training Package in 2004, which address in depth the aspects of contract management performed by specialist contract managers.

NB: PSPPROC404A Manage contracts (from PSP99) is equivalent to the three units:

PSPPROC502A Establish contract management arrangements + PSPPROC503A Manage contract performance + PSPPROC504A Finalise contracts

This unit includes undertaking preparations, establishing and maintaining contract administration arrangements, monitoring and maintaining contract performance, and completing and reviewing contracts.

In practice, administration of contracts overlaps with other public sector generalist and specialist work activities such as acting ethically, complying with legislation, applying government processes, working with diversity, using resources, etc.

This is a new unit of competency added to the Procurement&Contract Management Competency field of the Training Package in 2004.

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit covers the expenditure of public monies for simple procurement of low value/low risk goods and services using contractual arrangements that include simple tendering and requests for quotation. The unit requires analysis and decision making in the procurement process, which is undertaken under limited supervision. It includes planning and undertaking procurement, managing contractors and completing contractual arrangements. In practice, procuring goods and services overlaps with other generalist and specialist public sector or local government work activities, such as upholding and supporting the values and principles of public service, identifying and treating risks, exercising delegations, applying government processes, encouraging compliance with legislation in the public sector or local government, planning procurement, developing and distributing requests for offers, selecting providers and managing contracts. This unit is not recommended for those who specialise in procurement. It cannot be included in the Certificate IV in Government (Procurement and Contracting). No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to those who enter into contracts or go out to tender or manage the procurement but are not procurement professionals. Those undertaking this unit may be developing a request for tender but procurement is not a major part of their role.

EVIDENCE GUIDE
Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment	Competency must be demonstrated in the ability to procure goods and services consistently in accordance with legislative and organisational requirements.
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Assessment must confirm the ability to: • plan a procurement activity, using templates where these are available, to a level of detail commensurate with the complexity and risk profile of the procurement • implement the procurement plan in a way that reflects the legislative and policy environment applicable to the organisation • develop a suitable contract management plan, using templates if available • manage the performance of contractors to ensure that the goods or services are delivered in accordance with the contract • act within own delegations and refer issues to higher authority when necessary. Consistency in performance Competency should be demonstrated by providing evidence of undertaking a range of relevant work tasks in an actual or simulated procurement environment on at least two separate occasions.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	The unit of competency is to be assessed in the workplace or a simulated workplace environment. Access may be required to: • legislation, policy, procedures and protocols relating to procuring goods and services • codes of conduct and codes of practice • workplace scenarios and case studies relating to a range of procurement activities • case studies that incorporate dilemmas, and probity requirements relating to procurement of goods and services.
Method of assessment	The following assessment methods are suggested: • questions to assess understanding of relevant legislation and procedures • review of strategies selected for procurement • review of procurement plans, requests for quotation/tender, tender evaluation plans, selection reports, contracts, contract

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

	management plans and reports, and other documentation prepared by the candidate in a range of contexts • feedback from peers or supervisors on actions taken to monitor and review contract performance. In all cases, practical assessment should be supported by questions to assess underpinning knowledge and those aspects of competency which are difficult to assess directly. Questioning techniques should suit the language and literacy levels of the candidate.
Guidance information for assessment	Evidence must be gathered over time in a range of contexts to ensure the person can achieve the unit outcome and apply the competency in different situations or environments. Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • PSPETHC401A Uphold and support the values and principles of public service • PSPGOV417A Identify and treat risks • PSPGOV421A Exercise delegations • PSPLEGN401A Encourage compliance with legislation in the public sector • PSPPROC411A Plan procurement • PSPPROC412A Develop and distribute requests for offers • PSPPROC413A Select providers and develop contracts • PSPPROC414A Manage contracts.

Modification History

Unit Descriptor

This unit covers the establishment of arrangements for contract management by officers whose primary role is contract management, and who may or may not have had involvement in the procurement process preceding execution of the contract.

PSPPROC410A Administer contracts is the appropriate unit for officers undertaking contract management as a minor part of their work role.

The unit includes confirming contract requirements, preparing a contract management plan, implementing contract strategies and implementing contractual arrangements.

In practice, establishing contract management arrangements may overlap with other public sector generalist and specialist work activities such as acting ethically, complying with legislation, providing client service, providing leadership, developing policy, undertaking negotiations.

This is one of 4 units of competency in the Procurement&Contract Management Competency field that address the requirements of contract management performed by specialist contract managers.

Related units are:

Employability Skills Information

Employability skills The required outcomes described in this unit contain applicable facets of employability skills. The Employability Skills Summary of the qualification in which this unit is packaged will assist in identifying employability skills requirements.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.

Performance criteria describe the required performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge and/or the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
1 Interpret the need for innovation.	1.1 Observe the need for innovation within workplace context.
	1.2 Challenge assumptions about products and processes to identify opportunities for innovation.
	1.3 Project possible future contexts and environments for the innovation.
	1.4 Define end user requirements.
	1.5 Identify resources and constraints.
	1.6 Research factors and ethical considerations that may impact on the idea.
	1.7 Access relevant organisational knowledge.
2 Generate ideas.	2.1 Conceptualise ideas using a range of creative thinking techniques.

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level, required for this unit.

The following skills must be assessed as part of this unit:

- interpersonal communication skills to:
  - collaborate with others and represent ideas through clear and direct communication
  - ask questions to identify and confirm requirements
  - use language and concepts appropriate to cultural differences
  - use and interpret non-verbal communication
- research skills
- networking
- lateral thinking
- the ability to analyse self and external factors
- time management skills.

The following knowledge must be assessed as part of this unit:

- relevant technical knowledge
- broad industry and market knowledge
- organisational culture
- social, environmental and work culture impacts
- principles of innovation.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, the range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • interprets the need for innovation in the workplace • identifies resources and constraints and researches
