1 of 2	This document is Volume 1 of the BSB07 Business Services Training Package endorsed components. It provides the introduction to the Training Package, including the Introduction, Qualification Guide and Assessment Guidelines. It should not be used in isolation; users will need to ensure they have the relevant volume for the particular industry sector containing the endorsed units of competency.
2 of 2	This document is Volume 2 of the BSB07 Business Services Training Package endorsed components. It includes all of the units of competency in alpha-numeric code order.

Preliminary Information

Important Note to Users

Training Packages are not static documents; they are amended periodically to reflect the latest industry practices and are version controlled. It is essential that the latest version is always used.

Check the version number before commencing training or assessment

This Training Package is Version - check whether this is the latest version by going to the National Training Information Service (www.ntis.gov.au) and locating information about the Training Package. Alternatively, contact Innovation and Business Industry Skills Council at http://www.ibsa.org.au to confirm the latest version number.

Explanation of version number conventions

The primary release Training Package is Version 1. When changes are made to a Training Package, sometimes the version number is changed and sometimes it is not, depending on the extent of the change. When a Training Package is reviewed it is considered to be a new Training Package for the purposes of version control, and is Version 1. Do not confuse the version number with the Training Packages national code (which remains the same during its period of endorsement).

Overview

What is a Training Package?

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

A Training Package is an integrated set of nationally endorsed competency standards, assessment guidelines and Australian Qualifications Framework (AQF) qualifications for a specific industry, industry sector or enterprise.

Each Training Package:

- provides a consistent and reliable set of components for training, recognising and assessing peoples skills, and may also have optional support materials
- enables nationally recognised qualifications to be awarded through direct assessment of workplace competencies
- encourages the development and delivery of flexible training which suits individual and industry requirements
- encourages learning and assessment in a work-related environment which leads to verifiable workplace outcomes.

How do Training Packages fit within the National Skills Framework?

The National Skills Framework applies nationally, is endorsed by the Ministerial Council for Vocational and Technical Education, and comprises the Australian Quality Training Framework 2010 (AQTF 2010), and Training Packages endorsed by the National Quality Council (NQC).

How are Training Packages developed?

Training Packages are developed by Industry Skills Councils or enterprises to meet the identified training needs of specific industries or industry sectors. To gain national endorsement of Training Packages, developers must provide evidence of extensive research, consultation and support within the industry area or enterprise.

How do Training Packages encourage flexibility?

Training Packages describe the skills and knowledge needed to perform effectively in the workplace without prescribing how people should be trained. Training Packages acknowledge that people can achieve vocational competency in many ways by emphasising what the learner can do, not how or where they learned to do it. For example, some experienced workers might be able to demonstrate competency against the units of competency, and even gain a qualification, without completing a formal training program.

With Training Packages, assessment and training may be conducted at the workplace, off-the-job, at a training organisation, during regular work, or through work experience, work placement, work simulation or any combination of these.

Who can deliver and assess using Training Packages?

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Training and assessment using Training Packages must be conducted by a Registered Training Organisation (RTO) that has the qualifications or specific units of competency on its scope of registration, or that works in partnership with another RTO, as specified in the AQTF2010.

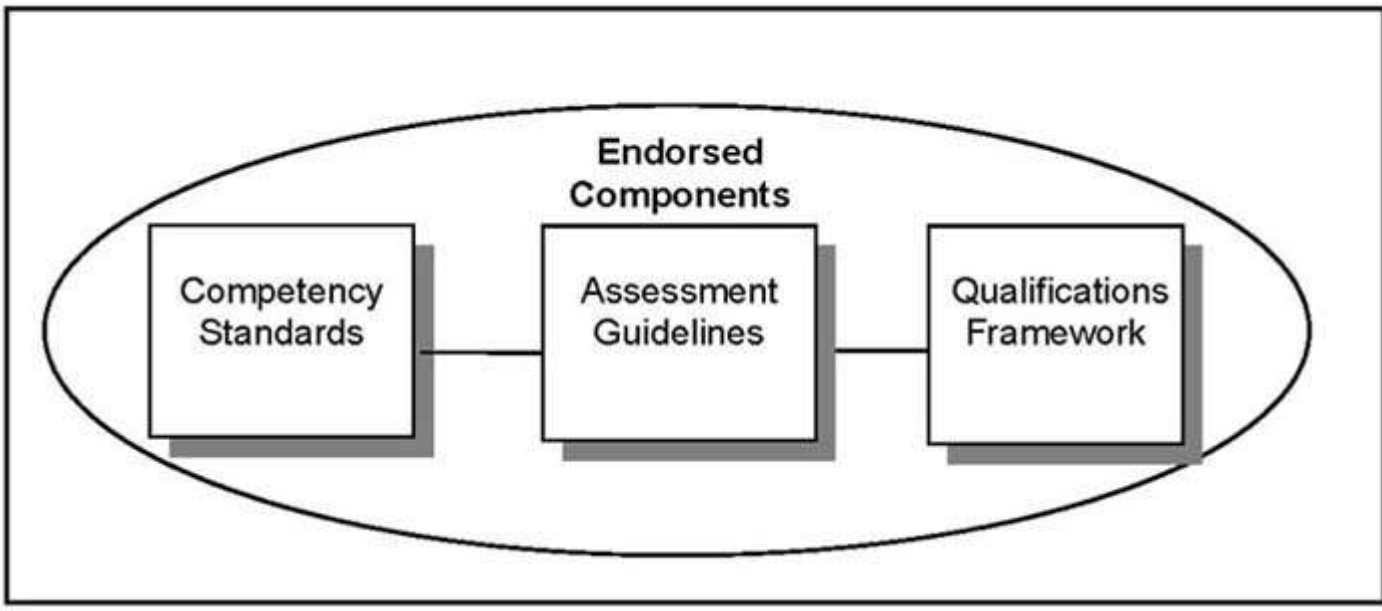
Training Package Components

Training Packages are made up of mandatory components endorsed by the NQC, and optional support materials.

Training Package Endorsed Components

Training Package Endorsed Components

The nationally endorsed components include the Competency Standards, Assessment Guidelines and Qualifications Framework. These form the basis of training and assessment in the Training Package and, as such, they must be used.



Competency Standards

Each unit of competency identifies a discrete workplace requirement and includes the knowledge and skills that underpin competency as well as language, literacy and numeracy; and occupational health and safety requirements. The units of competency must be adhered to in training and assessment to ensure consistency of outcomes.

Assessment Guidelines

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

The Assessment Guidelines provide an industry framework to ensure all assessments meet industry needs and nationally agreed standards as expressed in the Training Package and the AQTF 2010. The Assessment Guidelines must be followed to ensure the integrity of assessment leading to nationally recognised qualifications.

Qualifications Framework

Each Training Package provides details of those units of competency that must be achieved to award AQF qualifications. The rules around which units of competency can be combined to make up a valid AQF qualification in the Training Package are referred to as the "packaging rules". The packaging rules must be followed to ensure the integrity of nationally recognised qualifications issued.

Training Package Support Materials

The endorsed components of Training Packages are complemented and supported by optional support materials that provide for choice in the design of training and assessment to meet the needs of industry and learners.

Training Package support materials can relate to single or multiple units of competency, an industry sector, a qualification or the whole Training Package. They tend to fall into one or more of the categories illustrated below.

Training Package support materials are produced "by a range of stakeholders such as RTOs, individual trainers and assessors, private and commercial developers and Government agencies.

Where such materials have been quality assured through a process of "noting" by the NQC, they display the following official logo. Noted support materials are listed on the National Training Information Service (NTIS), together with a detailed description and information on the type of product and its availability < www.ntis.gov.au>.

It is not compulsory to submit support materials for noting; any resources that meet the requirements of the Training Package can be used.

Training Package, Qualification and Unit of Competency Codes

There are agreed conventions for the national codes used for Training Packages and their components. Always use the correct codes, exactly as they appear in the Training Package, and with the code always before the title.

Training Package Codes

Each Training Package has a unique five-character national code assigned when the Training Package is endorsed, for example BSB07. The first three characters are letters identifying the Training Package industry coverage and the last two characters are numbers identifying the year of endorsement.

Qualification Codes

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Within each Training Package, each qualification has a unique eight-character code, for example BSB10107. Qualification codes are developed as follows:

- the first three letters identify the Training Package;
- the first number identifies the qualification level (noting that, in the qualification titles themselves, arabic numbers are not used);
- the next two numbers identify the position in the sequence of the qualification at that level; and
- the last two numbers identify the year in which the qualification was endorsed. (Where qualifications are added after the initial Training Package endorsement, the last two numbers may differ from other Training Package qualifications as they identify the year in which those particular qualifications were endorsed.)

Unit of Competency Codes

Within each Training Package, each unit of competency has a unique code. Unit of competency codes are assigned when the Training Package is endorsed, or when new units of competency are added to an existing endorsed Training Package. Unit codes are developed as follows:

- a typical code is made up of 12 characters, normally a mixture of uppercase letters and numbers, as in BSBADM101A;
- the first three characters signify the Training Package - BSB07 - in the above example and up to eight characters, relating to an industry sector, function or skill area, follow;
- the last character is always a letter and identifies the unit of competency version. An "A" at the end of the code indicates that this is the original unit of competency. "B", or another incremented version identifier means that minor changes have been made. Typically this would mean that wording has changed in the range statement or evidence guide, providing clearer intent; and
- where changes are made that alter the outcome, a new code is assigned and the title is changed.

Training Package, Qualification and Unit of Competency Titles

There are agreed conventions for titling Training Packages and their components. Always use the correct titles, exactly as they appear in the Training Package, and with the code always placed before the title.

Training Package Titles

The title of each endorsed Training Package is unique and relates the Training Packages broad industry coverage.

Qualification Titles

The title of each endorsed Training Package qualification is unique. Qualification titles use the following sequence:

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

- first, the qualification is identified as either Certificate I, Certificate II, Certificate III, Certificate IV, Diploma, Advanced Diploma, Vocational Graduate Certificate, or Vocational Graduate Diploma;
- this is followed by the words "in" for Certificates I to IV, and "of" for Diploma, Advanced Diploma, Vocational Graduate Certificate and Vocational Graduate Diploma;
- then, the industry descriptor, for example Telecommunications; and
- then, if applicable, the occupational or functional stream in brackets, for example (Computer Systems).

For example:

- BSB10107 Certificate I in Business

Unit of Competency Titles

Each unit of competency title is unique. Unit of competency titles describe the competency outcome concisely, and are written in sentence case.

For example:

- BSBADM101A Use business equipment and resources

History

In December 2007 the primary version of BSB07 was endorsed and released in January 2008, it included all the fields and domains in BSB01, as well as new qualifications in the following areas:

- micro business operations
- customer contact
- administration (education)
- administration (international education)
- international education services
- management (learning).

Version 1.1 of BSB07 was released in September 2008 and included a range of ISC upgrades which were corrections to qualifications and units of competency. The major change was the change of code and title of BSB70107 Vocational Graduate Certificate in Organisational Learning and Capability Development and BSB80107 Vocational Graduate Diploma of Organisational Learning and Capability Development.

Version 2 included new units of competency in business continuity and intellectual property. A range of qualifications was amended to include intellectual property units; and two skills sets were also included, along with a number of ISC upgrades.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Version 3 included a number of ISC upgrades and the revised Certificate IV in Legal Services and Diploma of Legal Services qualifications. The qualification rules in the majority of qualifications were revised to comply with the recent NQC flexibility rules. This revision did not change the outcomes of the qualifications.

Version 4 included the revised Certificate III in Business, Certificate IV in Business Sales, and Advanced Diploma of Advertising. In addition twelve qualifications were amended to include additional or amended elective units and five qualifications were deleted, including the Certificate III in Frontline Management.

Version 5 included the revised Certificate IV in Business (Governance) and the Diploma of Business (Governance); the new codes are BSB41910 and BSB50710 respectively. The review of these qualifications indicated that there was a strong interest in and need for training in the area of organisational governance and that these two qualifications best met the training needs of people involved with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander organisations.

Version 6 includes the deletion of BSB60307 Advanced Diploma of Customer Contact and the revision of four customer contact qualifications: Certificate II in Customer Contact, Certificate III in Customer Contact, Certificate IV in Customer Contact and Diploma of Customer Contact. The new codes for the qualifications are BSB20211, BSB30211, BSB40311 and BSB50311. The qualifications were reviewed to address industry requirements and 13 new units of competency were developed.

Qualifications Framework

The Australian Qualifications Framework

What is the Australian Qualifications Framework?

A brief overview of the Australian Qualifications Framework (AQF) follows. For a full explanation of the AQF, see the AQF Implementation Handbook. http://www.aqf.edu.au/Portals/0/Documents/Handbook/AQF_Handbook_07.pdf The AQF provides a comprehensive, nationally consistent framework for all qualifications in post-compulsory education and training in Australia. In the vocational education and training (VET) sector it assists national consistency for all trainees, learners, employers and providers by enabling national recognition of qualifications and Statements of Attainment.

Training Package qualifications in the VET sector must comply with the titles and guidelines of the AQF. Endorsed Training Packages provide a unique title for each AQF qualification which must always be reproduced accurately.

Qualifications

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Training Packages can incorporate the following eight AQF qualifications.

- Certificate I in ...
- Certificate II in ...
- Certificate III in ...
- Certificate IV in ...
- Diploma of ...
- Advanced Diploma of ...
- Vocational Graduate Certificate of ...
- Vocational Graduate Diploma of ...

Graduate Certificates and Graduate Diplomas can also be awarded in the vocational education and training sector under certain conditions see the AQF Implementation Handbook for details.

On completion of the requirements defined in the Training Package, a Registered Training Organisation (RTO) may issue a nationally recognised AQF qualification. Issuance of AQF qualifications must comply with the advice provided in the AQF Implementation Handbook and the AQTF 2010 Essential Standards for Initial and Continuing Registration.

Statement of Attainment

A Statement of Attainment is issued by a Registered Training Organisation when an individual has completed one or more units of competency from nationally recognised qualification(s)/courses(s). Issuance of Statements of Attainment must comply with the advice provided in the current AQF Implementation Handbook and the AQTF 2010 Essential Standards for Initial and Continuing Registration..

Under the AQTF 2010, RTOs must recognise the achievement of competencies as recorded on a qualification testamur or Statement of Attainment issued by other RTOs. Given this, recognised competencies can progressively build towards a full AQF qualification.

AQF Guidelines and Learning Outcomes

The AQF Implementation Handbook provides a comprehensive guideline for each AQF qualification. A summary of the learning outcome characteristics and their distinguishing features for each VET related AQF qualification is provided below.

Certificate I

Characteristics of Learning Outcomes

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Breadth, depth and complexity of knowledge and skills would prepare a person to perform a defined range of activities most of which may be routine and predictable.

Applications may include a variety of employment related skills including preparatory access and participation skills, broad-based induction skills and/or specific workplace skills. They may also include participation in a team or work group.

Distinguishing Features of Learning Outcomes

Do the competencies enable an individual with this qualification to:

- demonstrate knowledge by recall in a narrow range of areas;
- demonstrate basic practical skills, such as the use of relevant tools;
- perform a sequence of routine tasks given clear direction
- receive and pass on messages/information.

Certificate II

Characteristics of Learning Outcomes

Breadth, depth and complexity of knowledge and skills would prepare a person to perform in a range of varied activities or knowledge application where there is a clearly defined range of contexts in which the choice of actions required is usually clear and there is limited complexity in the range of operations to be applied.

Performance of a prescribed range of functions involving known routines and procedures and some accountability for the quality of outcomes.

Applications may include some complex or non-routine activities involving individual responsibility or autonomy and/or collaboration with others as part of a group or team.

Distinguishing Features of Learning Outcomes

Do the competencies enable an individual with this qualification to:

- demonstrate basic operational knowledge in a moderate range of areas;
- apply a defined range of skills;
- apply known solutions to a limited range of predictable problems;
- perform a range of tasks where choice between a limited range of options is required;
- assess and record information from varied sources;
- take limited responsibility for own outputs in work and learning.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Certificate III

Characteristics of Learning Outcomes

Breadth, depth and complexity of knowledge and competencies would cover selecting, adapting and transferring skills and knowledge to new environments and providing technical advice and some leadership in resolution of specified problems. This would be applied cross a range of roles in a variety of contexts with some complexity in the extent and choice of options available.

Performance of a defined range of skilled operations, usually within a range of broader related activities involving known routines, methods and procedures, where some discretion and judgement is required in the section of equipment, services or contingency measures and within known time constraints.

Applications may involve some responsibility for others. Participation in teams including group or team co-ordination may be involved.

Distinguishing Features of Learning Outcomes

Do the competencies enable an individual with this qualification to:

- demonstrate some relevant theoretical knowledge
- apply a range of well-developed skills
- apply known solutions to a variety of predictable problems
- perform processes that require a range of well-developed skills where some discretion and judgement is required
- interpret available information, using discretion and judgement
- take responsibility for own outputs in work and learning
- take limited responsibility for the output of others

Characteristics of Learning Outcomes

Breadth, depth and complexity of knowledge and competencies would cover a broad range of varied activities or application in a wider variety of contexts most of which are complex and non-routine. Leadership and guidance are involved when organising activities of self and others as well as contributing to technical solutions of a non-routine or contingency nature.

Performance of a broad range of skilled applications including the requirement to evaluate and analyse current practices, develop new criteria and procedures for performing current practices and provision of some leadership and guidance to others in the application and planning of the skills. Applications involve responsibility for, and limited organisation of, others.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Distinguishing Features of Learning Outcomes

Do the competencies enable an individual with this qualification to:

- demonstrate understanding of a broad knowledge base incorporating some theoretical concepts
- apply solutions to a defined range of unpredictable problems
- identify and apply skill and knowledge areas to a wide variety of contexts, with depth in some areas
- identify, analyse and evaluate information from a variety of sources
- take responsibility for own outputs in relation to specified quality standards
- take limited responsibility for the quantity and quality of the output of others.

Diploma

Characteristics of Learning Outcomes

Breadth, depth and complexity covering planning and initiation of alternative approaches to skills or knowledge applications across a broad range of technical and/or management requirements, evaluation and co-ordination.

The self directed application of knowledge and skills, with substantial depth in some areas where judgment is required in planning and selecting appropriate equipment, services and techniques for self and others.

Applications involve participation in development of strategic initiatives as well as personal responsibility and autonomy in performing complex technical operations or organising others. It may include participation in teams including teams concerned with planning and evaluation functions. Group or team co-ordination may be involved.

The degree of emphasis on breadth as against depth of knowledge and skills may vary between qualifications granted at this level.

Distinguishing Features of Learning Outcomes

Do the competencies or learning outcomes enable an individual with this qualification to:

- demonstrate understanding of a broad knowledge base incorporating theoretical concepts, with substantial depth in some areas
- analyse and plan approaches to technical problems or management requirements
- transfer and apply theoretical concepts and/or technical or creative skills to a range of situations
- evaluate information, using it to forecast for planning or research purposes

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

- take responsibility for own outputs in relation to broad quantity and quality parameters
- take some responsibility for the achievement of group outcomes.

Advanced Diploma

Characteristics of Learning Outcomes

Breadth, depth and complexity involving analysis, design, planning, execution and evaluation across a range of technical and/or management functions including development of new criteria or applications or knowledge or procedures.

The application of a significant range of fundamental principles and complex techniques across a wide and often unpredictable variety of contexts in relation to either varied or highly specific functions. Contribution to the development of a broad plan, budget or strategy is involved and accountability and responsibility for self and others in achieving the outcomes is involved.

Applications involve significant judgement in planning, design, technical or leadership/guidance functions related to products, services, operations or procedures.

The degree of emphasis on breadth as against depth of knowledge and skills may vary between qualifications granted at this level.

Distinguishing Features of Learning Outcomes

Do the competencies or learning outcomes enable an individual with this qualification to:

- demonstrate understanding of specialised knowledge with depth in some areas
- analyse, diagnose, design and execute judgements across a broad range of technical or management functions
- generate ideas through the analysis of information and concepts at an abstract level
- demonstrate a command of wide-ranging, highly specialised technical, creative or conceptual skills
- demonstrate accountability for personal outputs within broad parameters
- demonstrate accountability for personal and group outcomes within broad parameters.

Vocational Graduate Certificate

Characteristics of competencies or learning outcomes

- The self-directed development and achievement of broad and specialised areas of knowledge and skills, building on prior knowledge and skills.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

- Substantial breadth and complexity involving the initiation, analysis, design, planning, execution and evaluation of technical and management functions in highly varied and highly specialised contexts.
- Applications involve making significant, high-level, independent judgements in major broad or planning, design, operational, technical and management functions in highly varied and specialised contexts. They may include responsibility and broad-ranging accountability for the structure, management and output of the work or functions of others.
- The degree of emphasis on breadth, as opposed to depth, of knowledge and skills may vary between qualifications granted at this level.

Distinguishing features of learning outcomes

- Demonstrate the self-directed development and achievement of broad and specialised areas of knowledge and skills, building on prior knowledge and skills.
- Initiate, analyse, design, plan, execute and evaluate major broad or technical and management functions in highly varied and highly specialised contexts.
- Generate and evaluate ideas through the analysis of information and concepts at an abstract level.

Vocational Graduate Diploma

Characteristics of competencies or learning outcomes

- The self-directed development and achievement of broad and specialised areas of knowledge and skills, building on prior knowledge and skills.
- Substantial breadth, depth and complexity involving the initiation, analysis, design, planning, execution and evaluation of major functions, both broad and highly specialised, in highly varied and highly specialised contexts.
- Further specialisation within a systematic and coherent body of knowledge.
- Applications involve making high-level, fully independent, complex judgements in broad planning, design, operational, technical and management functions in highly varied and highly specialised contexts. They may include full responsibility and accountability for all aspects of work and functions of others, including planning, budgeting and strategy development.

- The degree of emphasis on breadth, as opposed to depth, of knowledge and skills may vary between qualifications granted at this level.

Qualification Pathways

The BSB07 Business Services Training Package does not mandate particular pathways to the achievement of qualifications. It is the prerogative of RTOs to use the qualifications rules to provide the best learning programs and sequences to meet the needs of candidates and business customers.Candidates may undertake a qualification through a number of entry points demonstrating the potential to undertake vocational education and training at a particular AQF level. Examples are:

- completing a specific lower level qualification from the BSB07 Business Services Training Package or other relevant qualification at the same AQF level or
- having partially completed a specific lower level qualification or
- having vocational experience and no lower level qualification.

Skill Sets in this Training Package

Definition

Skill sets are defined as single units of competency, or combinations of units of competency, from an endorsed Training Package, which link to a licence or regulatory requirement, or defined industry need.

Wording on Statements of Attainment

Skill sets are a way of publicly identifying logical groupings of units of competency that meet an identified need or industry outcome. Skill sets are not qualifications.

Where skill sets are identified in a Training Package, the Statement of Attainment can set out the units of competency a person has achieved in a way that is consistent and clear for employers and others. This is done by including the wording 'These units of competency meet industry requirements for [insert skill set title or identified industry area]' on the Statement of Attainment. This wording applies only to skill sets that are formally identified as such in the endorsed Training Package. See the 2010 edition of the AQF Implementation Handbook for advice on wording on Statements of Attainment.

Historical and General Information

Units of competency for inclusion in Business Services qualifications

BSB07 Business Services Training Package qualifications allow for the inclusion of units from outside the specified field or domain in the BSB07 Business Services Training Package, and from other endorsed Training Packages or accredited courses.

The qualification rules in BSB07 on occasion, allow for units to be selected from a higher or lower qualification. The qualification rules will provide specific advice wherever this rule is applicable. The general rule is that other elective units of competency may be chosen from a qualification level directly below or above the qualification being undertaken. The purpose of this is to allow a choice that will most accurately deliver the requirements of a business, or groups of businesses, or will maximise the employability of an individual or group.

When the qualification rule allows units to be selected from a qualification above and a qualification below these units can be chosen in addition to the elective units listed, even if the elective units are at the same indicative level.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

For example, if the unit BSBHRM402A Recruit, select and induct staff is listed as an elective unit and selected as an elective unit, another unit could be selected from another qualification at the same indicative level.

The electives units listed are not included in the rule that applies to electives selected from other qualifications, Training Packages or accredited courses.

Advice on selection of elective units of competency

Note also that when packaging a qualification, elective units are to be selected from an equivalent level qualification unless otherwise stated.

Advice on prerequisite units

There are no prerequisite units specified within individual BSB07 units of competency. Each unit in BSB07 describes work activities required by business and contains an outline of the knowledge and skills required for that work, which are sufficient for that work. The units have been designed in line with this principle, i.e. the knowledge and skills that are integral to the work requirements are described sufficiently in the unit.

Work outcome

All vocational education qualifications must lead to a work outcome. The unique flexibility of the BSB07 Business Services Training Package qualifications is their feature; it allows for Registered Training Organisations (RTOs) to vary programs to meet:

- specific needs of a business or group of businesses
- skill needs of a locality or a particular industry application of business skills
- maximum employability of a group of students or an individual.

Maximising employability

In all cases, when packaging units to form a BSB07 qualification, RTOs must follow the principle of providing groups and individuals with the broadest possible combination of skills and attributes.

When combining units, therefore, choices must be exercised so that duplication of work outcomes do not occur either within the BSB07 or among other Training Packages.

Hence, when packaging units to form BSB20107 Certificate II in Business, it would not be legitimate to include BSBCMM201A Communicate in the workplace and a communication unit from another Training Package.

The Customer Contact units of competency and qualifications were previously a stream within the ICT02 Telecommunications Training Package. The IBSA Board determined that as these qualifications have broad, cross-industry application they should be relocated into BSB07.

What does BSB07 Business Services Training Package cover?

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

BSB07 Business Services Training package covers a diverse range of industries and occupations comprising the Business Services sector. Business Services is a discrete industry as well as a diverse range of cross-industry functions and services supporting the commercial activities of all industries. In our global, knowledge-based economy, this very large, dynamic and growing industry is vital to Australia's economic progress. Business Services industries covered by this Training Package are described in the following pages.

Administration

The Administration category in BSB07 contains qualifications covering general, education, medical and legal administration.

There are five stand-alone Business Administration qualifications at Certificate III level. They are BSB30407 Certificate III in Business Administration, BSB30507 Certificate III in Business Administration (International Education), BSB30907 Certificate III in Business Administration (Education), BSB31007 Certificate III in Business Administration (Legal) and BSB31107 Certificate III in Business Administration (Medical).

The BSB30407 Certificate III in Business Administration has been designed for individuals working in office administration assistant or junior personal assistant positions, and replaces what was formerly known as the Specialist Administration stream in BSB01. The Medical Administration qualification is for those working in roles such as a medical receptionist, medical records clerk or medical secretary. The Legal Administration qualification is aimed at individuals working in roles such as a legal receptionist or junior legal administration. The Education qualification is suitable for persons working in roles such as education program support worker, school support officer or student services officer.

The units covered in BSB30407 Certificate III in Business Administration include general administrative and IT competencies, such as word processing, keyboarding, scheduling and using a range of software packages to produce documents and databases. Medical administration units cover areas such as medical terminology, preparing accounts, maintaining patient records, medical supplies control and confidentiality. The legal administration units cover areas such as searching public records, delivering court documents and legal terminology.

There are also skill sets in this area covering medical transcription and legal transcription.

BSB30507 Certificate III in Business Administration (International Education) was developed as part of a suite of International Education qualifications. This qualification reflects the role of an individual working in international education administration providing technical advice and support to a team. Typical job roles may include student recruitment and admissions officer, administrative assistant or receptionist within the international office of a university, or a registered training provider such as a TAFE or ELICOS private training provider.

BSB40507 Certificate IV in Business Administration is designed for people working in roles such as administration officer, accounts supervisor or executive personal assistant roles. BSB50407 Diploma of Business Administration qualification is for people in senior administration roles, such as administration manager or office manager roles.

Advertising

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

There are three qualifications in this domain: BSB40107 Certificate IV in Advertising, BSB50107 Diploma of Advertising and BSB60110 Advanced Diploma of Advertising. Workers with these qualifications could include copywriters, media buyers, media analysts, account planners, production managers, art directors, and advertising managers.

The Certificate IV reflects those skills required by a member of an advertising team with units in areas such as target market and audience profiling, pre-campaign testing, production monitoring, advertisement scheduling and media buying. At the Diploma the focus shifts to include research, developing creative concepts, evaluating media options and creating advertisements. The Diploma also contains units on media planning, presenting campaign options to clients, developing advertising strategies and briefs, as well as managing the financial aspects of a campaign. The units at Advanced Diploma reflect higher order management functions in advertising including developing, managing, executing and evaluating an advertising campaign.

Business

There are six business qualifications in BSB07, which range from Certificate I to Advanced Diploma. These qualifications have been designed to be generic, broad-based and contextualised for enterprises, regions, localities and groups across the full spectrum of Australian industry. The qualifications provide essential cross-industry skills for all enterprises. They also provide a pathway for those wishing to continue on with their business studies into the higher education sector.

Business Sales

BSB40610 Certificate IV in Business Sales is designed for individuals working in organisations where sales are among services provided, but selling is not the core business. As a result, this qualification is distinguished from sales that take place in businesses whose core business involves retailing and wholesaling, which are covered by other endorsed Training Packages.

Workers with this qualification could include sales account assistants, sales agents and sales representatives. The qualification contains units on building client relationships, developing product knowledge, identifying prospects and presenting sales solutions. It also has units covering securing buyer commitment, post-sale follow-up and self-evaluating sales performance.

Compliance Management

Compliance Management units are designed to implement and maintain an organisation’s established compliance, program management systems. There are no specific compliance management qualifications. The units are ideally packaged at Certificate IV, Diploma and Advanced Diploma levels, in BSB40207 Certificate IV in Business, BSB50207 Diploma of Business, BSB51107 Diploma of Management and BSB60207 Advanced Diploma of Business. These units were developed in 2004, following extensive consultation and have been updated to be consistent with AS 3806:2006 Compliance programs, AS ISO 10002:2006 Customer satisfaction – Guidelines for complaints handling in organizations, and AS ISO 15489:2004 Records management.

Customer Contact

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

There are five qualifications in Customer Contact ranging from a Certificate II to an Advanced Diploma qualification.

The Certificate II is designed for customer service representatives, call/contact centre agents or telesales representatives. The Certificate III is also suitable for customer service representatives, call/contact centre agents or telesales representatives, as well as more senior customer service representatives. Units of competency covered in these qualifications include meeting customer requirements, resolving customer complaints, working effectively in a contact centre environment and actioning customer contact.

The Certificate IV qualification has been designed for analysts, quality assurance officers, schedulers, subject matter expert/coaches and team leaders. Units of competency covered in this qualification include developing teams and individuals, coordinating customer service strategies, implementing operational plans, providing leadership and managing stress in the workplace.

The Diploma is designed for analysts, campaign managers, quality assurance officers, schedulers, subject matter expert/coaches and experienced team leaders. The units of competency included in this qualification focus on the development of management skills, such as facilitating continuous improvement and capitalising on change and innovation, and ensuring team effectiveness and a safe workplace.

The Advanced Diploma is designed for a wide range of managers, such as contact centre managers, customer service managers, operations and workforce managers. Units of competency in this qualification include managing customer contact information, configuring and optimising customer contact technology, developing a business plan and managing customer contact operational costs.

These qualifications were previously contained as a stream within ICT02 Telecommunications Training Package. The IBSA board has determined that these qualifications have broad application across IBSA's industries and should be relocated into BSB07.

Human Resource Management

The Human Resource Management category reflects ongoing fundamental changes in the work of human resource managers to contributing strategically and operationally to organisational performance.

There are three Human Resource Management qualifications in BSB07. These are BSB41007 Certificate IV in Human Resources, BSB50607 Diploma of Human Resources Management and BSB60907 Advanced Diploma of Management (Human Resources). Workers with these qualifications could include human resource assistants, human resource officers, payroll officers, human resource managers, human resource coordinators, human resource consultants, recruiters and organisational change managers.

The units in these qualifications cover the range of human resource functions, including recruitment, selection, performance management, workforce planning, industrial relations, remuneration and benefits, managing outsourced services, mediation and rehabilitation programs. The four units from the Employment Services domain in BSB01 have been transferred to the Human Resource Management area in BSB07. Flexible packaging rules allow the human resource management units to be incorporated into other qualifications.

Franchising

There are two qualifications in this domain, BSB40707 Certificate IV in Franchising and BSB50507 Diploma of Franchising. The Certificate IV is targeted at franchisees and covers establishing and operating a franchise, managing compliance and the relationship with the franchisor. The Diploma covers establishing a franchise, managing the opening of new sites and expansion, managing relationships with franchisees, and closing a franchise.

There is also a skill set for consultants assisting people to buy into a franchise, or to franchise an existing business operation.

Governance

There are three governance qualifications in BSB07: the revised qualification BSB41910 Certificate IV in Business (Governance), replacing the BSB41907, the BSB50710 revised Diploma of Business (Governance) replacing the BSB50707 and BSB40907 Certificate IV in Governance.

BSB41910 Certificate IV in Business (Governance) and BSB50710 Diploma of Business (Governance) are specialist qualifications for board members of Indigenous organisations. These qualifications follow a review and development by IBSA and the Office of the Registrar of Indigenous Corporations.

BSB40907 Certificate IV in Governance is a generic governance qualification designed for board members with responsibility for coordinating high quality governance within an organisation. There are units on implementing board member responsibilities, analysing financial reports and working within an organisational structure. There are also several electives within the qualification that allow for a specialisation in Indigenous governance. Such units cover maintaining and protecting Indigenous culture, communicating with the community, managing Indigenous cultural processes, and contributing to a culturally appropriate workplace.

Intellectual Property

Intellectual Property units are designed for organisations to protect, manage and use intellectual property, and include units relating to patents, trademarks, design and copyright. There are no specific intellectual property qualifications. The intellectual property units can be packaged as electives in a range of qualifications from Certificate III to Advanced Diploma. These units were developed in 2008 following extensive consultation, after a scoping report identified a high perceived importance of intellectual property and a strong stated need for competency-based related training.

International Education Services

BSB30507 Certificate III in Business Administration (International Education) reflects the role of an individual working in international education administration providing technical advice and support to a team. Typical job roles may include student recruitment and admissions officer, administrative assistant or receptionist within the international office of a university, or a registered training provider such as a TAFE or ELICOS private training provider.

International Trade/Business

There are twenty-three units in the three International Trade/Business qualifications in BSB07. The three qualifications are BSB30607 Certificate III in International Trade, BSB41107 Certificate IV in International Trade, and BSB50807 Diploma of International Business. These qualifications are designed for workers and managers in export and import enterprises, and other specialist personnel involved with international trade and business.

The units cover a diverse range of skills and knowledge involved with the work of international trade/business across a range of levels. The units cover activities such as assisting in the process of importing and exporting goods, international transfer of services and international transport of goods, researching international business opportunities and markets, marketing goods and services internationally, obtaining specialist permits for import and export of goods, forecasting international market and business needs, and promoting products and services to international markets.

Legal Services

There are three qualifications in BSB07 related to Legal Services. These are BSB31007 Certificate III in Business Administration (Legal), BSB40110 Certificate IV in Legal Services and BSB50110 Diploma of Legal Services. The qualifications at Certificate IV and Diploma are designed for people working in occupations such as legal assistants, legal secretaries, legal services, assistant paralegals, support officers and legal support recruitment consultants.

The Certificate III qualification is described in more detail in the Business Administration field above.

The units in the Legal Services qualifications cover areas such as searching public records, keeping time and disbursement records, preparing court documents, and researching legal information.

Management

There are three management qualifications in BSB07: BSB40807 Certificate IV in Frontline Management, BSB51107 Diploma of Management and BSB60407 Advanced Diploma of Management.

The Certificate IV in Frontline Management, Diploma of Management and Advanced Diploma of Management incorporate units from the frontline and strategic management domains in BSB01. The qualifications are applicable to anyone with management responsibility across the full variety of organisations within the Australian economy.

The Certificate IV is designed for workers in team leader, supervisory, front desk or line management positions. The Diploma is designed for middle managers, while the Advanced Diploma is for senior managers moving towards the executive level.

The units cover areas such as finance, operations, leadership, knowledge management, entrepreneurship, risk management, customer service, diversity planning, strategy development and the execution of business goals.

Marketing

There are three marketing qualifications in BSB07. BSB41307 Certificate IV in Marketing is designed for roles including marketing assistant, direct marketing assistant, marketing coordinator or public relations officer. The qualification covers units in areas such as profiling markets, analysing consumer behaviour, conducting market research and making marketing presentations.

BSB51207 Diploma of Marketing is designed for those working as brand managers, category managers, direct marketing managers, marketing team leaders and public relations managers. Units covered by this qualification include evaluating marketing opportunities, establishing the marketing mix, implementing marketing activities, conducting a marketing audit and interpreting market trends.

BSB60507 Advanced Diploma of Marketing is a qualification for individuals working in senior strategic marketing positions, such as marketing directors, marketing strategic directors and national, regional or global marketing managers. Units in this qualification cover areas such as managing the marketing function of an organisation, developing marketing objectives and plans.

Occupational Health and Safety

There are four occupational health and safety (OHS) qualifications from Certificate III to Advanced Diploma. These qualifications were originally developed in 2004, following extensive consultation to meet organisational needs in coordinating and maintaining OHS programs. The qualifications apply to a range of vocations including occupational health and safety coordinator, occupational health and safety officer, both generalist office manager and office manager with an occupational health and safety specialisation.

Management (Learning)

There are two qualifications at a Vocational Graduate Certificate and Vocational Graduate Diploma level in Management (Learning).

The Vocational Graduate Certificate and the Vocational Graduate Diploma reflect the roles of individuals who apply substantial specialised knowledge and skills in the field of learning and capability development.

Both qualifications are relevant to leaders and managers in an organisation where learning is used to build capability – in these roles they harness learning to enhance existing practices and thinking, workforce capability and career development. Typical job roles include human resources development (HRD) operational manager, organisational learning and leadership manager, workforce capability development leader and managers providing career development research or information.

Project Management

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

There are three qualifications in this field: Certificate IV, Diploma and Advanced Diploma. These units and qualifications were originally designed in 2004, following extensive consultation. They were subsequently updated to apply to wide ranging vocational applications, including project authorisation, project scope, management of the project, costing, risk management, integrative processes, procurement and human resources project management.

Purchasing

As well as being a specific work role, purchasing is also a cross-industry and generic work function; all organisations are involved in purchasing to some extent. Units from the Purchasing area may be used in a wide range of qualifications or in the specific Purchasing qualifications at Certificate IV or Diploma, in BSB07. The Purchasing qualifications are BSB41607 Certificate IV in Purchasing and BSB51507 Diploma of Purchasing.

The Purchasing qualifications include competencies ranging from those required to handle low expenditure purchasing transactions through to those required to manage purchasing relationships including international purchasing and supply chain management, suiting a variety of workplace roles related to this specific competency field.

Quality Auditing

There is one qualification in this field, BSB51607 Diploma of Quality Auditing. The qualification applies to a wide range of specialised and managerial quality audit vocations, including planning, conducting and evaluating quality improvements, and organising and supporting quality audit systems. These units and qualification were originally developed in 2004, following extensive consultation and were subsequently streamlined to eliminate duplication.

Recordkeeping

Recordkeepers can be seen as the custodians of corporate memory. Their work ensures the retention and security of records and can involve basic records handling, reviewing and disposing of records, setting up records systems, developing recordkeeping policy, and developing and establishing record and terminology regimes.

There are four qualifications relating to recordkeeping in BSB07: BSB30807 Certificate III in Recordkeeping, BSB41707 Certificate IV in Recordkeeping, BSB51707 Diploma of Recordkeeping and BSB60807 Advanced Diploma of Recordkeeping. Workers with these qualifications would include records officers, records managers, corporate archivists and privacy officers. There is also a skill set for new recordkeepers.

The Certificate III is designed for those working in positions such as assistant records clerks, assistant registry officers and administration officers. Units in this qualification cover retrieving information, controlling, maintaining and deleting records. The Certificate IV is designed for those working in medical records, records clerks, records officers, registry officers and project assistants. Units covered include areas such as reviewing record status, setting up a recordkeeping system and electronic recordkeeping.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

The Diploma is targeted at those in senior recordkeeping positions such as archivists, records management coordinators and senior records officers. Units in this qualification cover areas such as managing and monitoring a business records management system, developing the recordkeeping system and classification systems. The Advanced Diploma qualification is suitable for senior archivists, project managers or records managers and includes units related to the design, security and conceptualisation of an organisation's recordkeeping system; particular emphasis is placed on ensuring the recordkeeping function supports the strategic objectives of the organisation.

Small Business Management

The BSB01 Small Business Management qualification was reviewed and, in response to needs identified through consultation and research undertaken for the Indigenous Small Business Skills Development Project, the following alterations and additions were made to the BSB01 Business Services Training Package:

- development of a new Certificate III – BSB30307 Certificate III in Micro Business Operations
- revision of BSB40407 Certificate IV in Small Business Management
- development of skill sets
- redevelopment of the existing small business management units and the development of new small business management units.

The consultation process undertaken with Indigenous small business organisations, individuals and small business stakeholders facilitated a careful investigation of existing national competency standards to determine whether the training and development needs of small business and micro business were being met. The resultant analysis and further industry consultation refined and updated existing Small Business Management competency standards and produced new competency standards which meet the new and emerging needs of the expanding small business and micro business industry sectors.

Unionism and Industrial Relations

There are two qualifications in this specific competency field, BSB41807 Certificate IV in Unionism and Industrial Relations and BSB51807 Diploma of Unionism and Industrial Relations. The Certificate IV is designed to cater for union organisers and workplace union representatives, while the Diploma is suitable for union officials.

The Certificate IV contains units including communicating with workers, promoting union values, principles and policies, providing advice to union members, undertaking negotiations, bargaining and negotiation. The Diploma includes units on developing campaigns, strategic planning, policy development and presenting cases for members.

Features of the BSB07 Business Services Training Package Qualifications

BSB07 Business Services Training Package contains 59 qualifications across a range of Business Services from Certificate I through to Advanced Diploma levels.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

There are no direct links between the qualifications and licensing, legislative or regulatory requirements. However, where required, a unit of competency will specify relevant licensing, legislative or regulatory requirements that impact on the unit.

The qualification structures have been designed on a core plus electives model, and feature the flexibility to accommodate a wide variety of industry contexts and to suit individual enterprise requirements. An added feature of the qualifications in BSB07 is that suggested electives are provided for some qualifications to achieve different vocational outcomes and Employability Skills summaries have been added to the qualification documents.

Advice has been added regarding the pathways into and from a qualification to better articulate how learners may approach a qualification. As in BSB01, there are no unit prerequisites within BSB07; however the pathways advice provides information on suggested entry levels for learners. Advice is provided for each qualification on how a candidate may enter a qualification. The pathway into a qualification is generally expressed as requiring the candidate to have:

- a completed qualification at a level immediately prior to the qualification to be undertaken

OR

- relevant vocational experience in cases where they do not possess formal qualifications or part thereof.

Categorisation of Units of Competency

Individual Training Packages usually group or categorise units under headings, variously called ‘domains’, ‘functional areas’ or ‘fields’. This ‘sorting’ process helps users navigate content and provides a structure for the way information is presented.

As part of its work to develop a more cohesive development approach, IBSA has created a set of common headings to categorise units of competency across all eleven Training Packages under its coverage. As every IBSA Training Package is reviewed and continuously improved, units of competency will be organised and presented according to this categorisation approach. The needs of all IBSA sectors have been considered in developing the new category headings.

The new categorisation approach:

- helps users to ‘find’ units across any IBSA Training Package as they will always be grouped under consistent headings
- allows IBSA to adopt a much more holistic approach to reviewing and improving units in different content areas
- assists in the process of rationalising units, as unnecessary duplication will be immediately highlighted
- allows each Training Package to select and present only the units that are relevant to a particular industry sector.

IBSA’s unit categorisation approach has two levels of heading – Broad Competency Field and Specific Competency Field. Both of these are shown in each unit of competency in accordance with the national unit template. The table below shows an example of the way a unit of competency has been categorised.

Introduction to the Industry

The business services industry is a major contributor to the Australian economy and employs a significant proportion of the workforce. However, it is not recognised as a distinct industry within the ANZSIC classification scheme used by the ABS and so the exact size and nature of the industry is difficult to quantify.

The business services industry comprises small, medium and large enterprises including multinationals and franchises. An estimated 87% of business services enterprises are SMEs. The industry includes a number of significant sectors or domains, including:

- Administration
- Advertising
- Business development
- Business governance
- Communication
- Creativity, innovation and design
- Finance
- Industry capability and workforce development

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

- Information and Communications Technology
- Knowledge management
- Mail house and despatch
- Management and leadership
- Regulation, licensing and risk
- Stakeholder relations and customer contact

Business services workers provide the crucial services that keep all other industries functioning. Together receptionists, office managers, secretaries and personal assistants make up a workforce of more than 400,000. Counted together all business services occupations could account for as much as 15% of the Australian workforce. The graph below shows the workforce size (in 2008) for major business services occupations.

Emerging issues

In 2009 employers from the Business Services industry responding to IBSA's online e-scan survey indicated that the general issues they were most concerned about were:

- the economy and global financial downturn/recovery
- business taxes tariffs and regulations
- addressing environmental sustainability/green credentials (ISO14001).

Each of these issues was of concern to more than half of all Business Services industry survey respondents. In addition, almost two thirds of Business Services industry survey respondents reported that it is not easy to find applicants with the right mix and level of skills, and 42% reported that it is not easy to move quickly to adjust staff numbers and skills to suit business changes.

Survey respondents identified a critical need for skills in converging technologies including combinations of creative, IT skills and business development skills. The graph below shows areas of critical need for future industry skills as identified by the survey respondents.

Further detail on industry concerns was gathered though consultations with industry.

Workforce skills

Many people (particularly in SMEs) have not had assistance with literacy and numeracy and do not have the basic skills or capabilities to assimilate information – they lack learning skills and support. Numeracy is a particular problem for the calculation of currencies, import duties, GST and other tasks that require basic maths and it is difficult to get the message through, especially to small business, that training is available.

People in SMEs also lack core business skills and don't know where to go to access training for skill gaps. The economic climate is forcing people out of big business – they are starting small businesses or buying franchises without the necessary business skills. There is considerable naivety – people don't know what it takes to run a business.

Workforce flexibility

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025

It is necessary to reskill to accommodate the restructures coming out of the economic conditions. Businesses need to consider how to address shrinkage and ensure they still have the required pool of skills available in their remaining workforce – it's not enough just to think about head counts and ratios and getting rid of training and marketing to cut costs. They need to keep training going so the business has the necessary skills for when the economy recovers.

Technology

This is the start of the mobile, highly-connected workforce, how workplaces are designed and where people work will change and both businesses and workers need to be prepared for what the change will mean (possibly increased isolation, need for greater independence and self-motivation).

Demographic

Older generation is staying in the workforce longer and employers need to encourage them to pass information on before they leave, they also need strategies for enabling people to stay on in more flexible or part-time roles. Impact of migration and even greater multiculturalism in the workplace – need for greater cultural awareness in working with and managing others, and also dealing with customers from a variety of backgrounds (example of Honda running training for dealers on how to sell to Indian customers). Different cultures can also impact on workforce culture, perhaps making the workforce too compliant, less questioning/assertive and less innovative.

Leadership

People are looking for good leaders who know how to empower a team. Leadership is different from management and is important for innovation and for getting the best out of your workforce. Leaders (and others) need emotional intelligence (not just a qualification) and this is largely developed through experience.

Economy

A greater focus on the bottom line and profitability means that employers are reluctant to release people for training. Business is more risk averse and may be unwilling to invest in training.

Business Services Training Package

IBSA's Business Services Training Package is the most heavily used of all training packages for publicly funded VET, accounting for 13.1% of all activity in 2008. Although the current training package for this industry sector is BSB07, most of the NCVER data reported here refers to use of the previous package BSB01.

Competency Standards - Industry Contextualisation

What is competency?

The broad concept of industry competency concerns the ability to perform particular tasks and duties to the standard of performance expected in the workplace. Competency requires the application of specified skills, knowledge and attitudes relevant to effective participation in an industry, industry sector or enterprise.

Competency covers all aspects of workplace performance and involves performing individual tasks; managing a range of different tasks; responding to contingencies or breakdowns; and, dealing with the responsibilities of the workplace, including working with others. Workplace competency requires the ability to apply relevant skills, knowledge and attitudes consistently over time and in the required workplace situations and environments. In line with this concept of competency Training Packages focus on what is expected of a competent individual in the workplace as an outcome of learning, rather than focussing on the learning process itself.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Competency standards in Training Packages are determined by industry to meet identified industry skill needs. Competency standards are made up of a number of units of competency each of which describes a key function or role in a particular job function or occupation. Each unit of competency within a Training Package is linked to one or more AQF qualifications.

Contextualisation of Units of Competency by RTOs

RTOs may contextualise units of competency to reflect local outcomes required. Contextualisation could involve additions or amendments to the unit of competency to suit particular delivery methods, learner profiles, specific enterprise equipment requirements, or to otherwise meet local needs. However, the integrity of the overall intended outcome of the unit of competency must be maintained.Any contextualisation of units of competency in this endorsed Training Package must be within the bounds of the following advice. In contextualising units of competency, RTOs:

- must not remove or add to the number and content of elements and performance criteria
- may add specific industry terminology to performance criteria where this does not distort or narrow the competency outcomes
- may make amendments and additions to the range statement as long as such changes do not diminish the breadth of application of the competency and reduce its portability
- may add detail to the evidence guide in areas such as the critical aspects of evidence or resources and infrastructure required where these expand the breadth of the competency but do not limit its use.

Components of Units of Competency

The components of units of competency are summarised below, in the order in which they appear in each unit of competency.

Unit Title

The unit title is a succinct statement of the outcome of the unit of competency. Each unit of competency title is unique, both within and across Training Packages.

Unit Descriptor

The unit descriptor broadly communicates the content of the unit of competency and the skill area it addresses. Where units of competency have been contextualised from units of competency from other endorsed Training Packages, summary information is provided. There may also be a brief second paragraph that describes its relationship with other units of competency, and any licensing requirements.

Employability Skills statement

A standard Employability Skills statement appears in each unit of competency. This statement directs trainers and assessors to consider the information contained in the Employability Skills Summary in which the unit of competency is packaged.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Prerequisite Units (optional)

If there are any units of competency that must be completed before the unit, these will be listed.

Application of the Unit

This sub-section fleshes out the unit of competency's scope, purpose and operation in different contexts, for example, by showing how it applies in the workplace.

Competency Field (Optional)

The competency field either reflects the way the units of competency are categorised in the Training Package or denotes the industry sector, specialisation or function. It is an optional component of the unit of competency.

Sector (optional)

The industry sector is a further categorisation of the competency field and identifies the next classification, for example an elective or supervision field.

Elements of Competency

The elements of competency are the basic building blocks of the unit of competency. They describe in terms of outcomes the significant functions and tasks that make up the competency.

Performance Criteria

The performance criteria specify the required performance in relevant tasks, roles, skills and in the applied knowledge that enables competent performance. They are usually written in passive voice. Critical terms or phrases may be written in bold italics and then defined in range statement, in the order of their appearance in the performance criteria.

Required Skills and Knowledge

The essential skills and knowledge are either identified separately or combined. Knowledge identifies what a person needs to know to perform the work in an informed and effective manner. Skills describe the application of knowledge to situations where understanding is converted into a workplace outcome.

Range Statement

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

The range statement provides a context for the unit of competency, describing essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment, depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts. As applicable, the meanings of key terms used in the performance criteria will also be explained in the range statement.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide is critical in assessment as it provides information to the Registered Training Organisation (RTO) and assessor about how the described competency may be demonstrated. The evidence guide does this by providing a range of evidence for the assessor to make determinations, and by providing the assessment context. The evidence guide describes:

- conditions under which competency must be assessed including variables such as the assessment environment or necessary equipment
- relationships with the assessment of any other units of competency
- suitable methodologies for conducting assessment including the potential for workplace simulation
- resource implications, for example access to particular equipment, infrastructure or situations
- how consistency in performance can be assessed over time, various contexts and with a range of evidence, and expectations at the AQF qualification level involved

Employability Skills in units of competency

The detail and application of Employability Skills facets will vary according to the job-role requirements of each industry. In developing Training Packages, industry stakeholders are consulted to identify appropriate facets of Employability Skills which are incorporated into the relevant units of competency and qualifications.

Employability Skills are not a discrete requirement contained in units of competency (as was the case with Key Competencies). Employability Skills are specifically expressed in the context of the work outcomes described in units of competency and will appear in elements, performance criteria, range statements and evidence guides. As a result, users of Training Packages are required to review the entire unit of competency in order to accurately determine Employability Skills requirements.

How Employability Skills relate to the Key Competencies

The eight nationally agreed Employability Skills now replace the seven Key Competencies in Training Packages. Trainers and assessors who have used Training Packages prior to the introduction of Employability Skills may find the following comparison useful.

Employability Skills	Mayer Key Competencies

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Communication	Communicating ideas and information
Teamwork	Working with others and in teams
Problem solving	Solving problems Using mathematical ideas and techniques
Initiative and enterprise
Planning and organising	Collecting, analysing and organising information Planning and organising activities
Self-management
Learning
Technology	Using technology

When analysing the above table it is important to consider the relationship and natural overlap of Employability Skills. For example, using technology may involve communication skills and combine the understanding of mathematical concepts.

Explicitly embedding Employability Skills in units of competency

- This Training Package seeks to ensure that industry-endorsed Employability Skills are explicitly embedded in units of competency. The application of each skill and the level of detail included in each part of the unit will vary according to industry requirements and the nature of the unit of competency.

Employability Skills must be both explicit and embedded within units of competency. This means that Employability Skills will be:

- embedded in units of competency as part of the other performance requirements that make up the competency as a whole
- explicitly described within units of competency to enable Training Packages users to identify accurately the performance requirements of each unit with regards to Employability Skills.

This Training Package also seeks to ensure that Employability Skills are well-defined and written into units of competency so that they are apparent, clear and can be delivered and assessed as an essential component of unit work outcomes.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

The following table contains examples of embedded Employability Skills for each component of a unit of competency. Please note that in the examples below the bracketed skills are provided only for clarification and will not be present in units of competency within this Training Package.

Example Employability Skills unit

Unit component	Example of embedded Employability Skill
Unit Title	Manage operational plan (planning and organising, self management).
Unit Descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to develop and monitor implementation of the operational plan to provide efficient and effective workplace practices within the organisation's productivity and profitability plans. Management at a strategic level requires systems and procedures to be developed and implemented to facilitate the organisation's operational plan (planning and organising, self management, problem solving, initiative and enterprise).
Element	Monitor and review operational performance (communication, problem solving)
Performance Criteria	Plan and implement systems to ensure that mentoring and coaching are provided to support individuals and teams to effectively, economically and safely use resources (planning and organising, communication, team work, learning).

Range Statement	Consultation processes may refer to: • email/intranet communications, newsletters or other processes and devices which ensure that all employees have the opportunity to contribute to team and individual operational plans (technology, communication)
Required Skills and Knowledge	• literacy skills to access and use workplace information and to write a succinct and practical plan • technology skills to use software to produce and monitor the plan against performance indicators • planning and organisational skills • coaching skills to work with people with poor performance

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

	• numeracy skills to allocate and manage financial resources (communication, technology, planning and organising, learning).
Evidence Guide	Evidence of the following is essential: • development of an operational plan with details of how it will be implemented and monitored • knowledge of models and methods for operational plans (self management, communication, problem solving, initiative and enterprise, planning and organising, self management).

Competency Standards - Industry Contextualisation

RTOs may contextualise units of competency to reflect local outcomes required. Contextualisation could involve additions or amendments to the unit of competency to suit particular delivery methods, learner profiles, specific enterprise equipment requirements, or to otherwise meet local needs. However, the integrity of the overall intended outcome of the unit of competency must be maintained.

Any contextualisation of units of competency in this endorsed Training Package must be within the bounds of the following advice. In contextualising units of competency, RTOs:

- must not remove or add to the number and content of elements and performance criteria
- may add specific industry terminology to performance criteria where this does not distort or narrow the competency outcomes
- may make amendments and additions to the range statement as long as such changes do not diminish the breadth of application of the competency and reduce its portability
- may add detail to the evidence guide in areas such as the critical aspects of evidence or resources and infrastructure required where these expand the breadth of the competency but do not limit its use.

Employability Skills

Employability Skills replacing key competency information from 2006

In May 2005, the approach to incorporate employability skills within Training Package qualifications and units of competency was endorsed. As a result, from 2006 employability skills have replaced key competency information in Training Packages.

Background to employability skills

Employability skills are also sometimes referred to as generic skills, capabilities or key competencies. The employability skills discussed here build on the Mayer Committee's key competencies, which were developed in 1992 and attempted to describe generic competencies for effective participation in work.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

The Business Council of Australia (BCA) and the Australian Chamber of Commerce and Industry (ACCI), produced the Employability Skills for the Future report in 2002 in consultation with other peak employer bodies and with funding provided by the Department of Education, Science and Training (DEST) and the Australian National Training Authority (ANTA). Officially released in 2002, copies of the report are available from the DEST website at: www.dest.gov.au/archive/ty/publications/ employability_skills/index.htm.

The report indicated that business and industry now require a broader range of skills than the Mayer Key Competencies Framework and featured an Employability Skills Framework identifying the following eight employability skills:

- Communication
- Teamwork
- Problem solving
- Initiative and enterprise
- Planning and organising
- Self-management
- Learning
- Technology.

The report demonstrated how employability skills can be further described for particular occupational and industry contexts by sets of facets. The facets listed in the report are the aspects of the employability skills that the sample of employers surveyed identified as being important work skills. These facets were seen by employers as being dependent both in their nature and priority on an enterprise's business activity.

Employability Skills Framework

The following table contains the employability skills facets identified in the report Employability Skills for the Future.

Skill	Facets
	Aspects of the skill that employers identify as important. The nature and application of these facets will vary depending on industry and job type.
Communication that contributes to productive and harmonious relations across employees and customers:	• listening and understanding • speaking clearly and directly • writing to the needs of the audience • negotiating responsively • reading independently • empathising • using numeracy effectively • understanding the needs of internal and external customers • persuading effectively • establishing and using networks

	Aspects of the skill that employers identify as important. The nature and application of these facets will vary depending on industry and job type.
	• being assertive • sharing information • speaking and writing in languages other than English.
Teamwork that contributes to productive working relationships and outcomes:	• working across different ages irrespective of gender, race, religion or political persuasion • working as an individual and as a member of a team • knowing how to define a role as part of the team • applying teamwork to a range of situations, e.g. future planning and crisis problem solving • identifying the strengths of team members • coaching and mentoring skills, including giving feedback.
Problem solving that contributes to productive outcomes:	• developing creative, innovative and practical solutions • showing independence and initiative in identifying and solving problems • solving problems in teams • applying a range of strategies to problem solving • using mathematics, including budgeting and financial management to solve problems • applying problem solving strategies across a range of areas • testing assumptions, taking into account the context of data and circumstances • resolving customer concerns in relation to complex project issues.
Initiative and enterprise that contribute to innovative outcomes:	• adapting to new situations • developing a strategic, creative and long-term vision • being creative • identifying opportunities not obvious to others • translating ideas into action • generating a range of options • initiating innovative solutions.
Planning and organising that contribute to long and short-term strategic planning:	• managing time and priorities – setting time lines, coordinating tasks for self and with others • being resourceful • taking initiative and making decisions • adapting resource allocations to cope with contingencies • establishing clear project goals and deliverables

	Aspects of the skill that employers identify as important. The nature and application of these facets will vary depending on industry and job type.
	• allocating people and other resources to tasks • planning the use of resources, including time management • participating in continuous improvement and planning processes • developing a vision and a proactive plan to accompany it • predicting – weighing up risk, evaluating alternatives and applying evaluation criteria • collecting, analysing and organising information • understanding basic business systems and their relationships.
Self-management that contributes to employee satisfaction and growth:	• having a personal vision and goals • evaluating and monitoring own performance • having knowledge and confidence in own ideas and visions • articulating own ideas and visions • taking responsibility.
Learning that contributes to ongoing improvement and expansion in employee and company operations and outcomes:	• managing own learning • contributing to the learning community at the workplace • using a range of mediums to learn – mentoring, peer support and networking, IT and courses • applying learning to technical issues (e.g. learning about products) and people issues (e.g. interpersonal and cultural aspects of work) • having enthusiasm for ongoing learning • being willing to learn in any setting – on and off the job • being open to new ideas and techniques • being prepared to invest time and effort in learning new skills • acknowledging the need to learn in order to accommodate change.
Technology that contributes to the effective carrying out of tasks:	• having a range of basic IT skills • applying IT as a management tool • using IT to organise data • being willing to learn new IT skills • having the OHS knowledge to apply technology • having the appropriate physical capacity.

Employability Skills summary

An employability skills summary is included for each qualification. Summaries provide a lens through which to view employability skills at the qualification level and capture the key aspects or facets of the employability skills that are important to the job roles covered by the qualification. Summaries are designed to assist trainers and assessors to identify and include important industry application of employability skills in learning and assessment strategies.

The following is important information for trainers and assessors about employability skills summaries:

- Employability skills summaries provide examples of how each skill is applicable to the job roles covered by the qualification.
- Employability skills summaries contain general information about the industry context which is further explained as measurable outcomes of performance in the units of competency in each qualification.
- The detail in each employability skills summary will vary depending on the range of job roles covered by the qualification in question.
- Employability skills summaries are not exhaustive lists of qualification requirements or checklists of performance (which are separate assessment tools that should be designed by trainers and assessors after analysis at the unit level).
- Employability skills summaries contain information that may also assist in building learners' understanding of industry and workplace expectations.

Assessment Guidelines

Introduction

These Assessment Guidelines provide the endorsed framework for assessment of units of competency in this Training Package. They are designed to ensure that assessment is consistent with the Australian Quality Training Framework (AQTF) Essential Standards for Initial and Continuing Registration. Assessments against the units of competency in this Training Package must be carried out in accordance with these Assessment Guidelines.

Assessment System Overview

This section provides an overview of the requirements for assessment when using this Training Package, including a summary of the AQTF 2007 requirements; licensing/registration requirements; and assessment pathways.

Quality assessment underpins the credibility of the vocational education and training sector. The Assessment Guidelines of a Training Package are an important tool in supporting quality assessment.

Assessment within the National Skills Framework is the process of collecting evidence and making judgements about whether competency has been achieved to confirm whether an individual can perform to the standards expected in the workplace, as expressed in the relevant endorsed unit of competency.

Assessment must be carried out in accordance with the:

- benchmarks for assessment

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

- specific industry requirements
- principles of assessment
- rules of evidence
- assessment requirements set out in the AQTF

Benchmarks for Assessment

The endorsed units of competency in this Training Package are the benchmarks for assessment. As such, they provide the basis for nationally recognised Australian Qualifications Framework (AQF) qualifications and Statements of Attainment issued by Registered Training Organisations (RTOs).

Principles of Assessment

All assessments carried out by RTOs are required to demonstrate compliance with the principles of assessment:

- validity
- reliability
- flexibility
- fairness
- sufficiency

These principles must be addressed in the:

design, establishment and management of the assessment system for this Training

Package development of assessment tools, and the conduct of assessment.

Validity

Assessment is valid when the process is sound and assesses what it claims to assess. Validity requires that:

(a)	assessment against the units of competency must cover the broad range of skills and knowledge that are essential to competent performance
(b)	assessment of knowledge and skills must be integrated with their practical application
(c)	judgement of competence must be based on sufficient evidence (that is, evidence gathered on a number of occasions and in a range of contexts using different assessment methods). The specific evidence requirements of each unit of competency provide advice on sufficiency

Reliability

Reliability refers to the degree to which evidence presented for assessment is consistently interpreted and results in consistent assessment outcomes. Reliability requires the assessor to have the required competencies in assessment and relevant vocational competencies (or to assess in conjunction with someone who has the vocational competencies). It can only be achieved when assessors share a common interpretation of the assessment requirements of the unit(s) being assessed.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Flexibility

To be flexible, assessment should reflect the candidate"s needs; provide for recognition of competencies no matter how, where or when they have been acquired; draw on a range of methods appropriate to the context, competency and the candidate; and support continuous competency development.

Fairness

Fairness in assessment requires consideration of the individual candidate"s needs and characteristics, and any reasonable adjustments that need to be applied to take account of them. It requires clear communication between the assessor and the candidate to ensure that the candidate is fully informed about, understands and is able to participate in, the assessment process, and agrees that the process is appropriate. It also includes an opportunity for the person being assessed to challenge the result of the assessment and to be reassessed if necessary.

Sufficiency

Sufficiency relates to the quality and quantity of evidence assessed. It requires collection of enough appropriate evidence to ensure that all aspects of competency have been satisfied and that competency can be demonstrated repeatedly. Supplementary sources of evidence may be necessary. The specific evidence requirements of each unit of competency provide advice on sufficiency. Sufficiency is also one of the rules of evidence.

Rules of Evidence

The rules of evidence guide the collection of evidence that address the principles of validity and reliability, guiding the collection of evidence to ensure that it is valid, sufficient, current and authentic.

Valid

Valid evidence must relate directly to the requirements of the unit of competency. In ensuring evidence is valid, assessors must ensure that the evidence collected supports demonstration of the outcomes and performance requirements of the unit of competency together with the knowledge and skills necessary for competent performance. Valid evidence must encapsulate the breadth and depth of the unit of competency, which will necessitate using a number of different assessment methods.

Sufficient

Sufficiency relates to the quality and quantity of evidence assessed. It requires collection of enough appropriate evidence to ensure that all aspects of competency have been satisfied and that competency can be demonstrated repeatedly. Supplementary sources of evidence may be necessary. The specific evidence requirements of each unit of competency provide advice on sufficiency.

Current

In assessment, currency relates to the age of the evidence presented by a candidate to demonstrate that they are still competent. Competency requires demonstration of current performance, so the evidence collected must be from either the present or the very recent past.

Authentic

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

To accept evidence as authentic, an assessor must be assured that the evidence presented for assessment is the candidate"s own work.

Assessment Requirements of the Australian Quality Training Framework

Assessment leading to nationally recognised AQF qualifications and Statements of Attainment in the vocational education and training sector must meet the requirements of the AQTF as expressed in the AQTF 2010 Essential Standards for Registration.

The AQTF 2010 Essential Standards for Initial and Continuing Registration can be downloaded from < www.training.com.au>.

The following points summarise the assessment requirements.

Registration of Training Organisations

Assessment must be conducted by, or on behalf of, an RTO formally registered by a State or Territory Registering Body in accordance with the AQTF The RTO must have the specific units of competency and/or AQF qualifications on its scope of registration.

Quality Training and Assessment

Each RTO must provide quality training and assessment across all its operations. See the AQTF 2010 Essential Standards for Initial and Continuing Registration, Standard 1.

Assessor Competency Requirements

Each person involved in training, assessment or client service must be competent for the functions they perform. AQTF 2010 Essential Standards for Initial and Continuing Registration, Standard 1 for assessor (and trainer) competency requirements. See also the AQTF 2010 Users" Guide to the Essential Standards for Registration Appendix 2.

Assessment Requirements

The RTOs assessments, including RPL, must meet the requirements of the relevant endorsed Training Package. See the AQTF 2010 Essential Standards for Initial and Continuing Registration.

Assessment Strategies

Each RTO must have strategies for training and assessment that meet the requirements of the relevant Training Package or accredited course and are developed in consultation with industry stakeholders. See the AQTF 2010 Essential Standards for Initial and Continuing Registration.

National Recognition

Each RTO must recognise the AQF qualifications and Statements of Attainment issued by any other RTO. See the AQTF 2010 Essential Standards for Initial and Continuing Registration.

Access and Equity and Client Outcomes

Each RTO must adhere to the principles of access and equity and maximise outcomes for its clients. See the AQTF 2010 Essential Standards for Initial and Continuing Registration.

Monitoring Assessments

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Training and/or assessment provided on behalf of the RTO must be monitored to ensure that it is in accordance with all aspects of the AQTF 2010 Essential Standards for Initial and Continuing Registration.

Recording Assessment Outcomes

Each RTO must manage records to ensure their accuracy and integrity. See the AQTF 2010

Essential Standards for Initial and Continuing Registration.

Issuing AQF Qualifications and Statements of Attainment

Each RTO must issue AQF qualifications and Statements of Attainment that meet the requirements of the current AQF Implementation Handbook and the endorsed Training Packages within the scope of its registration. An AQF qualification is issued once the full requirements for a qualification, as specified in the nationally endorsed Training Package are met. A Statement of Attainment is issued when an individual has completed one or more units of competency from nationally recognised qualification(s)/courses(s). See the AQTF and the edition of the AQF Implementation Handbook-available on the AQF Council website < www.aqf.edu.au>.

Licensing/Registration Requirements

This section provides information on licensing/registration requirements for BSB07 Business Services Training Package, with the following important disclaimer.

The developers of this Training Package, and DEEWR, consider that no licensing or registration requirements apply to registered training organisations (RTOs), assessors or candidates with respect to this Training Package. Contact the relevant state or territory department(s) to check if there are any licensing or registration requirements with which you must comply. For further information on this topic contact IBSA at www.ibsa.org.au.

Requirements for Assessors

This section outlines the requirements and responsibilities of assessors assessing qualifications and units of competency in BSB07, including:

- vocational competency requirements
- responsibilities in making assessment judgements
- the need to maintain currency in assessment practice.

Competency requirements of assessors

The benchmarks for demonstration of this vocational competence are the relevant units of competency in BSB07 Business Services Training Package or equivalent competence.

Persons who conduct assessments against individual units of competency from BSB07 Business Services Training Package must hold formal recognition of competence in each unit in which they wish to conduct assessment or be able to demonstrate equivalent competence.

Responsibilities of assessors

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Assessors have significant responsibilities. Their judgement certifies that candidates have demonstrated competency to the standard required in the workplace.

In making the judgement of competence against BSB07 units of competency, assessors must evaluate the evidence and assess the risks. Constraints and pressures are widespread – time, cost, the demand for a quick outcome – but compromise and diminution of unit requirements are not viable options. Faithful adherence to the content and intent of the Training Package in the assessment process is critical.

Maintaining currency

An important aspect of maintaining competence in training and assessment is the currency of competence. Assessors have a responsibility to maintain currency in all areas of their own vocational competence.

Moy (2001) defines industry currency as maintaining, upgrading and if required, widening competence in the specialised industry skills and knowledge needed to deliver and assess vocational education and training (VET) courses.

Currency also includes maintaining professional knowledge about the industry sector, including technologies and workplace practices. This may be achieved through:

- attendance at relevant professional development activities
- participation in networks, communities of practices or mentoring activities
- personal development through reading of industry journals.

Requirements for RTOs

Because of the potentially sensitive nature of some of the cultural information covered in the Certificate IV in Business (Governance) and the Diploma of Business (Governance) particular care should be taken when choosing an appropriately qualified and suitable person or persons to deliver and undertake assessment in these qualifications.

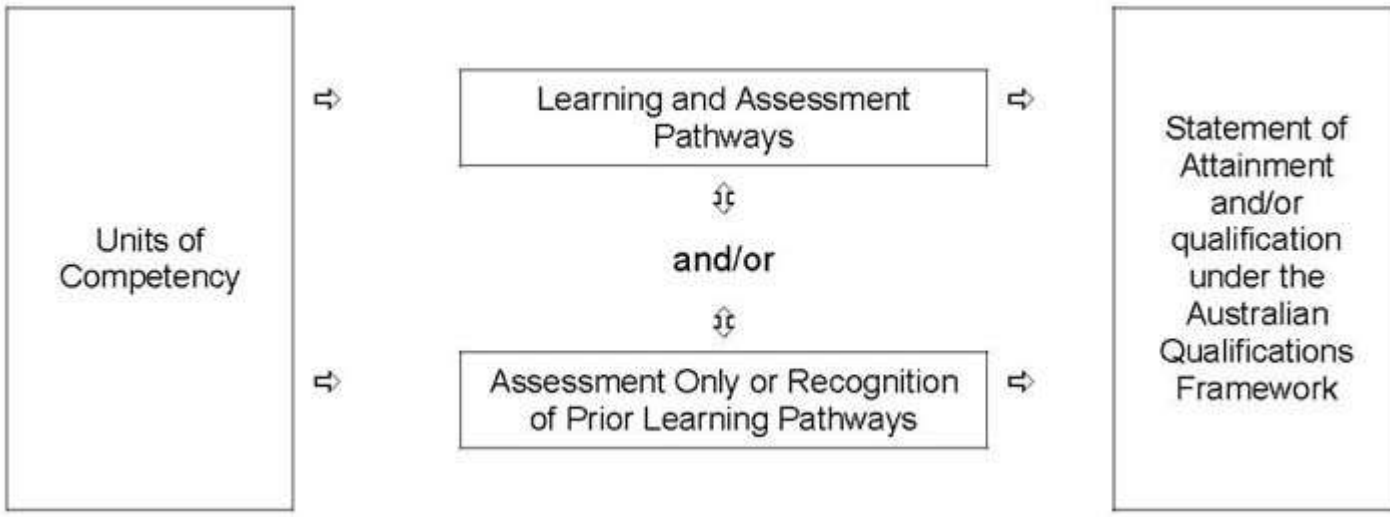
Pathways

The competencies in this Training Package may be attained in a number of ways including through:

- formal or informal education and training
- experiences in the workplace
- general life experience, and/or
- any combination of the above.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Assessment under this Training Package leading to an AQF qualification or Statement of Attainment may follow a learning and assessment pathway, an assessment-only or recognition pathway, or a combination of the two as illustrated in the following diagram.



Each of these assessment pathways leads to full recognition of competencies held - the critical issue is that the candidate is competent, not how the competency was acquired.

Assessment, by any pathway, must comply with the assessment requirements set out in the Assessment Guidelines of the Training Package, and the AQTF, 2 where relevant, the Australian Qualifications Framework.

Learning and Assessment Pathways

Usually, learning and assessment are integrated, with assessment evidence being collected and feedback provided to the candidate at anytime throughout the learning and assessment process.

Learning and assessment pathways may include structured programs in a variety of contexts using a range of strategies to meet different learner needs. Structured learning and assessment programs could be: group-based, work-based, project-based, self-paced, action learning-based; conducted by distance or e-learning; and/or involve practice and experience in the workplace.

Learning and assessment pathways to suit Australian Apprenticeships have a mix of formal structured training and structured workplace experience with formative assessment activities through which candidates can acquire and demonstrate skills and knowledge from the relevant units of competency.

Credit Pathways

Credit is the value assigned for the recognition of equivalence in content between different types of learning and/or qualifications which reduces the volume of learning required to achieve a qualification.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Credit arrangements must be offered by all RTOs that offer Training Package qualifications. Each RTO must have a systematic institutional approach with clear, accessible and transparent policies and procedures.

Competencies already held by individuals can be formally assessed against the units of competency in this Training Package, and should be recognised regardless of how, when or where they were acquired, provided that the learning is relevant to the unit of competency outcomes.

Recognition of Prior Learning

Recognition of Prior Learning (RPL) is an assessment process which determines the credit outcomes of an individual application for credit.

The availability of Recognition of Prior Learning (RPL) provides all potential learners with access to credit opportunities.

The recognition of prior learning pathway is appropriate for candidates who have previously attained skills and knowledge and who, when enrolling in qualifications, seek to shorten the duration of their training and either continue or commence working. This may include the following groups of people:

existing workers; individuals with overseas qualifications; recent migrants with established work histories; people returning to the workplace; and people with disabilities or injuries requiring a change in career.

As with all assessment, RPL assessment should be undertaken by academic or teaching staff with expertise in the subject, content of skills area, as well as knowledge of and expertise in RPL assessment policies and procedures.

Assessment methods used for RPL should provide a range of ways for individuals to demonstrate that they have met the required outcomes and can be granted credit. These might include:

questioning (oral or written) consideration of a portfolio and review of contents consideration of third party reports and/or other documentation such as documentation such as articles, reports, project material, papers, testimonials or other products prepared by the RPL applicant that relate to the learning outcomes of the relevant qualification component mapping of learning outcomes from prior formal or non-formal learning to the relevant qualification components observation of performance, and participation in structured assessment activities the individual would normally be required to undertake if they were enrolled in the qualification component/s.

In a Recognition of Prior Learning (RPL) pathway, the candidate provides current, quality evidence of their competency against the relevant unit of competency. This process may be directed by the candidate and verified by the assessor. Where the outcomes of this process indicate that the candidate is competent, structured training is not required. The RPL requirements of the AQTF must be met.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

As with all assessment, the assessor must be confident that the evidence indicates that the candidate is currently competent against the endorsed unit of competency. This evidence may take a variety of forms and might include certification, references from past employers, testimonials from clients, work samples and/or observation of the candidate. The onus is on candidates to provide sufficient evidence to satisfy assessors that they currently hold the relevant competencies. In judging evidence, the assessor must ensure that the evidence of prior learning is:

authentic (the candidate"s own work);

• alid (directly related to the current version of the relevant endorsed unit of competency);

r•eliable (shows that the candidate consistently meets the endorsed unit of competency);

c• urrent (reflects the candidate"s current capacity to perform the aspect of the work covered by the endorsed unit of competency); and s• ufficient (covers the full range of elements in the relevant unit of competency and addresses the four dimensions of competency, namely task skills, task management skills, contingency management skills, and job/role environment skills).

Credit Transfer

Credit transfer is a process which provides learners with agreed and consistent credit outcomes based on equivalences in content between matched qualifications.

This process involves education institutions:

mapping, comparing and evaluating the extent to which the defined learning outcomes and assessment requirements of the individual components of one qualification are equivalent to the learning outcomes and assessment requirements of the individual components of another qualification making an educational judgment of the credit outcomes to be assigned between the matched components of the two qualifications setting out the agreed credit outcomes in a documented arrangement or agreement, and p• ublicising the arrangement/agreement and credit available.

Combination of Pathways

Credit may be awarded on the basis of a combination of credit transfer plus an individual RPL assessment for additional learning. Once credit has been awarded on the basis of RPL, subsequent credit transfer based on these learning outcomes should not include revisiting the RPL assessment but should be based on credit transfer or articulation or other arrangements between providers.

Where candidates for assessment have gained competencies through work and life experience and gaps in their competence are identified, or where they require training in new areas, a combination of pathways may be appropriate.

In such situations, the candidate may undertake an initial assessment to determine their current competency. Once current competency is identified, a structured learning and assessment program ensures that the candidate acquires the required additional competencies identified as gaps.

Assessor Requirements

This section identifies the specific requirements on the vocational competence and experience for assessors, to ensure that they meet the needs of industry and their obligations under AQTF, and clarifies how others may contribute to the assessment process where one person alone does not hold all the required competencies.

Assessor Competencies

The AQTF specifies mandatory competency requirements for assessors. For information, Element 1.4 from the AQTF 2007 Essential Standards for Registration follows:

1.4		Training and assessment is delivered by trainers and assessors who:
	a)	have the necessary training and assessment competencies as determined by the National Quality Council or its successors, and
	b)	have the relevant vocational competencies at least to the level being delivered or assessed, and
	c)	can demonstrate current industry skills directly relevant to the training/assessment being undertaken, and
	d)	continue developing their Vocational Education and Training (VET) knowledge and skills as well as their industry currency and trainer/assessor competence. * See AQTF 2010 Users" Guide to the Essential Standards for Registration Appendix 2

Designing Assessment Tools

This section provides an overview on the use and development of assessment tools.

Use of Assessment Tools

Assessment tools provide a means of collecting the evidence that assessors use in making judgments about whether candidates have achieved competency.

There is no set format or process for the design, production or development of assessment tools. Assessors may use prepared assessment tools, such as those specifically developed to support this Training Package, or they may develop their own.

Using Prepared Assessment Tools

If using prepared assessment tools, assessors should ensure these relate to the current version of the relevant unit of competency. The current unit of competency can be checked on the National Register < www.ntis.gov.au>.

Developing Assessment Tools

When developing assessment tools, assessors must ensure that they:

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

- are benchmarked against the relevant unit or units of competency
- are reviewed as part of the continuous improvement of assessment strategies as required under Standard 1 of the AQTF 2007
- meet the assessment requirements expressed in Standard 1 of the AQTF 2010

Essential Standards for Initial and Continuing Registration.

A key reference for assessors developing assessment tools is TAE10 Training and Education Training Package.

Language, Literacy and Numeracy

The design of assessment tools must reflect the language, literacy and numeracy competencies required for the performance of a task in the workplace and not exceed these expectations.

Conducting Assessment

This section details the mandatory assessment requirements and provides information on equity in assessment including reasonable adjustment.

Mandatory Assessment Requirements

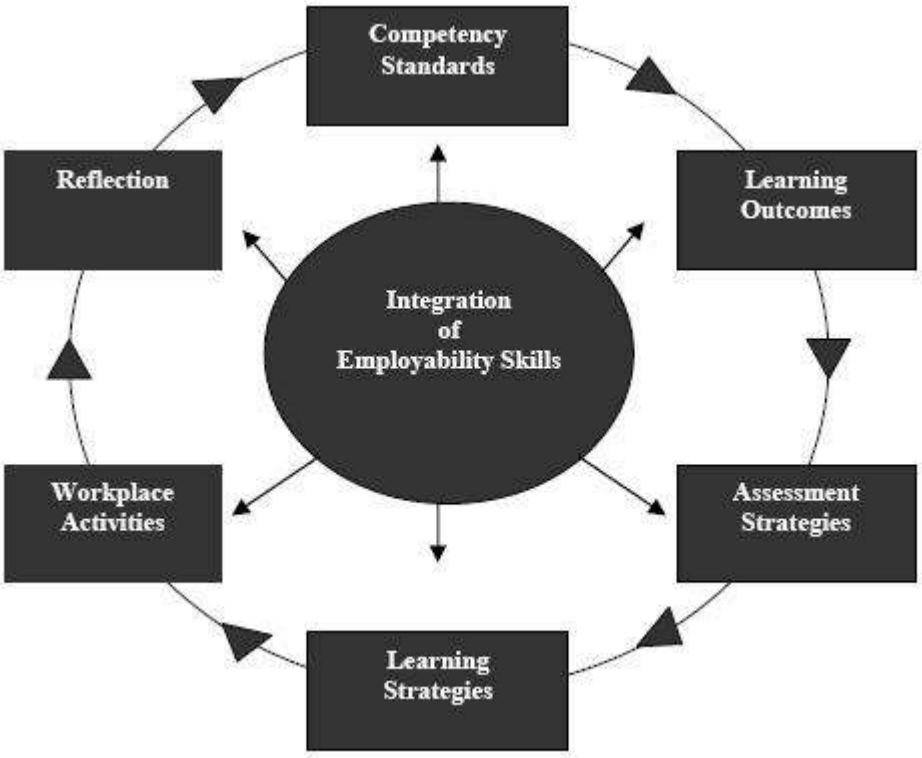
Assessments must meet the criteria set out in the 2010 Essential Standards for Initial and Continuing Registration. For information, the mandatory assessment requirements from Standard 1 from the AQTF 2010 Essential Standards for Initial and Continuing Registration are as follows:

1.5		Assessment, including Recognition of Prior Learning:
	a)	meets the requirements of the relevant Training Package or accredited course,
	b)	is conducted in accordance with the principles of assessment and the rules of evidence, and
	c)	meets workplace and, where relevant, regulatory requirements.
	d)	is systematically validated.

Assessment of Employability Skills

Employability Skills are integral to workplace competency. As such they must be considered in the design, customisation, delivery and assessment of vocational education and training programs in an integrated and holistic way, as represented diagrammatically below.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation



Employability Skills are embedded and explicit within each unit of competency, and an Employability Skills Summary is available for each qualification. Training providers must use Employability Skills information in order to design valid and reliable training and assessment strategies. This analysis could include:

- reviewing units of competency to locate relevant Employability Skills and determine how they are applied within the unit
- analysing the Employability Skills Summary for the qualification in which the unit or units are packaged to help clarify relevant industry and workplace contexts and the application of Employability Skills at that qualification outcome

- designing training and assessment to address Employability Skills requirements.

Employability Skills in the Business Services Training Package context

BSB07 Business Services Training Package seeks to ensure that industry-endorsed employability skills are explicitly embedded in units of competency. The application of each skill and the level of detail included in each part of the unit will vary according to industry requirements and the nature of the unit of competency.

Employability skills are both explicit and embedded within units of competency. This means that employability skills are:

- embedded in units of competency as part of the other performance requirements that make up the competency as a whole

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

- explicitly described within units of competency to enable Training Package users to identify accurately the performance requirements of each unit with regard to employability skills.

The National Quality Council has endorsed a model for assessing and reporting Employability Skills, which contains further suggestions about good practice strategies in teaching, assessing, learning and reporting Employability Skills. The model is available from < http://www.training.com.au/>.

The endorsed approach includes learners downloading qualification specific Employability Skills Summaries for Training Package qualifications from an online repository at < http://employabilityskills.training.com.au>

For more information on Employability Skills in Innovation and Business Industry Skills Council Training Packages go to the Innovation and Business Industry Skills Council website at http://www.ibsa.org.au.

Employability Skills are reported on each qualification using the following statement on the qualification testamur: "A summary of the Employability Skills developed through this qualification can be downloaded from http://employabilityskills.training.com.au "

Access and Equity

An individual"s access to the assessment process should not be adversely affected by restrictions placed on the location or context of assessment beyond the requirements specified in this Training Package: training and assessment must be bias-free.

Under the rules for their development, Training Packages must reflect and cater for the increasing diversity of Australia"s VET clients and Australia"s current and future workforce. The flexibilities offered by Training Packages should enhance opportunities and potential outcomes for all people so that we can all benefit from a wider national skills base and a shared contribution to Australia"s economic development and social and cultural life.

Reasonable adjustments

It is important that education providers take meaningful, transparent and reasonable steps to consult, consider and implement reasonable adjustments for students with disability.

Under the Disability Standards for Education 2005, education providers must make reasonable adjustments for people with disability to the maximum extent that those adjustments do not cause that provider unjustifiable hardship. While "reasonable adjustment" and "unjustifiable hardship" are different concepts and involve different considerations, they both seek to strike a balance between the interests of education providers and the interests of students with and without disability.

An adjustment is any measure or action that a student requires because of their disability, and which has the effect of assisting the student to access and participate in education and training on the same basis as students without a disability. An adjustment is reasonable if it achieves this purpose while taking into account factors such as the nature of the student"s disability, the views of the student, the potential effect of the adjustment on the student and others who might be affected, and the costs and benefits of making the adjustment.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

An education provider is also entitled to maintain the academic integrity of a course or program and to consider the requirements or components that are inherent or essential to its nature when assessing whether an adjustment is reasonable. There may be more than one adjustment that is reasonable in a given set of circumstances; education providers are required to make adjustments that are reasonable and that do not cause them unjustifiable hardship.

The Training Package Guidelines provides more information on reasonable adjustment, including examples of adjustments. Go to http://www.deewr.gov.au/tpdh/Pages/home.aspx.

Appendices

Appendix A: Training and Assessment for People with Specific Needs

Disability Standards for Education were formed under the Disability Discrimination Act 1992 and were introduced in August 2005; they clarify the obligations of education and training providers to ensure that students who have a disability are able to access and participate in education without experiencing discrimination.

DEST provides further information in the Disability Standards for Education 2005 Guidance Notes, accessible via the DEST website (www.dest.gov.au/NR/rdonlyres/11D73DAB-5477 -42F2-AB39-BE2F5BD9BC04/15407/DisabilityStandards_GuidanceNotes_004_screen.pdf).

Good vocational education and training and assessment is often about making adjustments to what we do to meet the learning support needs of individuals. The information provided in this section is aimed at assisting teachers/trainers to meet the reasonable adjustment needs of people who have a disability.

According to the Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS), 2003, Survey of Disability, Ageing and Carers (SDAC) in the section on education and employment:

'In 2003, one in four people (24%) aged 15–64 years with a profound or severe core-activity limitation, who were living in households, had completed Year 12. This compares to half (49%) of those without a disability. People with a profound or severe core-activity limitation were less likely to have completed a diploma or higher qualification (14%) than those without a disability (28%).'

Employment-related findings, for people aged 15–64 years living in households, from the ABS 2003 SDAC include:

- those with a profound level of core-activity limitation had a much lower labour force participation rate (15%) than people without a disability (81%)
- people with a disability who were employed were more likely to work part-time (37%) than those who were employed and did not have a disability (29%)
- people employed in agriculture, forestry and fishing (16%) had a relatively high disability rate

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

compared to the overall rate for those employed (11%).'

Clearly there is much work still to be done to ensure people who have a disability are able to participate in vocational education and training and employment as fully as possible.

What is a disability?

A disability presents some impairment to everyday activity. Some people with a disability do not have any impairments resulting from their disability. For example, a person who has a hearing impairment which is compensated for by a hearing aid may function without any adjustments. While some people with a disability may have an impairment because of the environment, not the disability itself. For example, hearing loss can be accentuated in a room with loud, competing noise and poor acoustics.

A disability may affect or relate to a range of human functions including mobility, stamina, lifting ability, memory, vision, hearing, speech, comprehension and mood swings. This may be due to accidents, illness or birth.

According to the ABS 2003 SDAC:

'one in five people in Australia (3,958,300 or 20.0%) had a reported disability. This rate was much the same for males (19.8%) and females (20.1%). Disability was defined as any limitation, restriction or impairment, which has lasted, or is likely to last, for at least six months and restricts everyday activities. Examples range from hearing loss which requires the use of a hearing aid, to difficulty dressing due to arthritis, to advanced dementia requiring constant help and supervision.'

The ABS 2003 SDAC information also tells us that:

'15.2% (600 300) of people with a disability reported that the cause of their main health condition was accident or injury, 14% (557 300) that it was disease, illness or heredity, and 11% (423,500) that it was "working conditions, work or over-work".'

Health conditions can also be acquired through sporting accidents, repetitive or over-use (through regular or sporting activities), or the daily activities of life.

There are many resources available that provide information on how to adjust training and assessment for someone who has a disability; some of these are listed below.

Adjustments in training and assessment

An open mind, common sense and tailoring to individual circumstances will, as often as not, ensure individuals achieve the standards employers and training providers expect. Reasonable adjustments need only be that – reasonable. It is about identifying what adjustments might reasonably be made and how they may be put into place.

Training and assessment can be made more appropriate and fair for a person who has a disability through attitude, preparation and application.

Attitude

The attitude of others is often the greatest barrier for people who have a disability. While most people who have a disability will only ever require minor adjustments to ensure learning is positive, some will require additional support. There are many support agencies who can provide advice, however teachers/trainers may need to take additional time to ensure their teaching/training meets the learning support needs of the individual concerned.

Positive language creates an atmosphere of mutual respect, which is essential to learning. For example, using language that identifies learners as people rather than language that identifies them by one of their characteristics conveys that the person is more important than the characteristic, such as the difference between a ‘person who has an intellectual disability’ and an ‘intellectually disabled person’. A person who has an intellectual disability could also be identified by a range of equally important characteristics – height, age, sporting interests. However, the term ‘intellectually disabled person’ refers to the disability as the major, and often only, defining characteristic.

Preparation

It is important to identify any functional issues arising from the nature and extent of a person’s disability. This can usually be done by discussing such issues with the individual. In most cases, this consultation will identify reasonable adjustment needs which can be put into place. There are many simple things that teachers/trainers can do to make reasonable adjustments to enable individuals who have a disability to succeed in training and assessment. In some cases, professional support may be required.

Application

Once reasonable adjustments have been implemented it is important to monitor and evaluate what has been done to ensure the best environment for continuous learning because:

- adjustments may only need to be temporary – i.e. mechanisms may only need to be in place during an induction period or due to a temporary disability, in which case evaluation will ensure appropriateness without the need for ongoing monitoring
- adjustments may need reinforcing – when adjustments need to be ongoing, monitoring may reinforce patterns of behaviour in order for them to become ‘natural’
- adjustments may made need improving – where adjustments are ongoing or substantial, a commitment to continuous improvement is recommended through monitoring.

In most cases an informal discussion with the person concerned may be all that is necessary. However, should adjustments be substantial, or a learner not be acquiring competence at a reasonable rate, a more formal process may be required. This may include:

- performance indicators – training providers, learners and employers should have agreed indicators of performance which can be measured and monitored
- independent support – a third party independent of the training and/or assessment environment may need to be involved
- experimentation – if existing adjustments are not proving satisfactory, creative solutions may be needed
- continuing review – formal monitoring is encouraged if adjustments are changed or if substantial adjustments are necessary.

For further information on training and assessment for people with specific needs, the DEST website has information about the Disability Coordination Officer Programme, which 'provides information, co-ordination and referral services for people with a disability interested in or enrolled in post-school education and training' (www.dest.gov.au).

Reasonable adjustment

Below are some of the practical things that can be done as part of providing reasonable adjustment to learners with specific support needs to enable them to undertake training and assessment. Clearly, each case will be different and will need to be discussed with the person and in some cases expert help will be needed, at least in the initial stages.

Type of Disability	Reasonable Adjustment
Acquired brain injury	Memory aids (posters, notes etc.) Reflective listening skills Stress minimisation Time and patience
Hearing impairment	Audio loops for people using hearing aids Plain English documents Fire and alarm systems with flashing lights Sign language interpreters Telephone typewriters
Intellectual disability	Additional time Assessment which is appropriate to the skill (i.e. avoiding written assessment for practical tasks) Mentors Plain English documents

	Practical learning sessions Repetition of learning exercises
Mobility impairment	Access to aids such as for holding documents Adjustable tables Lifting limits Note taking support Oral rather than written presentations Personal computer Wheelchair access
Psychiatric disability	Identification and avoidance of stresses Ongoing rather than formal assessments Reflective listening skills ‘Time-out’ breaks in assessment
Speech impairment	Information summaries Stress minimisation Time and patience Written rather than verbal opportunities
Vision impairment	Additional writing time for assignments/tests Audio tapes Braille translations Enlarged computer screen images Enlarged text and images Good lighting or reading lamps Guide dog provision Informing the person before moving furniture Voice synthesisers on computers

Appendix B: Assessment for Indigenous Organisations

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people have expressed concern about the importance of developing assessment processes along appropriate lines.

There are four main areas of concern:

- diversity
- cultural appropriateness
- community control
- accreditation.

Diversity

The term diversity is used to emphasise the wide range of opinion, aspirations, community circumstances, cultural practices, geographic locations, and social, economic and political conditions that exist throughout Australia and the need to guard against assumptions that all communities are the same.

One approach is to distinguish between remote, rural and urban settings. These settings suggest differences that may be relevant to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander organisations, including:

- culture
- language
- history
- social make up
- geography
- social and economic infrastructure
- economy
- political structure.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

These factors suggest that training and assessment, in order to be relevant to the needs of any particular Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander organisation, should address each situation as unique.

Cultural appropriateness

The term culture is used in a broad sense, it refers to:

- values, social beliefs and customs e.g. Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander law, land and family and kinship systems
- protocols of behaviour and interaction e.g. cultural authority, gender, kinship
- ways of thinking e.g. learning styles
- language, both traditional and Aboriginal English
- lifestyles
- local history
- location e.g. region and place.

A particularly important aspect of cultural appropriateness is that of learning styles. There is evidence that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people, both traditional and contemporary, approach learning differently from the Western intellectual tradition, which is relevant to effective training and assessment.

It is understood that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people may:

- learn better in groups than individually
- learn better in the surroundings of their community than in an institutional environment
- prefer oral communications to written forms
- learn on the basis of trial and error in the presence of an experienced person in preference to concept building approaches
- have a highly developed sense of spatial relations by which they learn; hence stories, maps and pictures would be preferable to oral explanations.

To be effective, it is necessary that training and assessment recognises, adopts and practises appropriate delivery and assessment approaches.

Non-Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander trainers and assessors need information on aspects of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander culture. They need to work closely with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people to adopt practices that reflect Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander approaches. The community should be asked to identify experts to provide information and to assist with assessment of relevant protocols, for example, where required.

There are a number of ways a Registered Training Organisation (RTO) can establish and maintain culturally appropriate training and assessment practices, including:

- ensuring a high proportion of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander participation in all aspects of planning, development, delivery and evaluation
- establishing and maintaining a collaborative relationship with local Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities
- as a mainstream (non-Indigenous) RTO, establishing auspice relationships with Aboriginal and

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Torres Strait Islander organisations and individuals, including direct and indirect involvement of persons identified as appropriate by the local community

- ensuring ongoing training of non-Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander staff at all levels of the RTO, delivered by Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander personnel.

Community control

The term community control is synonymous with self-determination, self-management, etc. and underpins most community aspirations. It is of fundamental concern to people who see themselves as having been dispossessed by colonisation.

The essence of control is control of decision-making. In order to be able to do this, people need all relevant information, relevant competencies and recognition of their own structures and processes.

Among other things, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people seek control over their training. It is necessary, therefore, that they participate in all stages of planning, development, delivery and evaluation, in meaningful ways. One way is for communities to have control of the contract for training initiatives.

It is important that training providers and assessors respect and conform to the practice of community control which underpins this field within the BSB07 Business Services Training Package.

Accreditation

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people have said for a long time that their involvement in training has not been formally recognised and that many of the skills they utilise in managing their organisations and delivering services to their communities have not been valued.

The first issue may have arisen because much of the training that has been delivered to communities has been customised to particular situations, has not been assessed on an individual basis if at all, and has been delivered by unregistered personnel.

Secondly, until this time, recognition of current competence (RCC) has been under-utilised.

Individuals may demonstrate competence in complete units of competency through formal training, informal training or the recognition of current competence/skills, resulting in qualifications/Statements of Attainment being awarded as appropriate.

In the community group setting, an important feature of likely relevance for assessment is that participants may vary with respect to previous education and training experience, and possess diverse skills in literacy and/or numeracy.

However, diverse numeracy and literacy skills are not a barrier to sophisticated thought, and care must be taken not to employ assessment strategies that rely on numeracy and literacy skills where they are not intrinsically required by the unit of competency being assessed.

A flexible approach to assessment will be required by RTOs in order to meet the requirements of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander organisations and individuals under this domain within the BSB07 Business Services Training Package.

Assessment in Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Communities

The guiding principles that underpin assessment include:

- assessment should be transparent i.e. clearly seen and understood by the candidate and others
- assessment should empower the candidate on the basis of consent, self-assessment and

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

responsibility for the process
- any Board members or prospective Board members should have opportunities to demonstrate their competence/skills
- Board activities may be used as the context for assessment where possible (known as on-the-job assessment or workplace assessment); there may also be opportunities to include evidence from other relevant situations
- assessment should involve designated community experts working in collaboration with RTO assessors in order to provide appropriate recognition of cultural and community knowledge and skills
- assessments must provide constructive feedback to candidates and support for further competency development
- assessments must provide a Statement of Attainment or qualification listing the units of competency achieved
- records of candidate achievement maintained by the RTO must record the Statement of Attainment listing the units of competency achieved or qualifications achieved as required by the AQTF 2007
- a record of demonstrated competencies will assist in role clarification and performance appraisals in the workplace.

Given the importance of the assessment to the candidate and the Board, the assessor must make every effort to ensure that assessment is conducted with the highest level of professionalism and integrity.

Units of competency with a cultural content, including the following of local protocols, will require knowledge of these cultural matters by the assessor. As these matters are often governed by local rules of access to such knowledge, only those people with the knowledge can genuinely assess these aspects of the competency or provide guidance on their assessment.

Discussion must take place with the community and agreement reached on how these matters are assessed. For non-Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander RTOs, this will usually mean the use of auspice arrangements with appropriate people or knowledge experts, identified by the community.

It should also be noted that for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people being assessed, these aspects of competency will almost invariably have been attained through life experience. This must also be taken into account in the assessment procedures relating to cultural matters.

Assessors may exercise limited discretion in response to organisational or individual requirements, but any changes must not alter the meaning of the unit of competency or the elements of competency.

Candidates must be informed of the right to access grievance procedures.

Appendix C: VET in Schools

What is VET in Schools?

VET in Schools provides for nationally recognised vocational education and training (VET) based on industry standards undertaken as part of a senior secondary certificate.

Successful completion of a VET in Schools program enables a student to gain a nationally recognised AQF qualification, usually at the same time as the school-based qualification.

How are VET in Schools programs structured?

VET in Schools programs are packaged and delivered in a variety of ways across Australia. There are three main types of delivery arrangements for VET in Schools programs:

- schools can be a Registered Training Organisation (RTO) in their own right
- school sectoral bodies (such as Boards of Studies or regional offices) can hold RTO status on behalf of a group of schools
- schools can work together in a partnership with an RTO.

States and territories across Australia package VET in Schools programs differently, according to their senior secondary certificate requirements. Generally schools may offer VET in Schools programs as:

- stand-alone
- embedded
- combination of stand-alone and embedded
- school-based New Apprenticeship.

Stand-alone refers to the delivery of a VET course or qualification outside of a school subject framework.

Embedding refers to an arrangement whereby VET units of competency are delivered within a general education course, producing both vocational and general education outcomes. This aims to minimise the assessment workload of students by avoiding unnecessary duplication. In some states and territories, embedding is necessary to provide recognition of VET within the senior secondary certificate. In others, stand-alone VET components contribute towards the senior secondary certificate.

Given the considerable variation in the manner in which qualifications and units of competency are used across Australia, the relevant authority in each state and territory will provide advice and guidance as to the specific VET in Schools programs that can be undertaken.

Appropriate Qualifications for VET in Schools

IBSA acknowledges links between schools, businesses and the community, and strongly supports young people combining schooling with VET and workplace learning.

It is essential that all VET qualifications gained through a VET in Schools program are consistent with the outcomes detailed in the Training Package.

The AQTF 2007 Standards for Registered Training Organisations set out minimum competency standards for staff responsible for the delivery of training and the conducting of assessments; and they ensure that VET specialists have skills and competencies consistent with Training Package requirements. All schools using their own teachers for VET delivery must also be aware of the AQTF 2007 requirement for assessors to hold relevant vocational competencies, at least equal to that being delivered and assessed, in addition to teaching and assessment competence.

Schools that are RTOs generally deliver Certificate I and II qualifications. Some schools, in most states and territories, may also offer part or all of Certificate III and IV qualifications. However, the delivery of these higher qualifications often requires a partnership arrangement and presents some significant challenges as detailed below.

Schools are encouraged to establish partnerships with industry and effective work placement arrangements to maximise the quality of outcomes for students and industry alike. Recognition of competence gained through voluntary, part-time or vacation work not directly related to the industry focus of the qualification should also be considered.

Certificates I and II

Certificate I and Certificate II qualifications are the most suitable for use in VET in Schools programs. These qualifications are often preparatory in nature or include skills that can be readily trained and assessed in a school setting. For example, many of the units in Certificate I and II, Information Technology or Business qualifications describe skills that are considered foundation skills for any employment situation. However, even at this level, schools must ensure adequate attention is paid to the effective assessment of competencies dealing with work environment or Employability Skills.

Certificate III

The AQF descriptor for Certificate III qualifications includes performance expectations such as skills transference to new environments and the prospect of potential responsibility for others. A Certificate III qualification is premised on the understanding that it provides a vocational outcome in its own right and stretches beyond ‘preparation for work’. It may even reflect a trade outcome. Some Certificate III qualifications, or the units of competency packaged to make up the qualification.

For these reasons, effective learning and assessment in a completely institutional environment is extremely difficult to achieve. While some ‘technical’ skills may be effectively learnt and assessed in an appropriately structured, simulated environment, work environment-related competencies pose significant challenges. In these cases, Statements of Attainment for individual units are usually more appropriate than the award of full qualifications.

Certificate IV

At this AQF level, individuals need to demonstrate competence characterised by a degree of unpredictability, varying contexts, critical appraisal and management of diverse and perhaps questionable information and the assumption of responsibility for the quality and quantity of one's own work and often the work of others. Some Training Packages consider their Certificate IV graduates to be 'associate professionals and supervisors'.

It is highly unlikely that a full Certificate IV qualification could be achieved in a school environment, other than through a schools-based New Apprenticeship.

Work Placement

Work placement usually involves students spending an extended period of time in a workplace gaining experience and skills, and undergoing an assessment process related to the attainment of a qualification in a specific occupational field.

An essential feature of school–industry programs is that they involve students spending some time learning in a workplace. In recent years an increasing number of effective structured workplace learning programs have made significant progress towards greater workplace integrity for those industry training programs that are delivered predominantly off-the-job. The implementation of Training Packages means that structured workplace learning must be a consideration for all RTOs, not only schools, in the delivery of training programs.

Principles for quality workplace learning

The Ministerial Council on Employment, Education, Training and Youth Affairs (MCEETYA) endorsed the Principles for Quality Workplace Learning for school students engaged in VET programs throughout Australia. All states and territories apply the principles to their work placement programs although the nature and extent of work placement programs varies across states and territories.

The broad MCEETYA principles are documented below.

Quality workplace learning is integrated into a program

- It operates within a framework which provides the opportunity for all students to access it, though not all students may choose to do so; and
- It operates within the context of vocational courses, which are recognised by industry, are responsive to industry needs and forms part of a student's exit credential.

Quality workplace learning is structured

- It has a clearly articulated and documented purpose;
- There are clearly identified and documented learning outcomes for students within accredited programs, which are linked to post-school qualifications;
- They are of sufficient duration and depth to enable students to acquire a reasonable understanding of the enterprise/industry to demonstrate competence according to industry standards of at least level 1 of the AQF;
- There is a matching between the students' skills and interests and the work placements; and
- Students, teachers and employers are thoroughly prepared beforehand so that the expectations and outcomes of the work placement are clearly understood by all parties.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Quality workplace learning is monitored

- The learning is coordinated by personnel with appropriate expertise and adequate resources; and
- Support should be made available to students and employers throughout the course of the work placement.

Quality workplace learning is regulated

There are clearly stated procedures designed to ensure that:

- Students are protected from moral and physical danger;
- Students work in a non-discriminatory and harassment free environment;
- Students receive appropriate training and instruction in occupational health and safety; and
- Students are not exploited by being continuously engaged in a production or service capacity or used to substitute for the employment of employees and payment of appropriate wages.
- The students are required to understand the roles and responsibilities of employees in the workplace and are expected to follow the directions of the workplace supervisors and the other employees.

Quality workplace learning is assessed

- The assessment, according to industry standards, is of students' competencies achieved in the workplace which contributes to the overall assessment of the program; and
- There are mechanisms for the recording and reporting of students' competencies.

There is a strong correlation between these MCEETYA quality principles and the OECD characteristics of high quality learning programs detailed below.

The major 14-country study entitled From Initial Education to Working Life: Making Transitions Work by the OECD identified 10 characteristics of high quality workplace learning programs. These are:

Work placements that are long enough for real learning to take place.

Systematic analysis of the training capacity of the workplace, to see what it can realistically supply.

A formal training plan, setting out what has to be taught and learned, and clarifying the work-based and school-based parts of a student's program.

Employer involvement in student selection for work placements.

The presence of a trained program coordinator, able to liaise between the school and the firm and troubleshoot when problems occur.

The use of qualified, highly competent workers as workplace trainers or mentors.

Regular face-to-face contact between the coordinators and employers and in-firm supervisors.

Monitoring of the students on the job by the program coordinator.

The evaluation of student performance against the training plan at the end of the placement, with the evaluation carried out by the job supervisor and coordinator jointly.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Deliberate efforts by schools to relate what has been learned at work to students' school-based learning. (Source: OECD, 2000, From Initial Education to Working Life: Making Transitions Work. Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development, Paris.)

Effective work placement is characterised by:

- activities that complement off-the-job learning programs
- clearly articulated and documented purpose
- development of appropriate attitudes towards work
- development of competence in designated industry skills and Employability Skills
- facility for on-the-job practice of skills acquired in a classroom
- flexibility
- learning in a range of behaviours appropriate to the relevant industry
- opportunities for work-based assessment
- regular and frequent use of current technology and equipment
- relevance to the VET qualification being undertaken
- recognition of student readiness
- support of industry partners.

Beyond the above, a number of other provisions are necessary for a successful work placement program. The credibility of work placements and any resultant recognition of competence requires a degree of 'seriousness' if the outcomes are to be valued by individuals and industry clients of the VET system.

It is suggested that stakeholders involved in the planning and management of work placements carefully consider and implement the following general principles:

That the RTO assume responsibility for finding placements and validating the arrangements.

That the workplace has the appropriate resources, tools and staff to conduct the placement with compliance to any legislative requirements.

That there be regular validation by the RTO that the student and assessor, where relevant, are operating according to RTO AQTF 2007 standards.

That a student on work placement must be covered by injury insurance.

That there is a formal contract setting out each party's responsibilities and obligations.

That, where possible, the workplace has on site a qualified workplace trainer and assessor in 'direct line' control of the student (to avoid training and assessment by 'proxy').

That if the placement is for assessment only then there must be clearly documented assessment tasks specifically related to the unit being assessed and evidence retained to support achievement of competence (for both best practice recording purposes and audit/appeal).

That if the placement also includes training then any 'academic pass' cannot be bestowed prior to the placement as clearly all of the learning components have not been undertaken nor can they be assessed in advance if they have not been learned.

That the training be directly related to achievement of competence while recognising the likely acquisition of other skills and knowledge.

That where assessment occurs it be clearly related to a unit of competency relevant to the work placement.

That where more than one performance criteria (possibly over more than one unit) is being assessed there must be a clearly linked and documented relationship between the assessment and the PC.

That the qualifications level be appropriate in context i.e. if it is advanced programming OO there must be an advanced OO programming task observed and assessed

That the actual variables of the PC be documented for audit purposes and for verification of appropriateness of the range in the work placement.

In some state and territory school systems, part-time student work in an appropriate workplace may be used to fulfil work placement requirements and virtual/simulated work placements may also be legitimate.

Appendix D: Assessment in a simulated environment

Units of Competency in the Business Services Training Package may be assessed in the workplace or in a simulated environment.

Assessment within a simulated environment may be required because:

- suitable employment and/or work experience is not always available
- some workplaces or work situations do not use or allow the application of the competency required
- conducting assessment within the workplace may be unacceptably disruptive to work requirements of the business
- it is sometimes appropriate to practice skills in live settings prior to the acquisition of competency, particularly in potentially dangerous situations or where valuable equipment may be at risk.

Given that simulation may be used and is often indicated as an option for assessment within the Business Services Training Package the following advice is provided:

In order to be valid and reliable, the simulation must closely represent what actually occurs in the workplace, and should seek to replicate an actual work setting. It is critical that the designer of the simulation is thoroughly familiar with the application of the competency and is experienced in current and relevant workplace practices. In deciding whether a simulation or an assessment environment has been adequately designed, the following questions should be asked:

Are there opportunities to:

- test the full range of equipment?

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

- use up to date equipment and software?
- reflect time pressures and deadlines?
- show the complexity of dealing with multiple tasks?
- involve prioritising among competing tasks?
- deal with customers, including difficult ones?
- work with others in a team?
- communicate with diverse groups?
- find, discuss and test solutions to problems?
- explore health and safety issues?
- answer practically oriented, applied knowledge questions?
- show the level of written and verbal expression sufficient for, but not exceeding, the work requirements?

Appendix E: New Approaches to Units and Qualifications in IBSA Training Packages

The IBSA Perspective

IBSA industries directly employ 20% of the Australian workforce and contribute over one third of Australia's Gross Domestic Product.

Specialists from within IBSA sectors are employed everywhere – human resource managers, accountants, IT specialists, administrative personnel, trainers and assessors are employed in all industries. Blended occupations combine business and management skills with other industry specialisations. Individuals working in the IBSA cultural industry fuel our creative economy.

Sole traders	Continual creation of new industries	Technological convergence	Existing workers needing higher level skills	Global contexts
Diverse workers	Rapid change	Compliance	Outsourcing	Remote working
Blended occupations	Individual responsibility for developing and maintaining skills	Continually shifting business partnerships and alliances	Virtual enterprises	Knowledge workers
Mature workers have different skilling and recognition needs	Needs of entry level workers for full qualification

These are the emerging features and trends within IBSA industries; what holds true for IBSA

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

within its own industries is also true beyond its industry portfolio.

A detailed set of design principles has been created to facilitate a more cohesive development approach across IBSA's different sectors.

These are divided as follows:

- conceptual clarity
- rationalisation and what it really means
- qualification design
- skill set design
- unit design.

Conceptual Clarity

Issue	Guiding Principles
Nature of competence – fit between performance and outcomes as opposed to skills and knowledge	• content will be developed on the understanding that competence (and therefore units of competency) comprises a specification of knowledge and skill and the application of that knowledge and skill to the standard of performance required in the workplace • IBSA Training Packages acknowledge the importance of essential and pre-vocational skills and may therefore incorporate units that have no direct workplace outcome e.g. creative thinking units, financial literacy units • each component of a unit of competency will be considered as an integral part of the unit and of equal importance • each unit will be developed and checked to ensure it reflects the four components of competency: task skills, task management skills, contingency management skills, job/role environment skills
Nature of competence – transferability and context	• IBSA will pro-actively engage with the system to explore issues around transferable skills and transfer of learning, and how this might be encouraged and fostered in different industry sectors and delivery contexts • units will begin to articulate expectations in relation to transferability under the unit section 'Application of this unit'
Recognition	• content development will acknowledge the importance of respecting an individual's right to recognition with a separate unit of competency where the combination of skills, knowledge, performance and outcomes can be considered unique with no realistic expectation of skills transfer to different contexts • content development will acknowledge the need to provide separate recognition of performance, skills and knowledge which hold a unique place in a given industry context due to factors such as: licensing or other regulation, accreditation, professional organisation membership, cultural considerations

Rationalisation

Rationalisation and the reduction of unnecessary duplication is a national priority, though there is currently no agreed national definition of rationalisation. To provide clarity around this issue, IBSA has defined rationalisation as the re-structuring and streamlining of existing Training Package content to:

- reduce duplication within and between training products
- provide a cohesive and flexible set of national training products to meet the skill development needs of industry, the community and individuals.

Issue	Guiding Principles
Rationalisation purpose	• rationalisation initiatives will be based on clear evidence of benefits for users • benefits of rationalisation will be articulated and documented in the context of specific review and development work
Overall rationalisation approach	• primary focus of IBSA's rationalisation initiatives will be to identify commonalities across sectors, achieve better integration and reduce unnecessary duplication so that the new framework better reflects the changing nature of work

Rationalisation priorities	• focus of IBSA's short-term rationalisation efforts will be in key areas:
	  • existing units and qualifications
	  • units and qualifications which are the most widely used (based on NCVER and other data)
	  • Training Packages due for review
	  • new development
	  • units and qualifications that have the most potential for wide use to meet emerging needs (e.g. innovation, creativity, design)

Rationalisation across contexts	• focus of IBSA rationalisation across workplace contexts will be placed on units and qualifications where the following criteria apply:
	  • units, skill sets and qualifications covering priority skills areas where convergence is occurring and there is evidence-based demand for better integration (e.g. digital content)
	  • established or emerging pattern of career path movement across contexts

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

	• use of broadly similar technologies in the application of skills • use of underpinning literacies which are broadly similar in nature, scope and level of importance to a given task • well-argued case around transferability of skills and knowledge between contexts • reasonable expectation of system in terms of capacity to deliver on transferable skills
Rationalisation across qualification levels	• starting point for review/development of units will be the identification of different skills, knowledge and outcomes with no assumption of a unit to fit every AQF level • development of units for packaging at different qualification levels will therefore depend on the identification of different skills, knowledge and outcomes • differentiation between units packaged at different qualification levels in the same skill area and the relationship between such units, will be clearly articulated in all unit components • individual units of competency have different degrees in terms of scope and complexity; IBSA development supports the position that it is qualifications which have AQF levels and not individual units of competency • qualification packaging rules will allow some units to be packaged across a range of AQF levels to provide appropriate flexibility

Qualification Design

Issue	Guiding Principles
Starting points for developing qualifications	• IBSA will construct brief but meaningful profiles from the Industry Skills Report (ISR) about emerging patterns of work, with these profiles forming the basis for qualification review and development • in the short-term absence of reliable ISR data, the research and analysis phase of unit and qualification review or development will place a much stronger emphasis on emerging industry trends and demand • developers will consider emerging patterns of work and provide clear justification and evidence of need for proposed qualification structures • developers will consider the benefits of developing qualifications based around function rather than specific industry context to better reflect emerging patterns of work • IBSA Training Packages will support and confirm the place of

	qualifications that may reach beyond existing notions of 'occupational outcomes' to reflect broad and varied individual, community and industry needs
Overall approach to qualification structure	• flexibility and options will be a key feature of all qualifications to allow for ongoing change – restrictive 'rules' will be kept to a minimum • packaging of a qualification requires that elective units be selected from an equivalent level qualification unless otherwise stated

Qualification titling and specialisation	• qualifications will be developed around a broad understanding that national policy on qualification titling will become more flexible to allow the nomination of specialisations in brackets after the main qualification title
	• specialisations and requirements to achieve the specialisations, will be nominated within each qualification
	• nominated specialisations will be based on consultation around the following criteria:
	  • evidence-based established and emerging occupational outcomes, within and outside, traditional industry boundaries
	  • relevant links to accreditation or licensing
	  • industry development objectives and skills shortages
	  • process and guidelines for the creation of new specialisations will be nominated as part of the supporting information for qualifications

Embedding qualifications	• IBSA has adopted a flexible approach to qualifications that allows for:
	  • stand-alone qualifications
	  • partial embedded based on clear evidence of need
	  • optional embedding through flexible elective choice based on clear evidence of need
	  • where specific licensing or accreditation requirements apply, those requirements will guide the structure of the qualification
	  • IBSA will add additional flexibility to any fully nested/embedded qualifications

Parity of qualifications	• an overarching principle is that the content of qualifications will be determined by the relevant outcomes and by the way skills and knowledge are developed in different contexts • development of qualifications in various IBSA sectors will be used to inform a set of guidelines around qualification parity to address issues raised by vastly divergent development philosophies

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Licensing	• IBSA will scope areas under its coverage impacted by licensing and determine priorities for action • IBSA will identify and participate in current licensing projects which impact its industry sectors • relevant qualifications will be developed in the context of current and emerging links between licensing and the training system

Issue	Guiding Principles

Skill sets as part of IBSA Training Packages	• skill sets are a design methodology that can be applied to provide more flexible training and skill development options within the national training system and will therefore be considered a priority development area across IBSA sectors
	• NQC has supported the skill set concept (30 June 2006), defined as follows:
	  • Those single units or combinations of units which link to a licence or regulatory requirement, or defined industry need.
	• other skill sets may be identified and an RTO will still be able to identify a relevant combination of units to meet local, enterprise or individual needs.
	• Training Package Development Handbook guides the identification of skill sets
	• IBSA views skill sets as a cluster of one or more units where achievement of competency in the units links to one or more of the following:
	  • industry or community recognition, meeting an identified area of skill need/skill shortage
	  • industry certification/accreditation
	  • regulatory compliance
	  • a licence to operate in a given context
	  • vendor certification
	• all future IBSA development and review projects will include consideration of the need for skill set development and involve consultation with industry, the training system and individuals on priority areas

Composition and naming of skill sets	• each skill set will be named using terminology meaningful to the primary target audience • skill sets may comprise any combination of units which meets the identified need and may include combinations of units which:

- vary in scope and complexity
- originate in different Training Packages

Unit Design

Issue	Guiding Principles
Scope of each unit of competency	• each IBSA unit will represent a discrete function and will not embed the content of other units • IBSA Training Packages support the place of units that may reach beyond existing notions of 'workplace functions' to reflect broad and varied individual, community and industry needs i.e. essential skills • where skills and knowledge are identified in the Required Skills and Knowledge section, clear specification of the scope of skills and knowledge required within that particular unit will be a key focus • each unit will clearly articulate relationships with other units and prerequisites will be kept to an absolute minimum • any referencing to other units will go beyond internal IBSA referencing to allow for broad application across all other relevant industry sectors • clear and explicit differentiation between units in the same skill area at different levels will be a key focus, with this differentiation to be evident within every unit component
Language	• all IBSA units will use plain English • IBSA cross-industry units will use context-neutral terminology to ensure they can be applied across varying contexts • generic parenthood statements will not appear in IBSA units, unless required by national policy decisions beyond the control of IBSA
Specialist versus generalist units	• units covering similar content areas will be developed at the same time and by the same people under a continuous improvement process to facilitate a more cohesive overall unit structure • units will provide clear information about the way different units are applied and by whom • IBSA will consider the development of support materials (e.g. unit maps) to assist users in navigating the range of available units in a given skill area and the most appropriate units for particular purposes
Unit codes	• unit codes will include a number denoting the advised earliest appropriate packaging level for a unit within a qualification – but this does not indicate the unit itself has an AQF level
Knowledge and research	• IBSA confirms and supports the value and importance of knowledge for all individuals in the workplace

	• application of knowledge will remain paramount and this application will be reflected in all units • specific units which focus on applied knowledge to meet licensing, regulatory or other well-defined industry needs will be supported • for units within lower level qualifications approaches will be kept broad to allow for a focus on transferable research skills • existing units packaged at higher level qualification will be reviewed, with a view to better articulation of specialised combinations of knowledge, skill and performance
Learning and development	• IBSA confirms and supports the value and importance of ongoing learning and development for all individuals • all units will explicitly embed learning as reflected in the current IBSA Generic Employability Skills Framework • IBSA Training Package content will also include units dedicated to ongoing learning and development across all levels
Creativity, innovation and design	• all units will explicitly embed innovation and creativity as reflected in the current Employability Skills Framework • all IBSA Training Packages will include a suite of dedicated cross-industry units addressing creativity, innovation and design

Description

Descriptor

This qualification reflects the role of individuals who contribute their skills and knowledge to leading, monitoring and guiding the activities of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander organisations, and who bring a wide range of knowledge, skills, talents and experience to their organisations. They provide leadership and guidance to others and have responsibility for the output of others.

Boards of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander community-managed organisations operate in two worlds; they have cultural obligations to their community as well as legal and financial obligations to the wider community and funding bodies.

In their special role of leading their organisations, board members would ensure that while fulfilling their duties, they are individually and collectively contributing the best value to the board, organisation and community.

Job roles

Possible job roles relevant to this qualification include:

- board chairperson
- board member
- manager or senior staff member in an Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander organisation
- senior public servant working with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander boards of governance.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential:
	• the production of at least three mass print advertisements in accordance with an advertising and creative brief including:
	  • a newspaper advertisement
	  • a magazine advertisement
	  • an outdoor advertisement.

Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to advertising copy to be used in the advertisement • access to an actual workplace or simulated environment • access to office equipment and resources • access to advertising and creative briefs.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios • assessment of written reports/examples of mass print advertisements • demonstration of techniques used to create mass print advertisements • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of principles and purposes of advertising • review of legal and ethical constraints identified.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • BSBWRT501AWrite persuasive copy.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the ability to: • identify possible sources of funding for organisational activities • identify required components of funding submissions • evaluate whether a funding submission meets the funding body's requirements • follow appeal procedures if required.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • participation on an actual or simulated board • access to examples of projects requiring funding • access to the internet or other sources of information about funding bodies • access to examples of relevant documents • knowledge and performance are assessed over time to confirm consistency in performance.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • observation of performance on a board or simulated board • analysis of actual or simulated funding submission • direct questioning combined with reflection of practical board performance by the candidate • analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios • demonstration of techniques • observation of presentations and group discussions • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge • observation of performance in role plays • analysis of feedback from other board members, staff, community or other stakeholders regarding performance.

Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • BSBATSIM511C Develop enterprise opportunities.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Submission requirements may include:	• demonstrable outcomes • development of costs • eligibility criteria • meeting timelines • participation of certain groups, such as women and youth.
Key people may include:	• board or committee members • community members • Elders • management and staff • partner organisations • traditional owners.

BSBCCO501B Develop business continuity strategy

Modification History

Release	Comments
Release 1	This version first released with BSB07 Business Training Package version 6.0 Revised unit. Required skills updated to focus on learning and development practices and compliance with policy and procedures. Replaces BSBCCO501A Develop business continuity strategies

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to develop business continuity plans, processes and tools.

Business continuity is the stage between a crisis occurring and the implementation of a disaster recovery plan. It is aimed at keeping as many of the business critical operations operating as possible during this period.

Competence in this unit requires the development of a business continuity plan that will allow an organisation to continue operating, even if in a diminished capacity or only through business critical functions, until functionality is restored. It also requires analysis, planning, risk assessment and communication.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to business continuity planning in small, medium and large organisations.

This role is undertaken by staff with managerial responsibility.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

BSBCCO602B Manage customer contact information

Modification History

Release	Comments
Release 1	This version first released with BSB07 Business Training Package version 6.0 Replaces BSBCCO602A Manage customer contact information

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to manage customer contact information and the management information systems (MIS) used in a customer contact environment.

Managers design specific implementation programs within these systems, including data collection, measurement types and patterns, and reporting strategies, as well as managing the use of information obtained.

Competence in this unit requires using MIS to produce accurate and relevant information and reporting that support the efficient running of the centre or business unit. It also requires knowledge of the requirements to design, implement and tailor information systems to meet the changing needs of the environment.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to customer contact activity in a small, medium or large organisation.

This work is undertaken by specialist staff or those with managerial responsibility, depending on the size and structure of the centre.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to design and establish new customer contact facilities.

Competence in this unit requires knowledge of the technology required, the human resources, the legislative and regulatory requirements – including occupational health and safety (OHS) requirements, organisational standards and guidelines, and global best practice in design and features of customer contact facilities.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to the design and establishment of new customer contact facilities, including both new centres and substantial enhancement of existing centres.

In the first instance this unit will typically apply to a new contact centre. However, it may also include a substantial upgrade in technology and physical resources to an existing contact centre or the introduction of a significant increase in capacity of an existing contact centre.

This work is undertaken by staff with managerial responsibility, but it may also be undertaken by specialist staff (e.g. operations manager, project manager), depending on the size and structure of the organisation.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Element	Performance Criteria
Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

1. Identify design elements	1.1 Analyse role and business needs of proposed customer contact facility 1.2 Define general characteristics of customer contact facility 1.3 Identify design elements to meet business needs 1.4 Confirm analysis with stakeholders
2. Develop detailed specifications	2.1 Review facility design principles to confirm appropriateness of design 2.2 Delegate facility design elements to appropriately experienced specialist/s for detailed specification 2.3 Benchmark facility design against world-class standards to demonstrate appropriateness of specifications 2.4 Confirm design specifications with stakeholders
3. Evaluate resources	3.1 Identify budgetary limits for facility 3.2 Identify suitable resources available from organisation’s preferred suppliers 3.3 Identify suitable alternative resources and suppliers for each design aspect 3.4 Conduct comparative analysis of each alternative

	3.5 Recommend resources for each design aspect
4. Integrate design components	4.1 Prepare viable project management plan for the integration of new facility resources 4.2 Use project management tools throughout the integration process 4.3 Prepare contingency plans to meet all reasonable costs 4.4 Develop effective testing procedures and plans for all resources 4.5 Maintain vigilance over budget, quality of supplied resources, and quality of work 4.6 Communicate progress and concerns arising to senior management in a timely way
5. Launch customer contact facility	5.1 Prepare viable project management plan for the launch of the new customer contact facility 5.2 Use project management tools throughout launch process 5.3 Communicate launch parameters to relevant stakeholders 5.4 Establish pre-launch operational test procedures and launch plans 5.5 Supervise launch to completion according to plans and contingencies 5.6 Review launch and debrief stakeholders to plan follow-up actions

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- analytical skills to analyse relevant workplace information and data, and make recommendations accordingly
- communication skills to:
  - conduct formal and informal meetings
  - communicate with clients and personnel at all levels
- consultation and negotiation skills to develop, implement and monitor plans
- literacy skills to prepare reports containing complex ideas and concepts
- numeracy skills to:
  - carry out analysis of statistics and data

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

    - manage budgetary resources
- planning and organising skills to manage own tasks within required timeframes
- presentation skills to:
    - articulate information, expectations and ideas clearly
    - research and present on complex issues, such as regulatory and legislative requirements
- project management skills to manage the complexities and scope of a large project
- risk assessment and management skills to understand the impacts and risks associated with the project
- self-management skills to:
    - comply with policies and procedures
    - seek learning and development opportunities
    - technology skills to manage data and information.

Required knowledge

- benchmarking methodology
- change management principles
- legislative, regulatory and organisational requirements for customer contact facilities
- principles of testing procedures and plans
- principles underpinning contact centre design at both the technology level and the human level, such as:
    - emerging technologies
    - ergonomics of office design
    - hardware and telecommunications services
    - software systems
- project management principles
- research methods using a range of information sources
- risk management principles
- sources of information, guidance and support for the project
- systems and physical resources used effectively in customer contact environments.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for	Evidence of the ability to:

assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	• design, project manage, implement and launch a new or significantly re-engineered customer contact facility • demonstrate knowledge of legislative, regulatory and organisational requirements that cover the task.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure access to: • information and databases for analysis activities • relevant legislation, regulations, standards and guidelines • stakeholder and staff satisfaction feedback. It is unlikely that competence could be assessed in a simulated environment. A significant degree of delegation of tasks to specialists may be required.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • review of all aspects of project plan, including achieved timeframes • analysis of stakeholder and staff satisfaction feedback • review of benchmarking activities • review of testing program, plan and results • review of OHS, regulatory and legislative compliance • review of budget–actuals to forecast or business case • review of communication materials used in consultation with various types of stakeholders • review of documentation of design specifications, including explanations of personal inputs.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • BSBCCO601B Optimise customer contact operations • BSBCCO602B Manage customer contact information • BSBCCO608B Manage customer contact operational costs.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Design elements may include:	• customer service strategies • external services, such as telecommunications • human resources • physical resources, including OHS considerations • software • technology, including systems and telephony.
Stakeholders may include:	• finance department • human resources and OHS • information technology department • internal and external customers and vendors • property and facilities department • senior management.
Project management tools may include:	• communication and knowledge management applications • costing applications • quality control applications • risk assessment and management applications • scheduling applications • tracking applications.
Testing procedures and plans may include:	• development of test scenarios • development of work instructions • end-to-end testing of resources • predetermined parameters for determining success or failure of testing • regression testing (‘what if’ scenarios) • remedial plan for unsuccessful test results • schedule of testing in lead-up to opening • stakeholder sign-off • user acceptance testing.
Launch of the new customer contact facility may include:	• adjusting systems to meet contingencies • demonstrating new facilities and systems to stakeholders, including management, clients and staff • initial use of new systems and facilities • transferring from existing systems to new systems.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Follow-up actions may include:	• adjusting the overall design • adjusting the set-up of specific resources • reporting to stakeholders, regardless of the degree of success of the launch.

Release 1	This version first released with BSB07 Business Training Package version 6.0 Revised unit. Required skills updated to focus on learning and development practices and compliance with policy and procedures. Replaces BSBCCO604A Develop and maintain a service level strategy.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to establish, monitor and maintain a service level strategy in a customer contact environment.

Competence in this unit requires developing and implementing a successful service level strategy to achieve the service levels required by an organisation and the associated processes required to establish that service level.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies in customer contact environments where the achievement of this service level may be a regulatory or organisational requirement and is normally organisation-specific.

This role is undertaken by staff with managerial responsibility, although specialist staff may undertake it under supervision, depending on the size and structure of the centre.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to organise and monitor the operation of a compliance program/management system established by an organisation. It has been designed to be consistent with AS 3806:2006 Compliance programs. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals with a broad knowledge of compliance who are involved in organising and operating compliance managing systems and creating solutions to unpredictable problems. Well developed skills enable these individuals to provide leadership and guidance to others, although they have limited responsibility for the output of others. Analysis and evaluation of information will take place from a variety of sources. This unit could be applied as part of a broader role of an owner-manager or senior manager in a small organisation. It may also be undertaken as a section or line manager in an operational unit or as a member of a compliance management team within a larger organisation. Application of this unit must be consistent with the pertinent sections of relevant Australian and international standards and legislative requirements including: AS 3806:2006 Compliance programs, AS ISO 10002:2006 Customer satisfaction - Guidelines for complaints handling in organizations, AS/NZS 4360:2004 Risk management and AS ISO 15489:2004 Records

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to identify and interpret the range of internal and external compliance requirements and obligations that must be fulfilled by an organisation. A range of legislation, rules, regulations and codes of practice may apply to this unit at the time of endorsement, depending on job roles and jurisdictions.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals working as a chief executive or manager in a small organisation (where it would be part of their broad role) or as a member of a compliance management team within a larger organisation. These individuals require a sound theoretical knowledge of compliance and well established skills in identifying and interpreting compliance requirements relevant to the operations and sphere of business of the organisation and/or industry sector concerned. The unit also applies to internal or external consultants as part of a broader advisory role to the chief executive or management team of a large or small organisation on compliance management policies and systems. As the activities are focused primarily on identifying and interpreting specific legislative requirements, codes of practice, and internal standards and procedures as they relate to a particular organisation, this unit differs from BSBCOM601B Research compliance requirements and issues. Researching compliance issues is a higher order competence aimed at carrying out research into a wider range of compliance-related issues, such as the costs of compliance, the potential impact of compliance on an

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to explore and investigate various aspects and issues associated with compliance requirements and a related compliance program/management system. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to the higher level research activities needed to identify and investigate critical aspects of compliance requirements and related systems. It may be focused on researching aspects and issues to do with compliance requirements and systems for a specific organisation, or aspects and issues of compliance more generally, such as across a particular industry or the national economy. The unit applies to officers in regulatory authorities or large organisations with roles and responsibilities related to identifying and investigating impacts, issues and policy implications of various aspects of compliance. It also applies to internal or external consultants who carry out research activities for clients on various aspects of compliance as a compliance researcher or member of a compliance management team (usually within a larger organisation).

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
• organisation's internal and external dependencies and interdependencies • organisation's policies and procedures, including risk management strategy • past and current internal, external and industry disruptions • relationship of the business continuity management framework to other business processes • relevant legislation and regulations that impact on business continuity, such as OHS, environment, duty of care, contract, company, freedom of information, industrial relations, privacy and confidentiality, due diligence, records management • types of available insurance, what is required and insurance providers in relation to business continuity planning

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • knowledge and understanding of an organisation's culture and capabilities, and the need for sustainable business continuity management planning • demonstrated ability to think strategically and to work effectively with others to establish a business continuity management framework for an organisation.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to workplace business continuity documentation • access to feedback from teams and all levels of management.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence • third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the participant • observation of presentations

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

1. Examine the value of curiosity and questioning	1.1. Appraise the value of curiosity and questioning in both work and life situations 1.2. Consider how different types of questions and styles of questioning apply in diverse situations
2. Develop the habit of asking questions and wondering why	2.1. Reflect on and wonder about issues and situations 2.2. Ask questions of self to challenge and expand individual thinking 2.3. Ask questions of others in a constructive way to seek broader knowledge and understanding 2.4. Identify situations when too much wondering and questioning may be inappropriate or ineffective 2.5. Assess the best ways to structure questions for different situations
3. Contribute to answers as well as questions	3.1. Take responsibility for answering questions as well as for asking them 3.2. From many possible questions, determine the key

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication skills to actively listen and to ask questions of others in a constructive way
- critical thinking and problem-solving skills to formulate and ask relevant questions, and come up with appropriate answers
- comprehension skills to interpret and distil key information of relevance to a given situation.

Required knowledge

- different types of questions and their relevance to different situations
- techniques to assist in forming the habit of asking questions and taking responsibility for answers
- typical blockers to the critical thinking process
- why questions are important and the benefits of asking good questions for individuals, businesses and communities (the importance of critical thinking).

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • application of a conscious process of questioning to achieve new understandings • knowledge and understanding of how critical thinking and questioning impacts on individual lives, the broader community and work situations.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • interactions with specific challenges and situations to demonstrate the application of critical thinking (this would usually involve interactions with others).
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • evaluation of a candidate blog exploring different ideas and questions • review of candidate response to scenarios that allow the candidate to apply critical thinking techniques to a particular life or work situation, and to demonstrate ability to portray curiosity and exploration of new concepts • evaluation of candidate response to the challenge of adopting different perspectives on a situation, and ability to both develop and respond to questions from those perspectives • observation of the candidate participating in a group problem-solving session • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of typical blockers to the critical thinking process.
Guidance information for assessment	Critical thinking always occurs in a specific context. Therefore holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is highly recommended. Assessors must, however, retain a strong focus on the critical thinking skills as described in this

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Value of curiosity and questioning might relate to:	• developing a more efficient way of doing something • developing a new idea • developing and improving products and services • enhancing skills and career opportunities • enhancing the physical environment • financial benefit • greater personal satisfaction • improving interpersonal relationships
Different types of questions may include questions about:	• accuracy • breadth • clarity • depth • emotion • fairness • logic • meaning • precision • relevance • significance • social engagement • society • style • taste
Questions of self may include:	• am I being distracted by irrelevant information?

RANGE STATEMENT
	• are claims warranted? • are there any unstated assumptions? • could I do this differently or better? • do I have any ideas to share about this? • have I seen something that may have application here? • how can I do that? • how can I fix this? • how long will that take? • if they are doing that, could I? • is this a reliable source? • is this relevant to me? • was I fair? • what are the real facts of this situation?
Questions of others may include:	• do we have a budget? • how did you come up with that? • how do you feel about that? • how does that work? • what does it mean? • why do you want me to do it like that? • why do we do it like that? • why is it so?
Situations when too much wondering or questioning may be inappropriate or ineffective may relate to:	• contractual agreements • extreme time pressure or non-negotiable deadlines • financial limitations • procedures determined by laws or other regulations • safety issues • when others are totally closed to new ideas
Responsibility for answering questions may involve:	• acknowledging shared responsibility • adopting a positive 'can do' attitude • following up on practical details • pro-actively seeking information • suggesting a new approach • talking to others about possible answers
Key question to be answered may be determined by:	• constraints of the broader context and environment • overall goal - what needs to be achieved • personal hopes and expectations

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

RANGE STATEMENT
Information needed to answer the question may be:	• accessed by observing people • already inside own head • in journals, books or other printed materials • in workplace documents • in a hardware store • on the internet • with colleagues • with friends or family
Other information may be:	• opinions • own assumptions or those of others • personal prejudice • spin or public relations
Preconceptions and assumptions may relate to:	• assumptions about the way others are thinking • established ways of doing things • existing ideas, products and services • risk aversion • self-imposed limitations on what is possible

BSBCRT301A Develop and extend critical and creative thinking skills

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to develop the habit of thinking in a more creative way. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals who need to develop and extend their critical and creative thinking skills. Creative thinking involves looking at things differently, musing, testing, experimenting and challenging existing thought patterns. Creative thinking can take place anywhere - at home, at work, lying in bed at night, in the shower or on the bus. It can be applied to any type of issue or situation. When used effectively it can assist with the improvement of existing, or the development of entirely new or innovative services, products or processes. Sometimes creative thinking may pay off in a seemingly unconnected way at a future time and in an apparently unrelated context. Creative thinking can be learnt and applied through thoughtful application of skills related to observation, analysis, reflection, problem solving, evaluation and critical appraisal. Effective use of creative thinking skills opens up new opportunities for individuals, businesses and communities.

2. Generate ideas and responses	2.1. Explore and use a range of creative thinking techniques to generate ideas and responses 2.2. Muse on, play around with and have fun with ideas in relation to a perceived objective 2.3. Identify and challenge blockers to creative thinking 2.4. Consider and explore realities beyond the current situation 2.5. Evaluate, and where appropriate, challenge existing boundaries to determine perceived or actual constraints 2.6. Show willingness to take risks with ideas and thought processes 2.7. Look around in familiar and unfamiliar places for new inspiration and habitually record observations, experiences, ideas and reflective thoughts to broaden personal knowledge base 2.8. Acknowledge and accept the opportunity for revelation when least expected 2.9. Identify connections and associations from things that seem unconnected
3. Challenge, test and re invent ideas	3.1. Identify, interrogate and challenge the assumptions behind ideas 3.2. Experiment with variations, and explore and challenge a range of different solutions and ideas 3.3. Consciously change perspectives, and evaluate ideas and situations in new ways 3.4. Where appropriate, involve others in ideas and how they might change or be improved
4. Enhance creative thinking skills	4.1. Consciously challenge and question own thought patterns and ways of responding to work and life situations 4.2. Identify and take opportunities to self-assess and to learn about new ideas and different ways of thinking 4.3. Take opportunities to practise and experiment with creative thinking techniques across work and life situations 4.4. Pro-actively talk to others about ways that new ideas and patterns of thinking can be encouraged and developed

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills
• creative thinking skills to participate effectively and actively in a range of creative thinking activities • literacy skills to explore and analyse information dealing with potentially complex concepts from a wide range of sources • problem-solving skills to tease out central themes and issues, and to respond with a range of ideas and solutions • reflective learning and self-management skills to question and challenge own skills and practice, to identify and access learning opportunities, and to be prepared to learn new things in unfamiliar areas.
Required knowledge
• common blockers to creative thinking, both from an individual and organisational perspective • definitions, concepts and history of creativity at an overview level • different creative thinking techniques and how they work, including daydreaming and mental wandering, wishful thinking, use of metaphors and analogies, trigger words, morphological analysis, brainstorming visualisation, mind mapping, lateral thinking games, Edward de Bono's six thinking hats, making associations and storytelling • how creativity applies everywhere, not just in traditionally 'creative' contexts • impacts of creative thinking on individuals, communities and businesses • techniques for filtering to process diverse information • ways of extending and developing individual creative thinking skills.

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to articulate, present and debate ideas. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals who need to present and debate ideas in a work or broader life context. While the unit shares some similarities with units such as BSBCMM401A Make a presentation or BSBRES401A Analyse and present research information, the focus is quite different. This unit focuses on the creative ways in which ideas can be presented to provoke response, reaction and critical debate. Risk taking, storytelling and participation in critical debate are key features of the unit. Ideas might be quite complex in nature and relate to new products, services, creative works or new ways of doing things.

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication skills to present ideas in ways that engage and provoke response, and to debate and discuss potentially complex concepts
- creative thinking skills to develop responses and new ideas in response to feedback
- learning and self-management skills to actively seek feedback and to learn from others
- literacy skills to develop and interpret information dealing with complex ideas.

Required knowledge

- creative and different ways of expressing and communicating ideas, and of making an opportunity pitch
- different ways in which individuals receive and respond to ideas and information, and what influences their response
- nature and role of risk taking in the presentation and debate of ideas
- role of storytelling in communicating ideas and key storytelling techniques
- techniques to tailor comments to particular audiences.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals who participate in a collaborative creative process in a work or broader life context. It is relevant to individuals who are involved in what is traditionally considered creative endeavour but is also very important in broader business and community activities where creative team effort is highly valued. The unit focuses on effective engagement in a collaborative process, underpinned by a commitment to trust and ethics as a key feature of collaborative creative effort.

Use language and adopt a demeanour that demonstrates respect and trust for others 2.4. Listen to, value, respect and trust the contributions of others as material to work with rather than positions to argue against 2.5. Challenge, test and share ideas in a supportive way as part of the creative process 2.6. Move on from initial positions and preconceptions to accept and embrace new and unpredictable ideas as they emerge during the creative process 2.7. Play a role that encourages the movement and shift of ideas within the group towards a well-conceived solution
3. Reflect on own role in the collaborative creative process	3.1. Reflect on own level of participation, relationships with others and personal behaviour in the collaborative process 3.2. Identify ways to do better next time and follow up on any issues that need to be resolved 3.3. Identify and seek opportunities to refine and expand own skills and knowledge, including learning from failing

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills
• communication skills to nurture trust, to model open and supportive communication, and to articulate potentially complex ideas • creative thinking skills to generate and explore ideas • learning and self-management skills to reflect on and enhance own ability to contribute effectively to a collaborative creative process • problem-solving skills to continually be evaluating and challenging ideas and moving them forward towards solutions.

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
Required knowledge
• concept of shared intellectual property from collaborative creativity • concepts of trust and ethical behaviour in the context of creative endeavour • different roles people may play in a collaborative creative process and how this contributes to the overall effort • how the creative process works in different situations (e.g. as an individual, as part of a group) • how the potential for creativity can be maximised within a team • legal framework that affects copyright, moral rights and intellectual property issues • what stops creativity in a group environment.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • positive and full participation in a collaborative creative process that generates, expands and develops ideas into a well-conceived solution • communication and creative-thinking skills that make a positive contribution to the collaborative effort • knowledge and understanding of the ethical framework in which any type of creative endeavour operates.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • involvement of a team of people in the collaborative creative process.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

EVIDENCE GUIDE
	• direct observation of the candidate participating in collaborative creative activity • interviews with others participating in the process to determine the nature and quality of the candidate's participation and interactions • evaluation of candidate presentation (verbal or written) on the collaborative process, including challenges, benefits and key learning for the future • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of concepts of trust and ethical behaviour in the context of creative endeavour.
Guidance information for assessment	A collaborative creative effort always occurs in a specific context. Therefore holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is highly recommended. Assessors must, however, retain a strong focus on the key aspects of collaboration and creativity detailed in this unit. Combined assessment with the following unit would also be appropriate: • BSBCRT301A Develop and extend critical and creative thinking skills.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Personal philosophy of trustworthy and ethical behaviour may relate to:	• acknowledging discomfort or anger • being prepared to fully participate • communicating in an open way • honesty • honouring commitments • sensitivity to social, cultural, personal situations and dynamics • showing respect • understanding of the consequences of actions

Professional discretion and judgement may relate to:	• assessing when to keep quiet • being aware of and responding to different personality types • knowing when it is appropriate or inappropriate to share information • knowing with whom information should be shared
Different ways that different people may contribute may relate to:	• different approaches to expressing opinions or ideas • inclinations to lead or follow • influence with others • interpersonal skills • networks • past experience • technical skills and expertise
Belief in personal ideas may be demonstrated by:	• backing ideas up with information and rationale • being prepared to argue for own ideas • confidence in own ability to create many ideas • confidence to share ideas • confident articulation of ideas • spending time developing and refining own ideas
Language that demonstrates respect for others may involve:	• acknowledging new ideas and effort • avoiding negative words • avoiding personal negatives like 'you cannot' or 'you should not' • choosing words wisely • listening • making differentiations between ideas and people • managing tone • speaking at a level appropriate to the listener
Demeanour that demonstrates respect for others may relate to:	• avoiding intellectual bullying • encouraging others to express ideas • facial expression • keeping a positive mindset • listening before speaking • physical position • refraining from blame or accusation

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

RANGE STATEMENT
	• other non-verbal behaviour • understanding the balance between constructive comment and attention seeking
Movement and shift of ideas may involve:	• building in 'what if' scenarios • encouraging a stocktake before moving forward • making connections between seemingly disparate ideas • refining ideas that seem positive • returning to earlier ideas • returning to key objectives • suggesting new processes • turning ideas 'on their head' to resolve blockages

BSBCRT501A Originate and develop concepts

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to originate and develop concepts for products, programs, processes or services to an operational level. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals who originate and develop concepts of some complexity and progress that concept to the point where it can be implemented. Individuals may be employed by organisations, be sub contractors or consultants brought in by companies to work on specific projects, or be individuals or part of a team working independently. Concepts could be developed for any business or community activity or process such as marketing campaigns, staff development programs, information technology and communication systems. This unit is also highly relevant to practitioners in the creative industries who develop products such advertising campaigns, radio and television programs, entertainment events, films, exhibitions and digital media products. A person undertaking this role would operate with a high degree of autonomy and at a senior level if working within an organisation. However, the process of generating concepts and ideas is collaborative in nature. Skills associated with writing proposals to support concept development are covered in BSBWRT401A Write complex documents.

BSBCRT601A Research and apply concepts and theories of creativity

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to undertake research into different concepts and theories of creativity, and to apply those to a particular field of endeavour. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals who use sophisticated research and critical analysis skills in the exploration of creativity and its application to work and life practice. This research may be related specifically to fields of practice traditionally considered as 'creative', such as the arts, but may equally relate to much broader fields of human activity and endeavour. The scope of the research activity has both significant depth and breadth. A broader, more general approach to the ideas and history surrounding creativity is found in BSBCRT403A Explore the history and social impact of creativity.

BSBCUS501C Manage quality customer service

Modification History

Release	Comments
Release 1	New release of this Qualification released with version 6 of BSB07 Business Services Training Package. Revised unit. Required skills updated to focus on learning and development practices and compliance with policy and procedures.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to develop strategies to manage organisational systems that ensure products and services are delivered and maintained to standards agreed by the organisation.

Operators may have staff involved in delivering customer service and are responsible for the quality of their work. In many instances the work will occur within the organisation's policies and procedures framework. At this level, the exercise of considerable discretion and judgement, using a range of problem solving and decision making strategies, will be required.

Application of the Unit

Many managers are involved in ensuring that products and services are delivered and maintained to standards agreed by the organisation.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

Pre-Requisites

Not applicable.

Employability Skills Information

This unit contains employability skills.

Element	Performance Criteria
Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

1. Plan to meet internal and external customer requirements	1.1 Investigate, identify, assess, and include the needs of customers in planning processes 1.2 Ensure plans achieve the quality, time and cost specifications agreed with customers
2. Ensure delivery of quality products and services	2.1 Deliver products and services to customer specifications within organisation's business plan 2.2 Monitor team performance to consistently meet the organisation's quality and delivery standards 2.3 Assist colleagues to overcome difficulty in meeting customer service standards
3. Monitor, adjust and review customer service	3.1 Develop and use strategies to monitor progress in achieving product and/or service targets and standards 3.2 Develop and use strategies to obtain customer feedback to improve the provision of products and services 3.3. Develop, procure and use resources effectively to provide quality products and services to customers 3.4 Make decisions to overcome problems and to adapt customer services, products and service delivery in consultation with appropriate individuals and groups 3.5 Manage records, reports and recommendations within the organisation's systems and processes

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Required skills

- analytical skills to identify trends and positions of products and services
- communication skills to:
  - coach and mentor staff and colleagues
  - monitor and advise on customer service strategies
- literacy skills to:
  - edit and proofread texts to ensure clarity of meaning and accuracy of grammar and punctuation
  - prepare general information and papers according to target audience
  - read and understand a variety of texts
- problem-solving skills to:
  - deal with customer enquiries or complaints
  - deal with complex and non-routine difficulties
- technology skills to select and use technology appropriate to a task
- self-management skills to:
  - comply with policies and procedures
  - consistently evaluate and monitor own performance
  - seek learning opportunities.

Required knowledge

- key provisions of relevant legislation from all levels of government that may affect aspects of business operations, such as:
  - anti-discrimination legislation
  - Australian consumer law
  - ethical principles
  - codes of practice
  - privacy laws
  - financial legislation
  - occupational health and safety (OHS)
- organisational policy and procedures for customer service including handling customer complaints
- service standards and best practice models
- public relations and product promotion
- techniques for dealing with customers, including customers with specific needs
- techniques for solving complaints including the principles and techniques involved in the management and organisation of:
  - customer behaviour
  - customer needs research
  - customer relations
  - ongoing product and/or service quality

- problem identification and resolution
- quality customer service delivery
- record keeping and management methods
- strategies for monitoring, managing and introducing ways to improve customer service relationships
- strategies to obtain customer feedback.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • plans, policies or procedures for delivering quality customer service • demonstrated techniques in solving complex customer complaints and system problems that lead to poor customer service • knowledge of techniques for solving complaints.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to appropriate documentation and resources normally used in the workplace.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • assessment of written reports • demonstration of techniques • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • observation of performance in role plays • evaluation of leadership, supervision, coaching and mentoring used to assist colleagues to overcome difficulty in meeting customer service standards • review of strategies developed and used to monitor progress in achieving product and/or service targets and standards • review of records, reports and recommendations about managing customer service.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended.

Range Statement

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Customers may be:	• Board members • clients, purchasers of services • co-workers, peers and fellow frontline managers • members of the general public who make contact with the organisation, such as prospective purchasers of services • potential funding bodies • supervisors • suppliers of goods and services and contractors providing goods and services.
Quality may refer to:	• characteristics of a product, system, service or process that meet the requirements of customers and interested parties.
Products and services may include:	• either products or services • goods • ideas • infrastructure • private or public sets of benefits.
Strategies may refer to:	• databases and other controls to record and compare data over time • electronic feedback mechanisms using intranet, internet and email • feedback forms and other devices to enable communication from customers • long-term or short-term plans for monitoring achievement and evaluating effectiveness • policies and procedures • questionnaires, survey and interviews • training and development activities.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

Resources may include:	• buildings/facilities • equipment • finance • information • people • power/energy • technology • time.

BSBDES201A Follow a design process

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to follow a design process at a basic level. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to any individual who follows a design process to respond to specific issues or challenges, including product and service requirements arising from particular business or community needs. The unit acknowledges the need to encourage the development of skills, which are sometimes called 'design thinking' or 'design consciousness'. In essence, the unit is about purposeful problem solving - defining the challenge, coming up with ideas, working with others to develop ideas, reflecting on progress, presenting an idea so it can be implemented and, of course, evaluating whether an idea has met the original challenge. Designers use the processes described in this unit but at a much more sophisticated and complex level. This unit is not about being a designer.

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication skills to liaise with others, to share ideas, and to present information and ideas clearly and concisely
- creative thinking skills to generate ideas in response to a defined problem or need in a familiar context
- literacy skills to analyse and interpret information dealing with concepts and ideas from own area of work
- problem-solving skills to identify problems and to work with others to develop solutions
- self-management skills to take responsibility for own work as part of an overall collaborative process.

Required knowledge

- context for the challenge, including any specific factors that impact on work

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Future Skills Organisation

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
• creative thinking techniques that can be used to generate ideas in any context • key features and steps in the design process as a way of thinking and solving problems • legal framework that impacts on activities in a particular context • potential sources of information for new ideas, relevant to the specific context.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • active participation in a project which uses the design process to develop solutions to a given challenge • effective communication skills to be a member of a collaborative team • knowledge of the design process, and how it can be used in developing solutions to different issues and challenges.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to materials, tools and equipment required to implement solutions in the given work context • interaction with others to reflect the collaborative nature of the design process.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • direct observation of the candidate participating in collaborative processes • evaluation of documentation maintained by the candidate to support different ideas • evaluation of a presentation made by the candidate outlining proposed solutions and processes used to develop those solutions • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of parameters and context for work in a given industry context.

Guidance information for assessment	The design process does not occur in isolation. Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • other technical or specialist units from particular areas of work.

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Nature and scope of the challenge could be very varied, and may relate to new or improved:	• applications of materials or equipment • processes • products or services • systems • uses of technology
Stakeholders may include:	• client • end users • friends and family • supervisor or manager • work colleagues (working in the same or different areas)
Constraints may relate to:	• availability of materials, equipment or tools • boundaries about what can and cannot be changed • legal restrictions • time and budget
Relevant supporting information	• drawings, specifications or other technical data

and assistance may include:	• ideas from colleagues • industry associations or organisations • personal experience • policy and procedures manuals • print or electronic media (including internet) • reference manuals • technical experts

Different options and ideas may be generated by:	• brainstorming:
	  • stop and go
	  • sequencing
	  • buzz session
	  • bulletin board
	  • computer-aided
	• daydreaming and mental wandering
	• Edward de Bono's six thinking hats
	• ego alter or heroes
	• graphic organisers:
	  • visual maps
	  • webbing
	  • concept fans
	• lateral thinking games
	• making associations
	• mind mapping
	• morphological analysis
	• storytelling
	• sub-culture surfing
	• trigger words
	• use of metaphors and analogies
	• vision circles
	• visualisation
	• wishful thinking
	• word salads

Appropriate format may be:	• checklists • digital presentation • drawings/sketches • models • plans • verbal presentation
Resources to support	• equipment

implementation may include:	• financial resources • human resources • information technology support • materials • tools
Testing*, *prototyping or trialling may involve:	• creating a physical model or sample • testing the solution against different scenarios • using a small group to test the solution
Documentation may include:	• diary showing progress of work • progress reports • records of communication (e.g. emails) • working drawings
Advice and guidance may involve:	• facilitating access to networks or contacts • facilitating access to resources • providing technical expertise

	• natural and manufactured forms, objects and/or structures • optics, including single and multiple vanishing points • scientific texts • web-based resources

Creative thinking techniques may include:	• brainstorming:
	  • bulletin board
	  • buzz session
	  • computer-aided
	  • sequencing
	  • stop and go
	• daydreaming and mental wandering
	• Edward de Bono's six thinking hats
	• ego alter or heroes
	• graphic organisers:
	  • concept fans
	  • visual maps
	  • webbing
	• lateral thinking games
	• making associations
	• mind mapping
	• morphological analysis
	• storytelling
	• sub-culture surfing
	• trigger words
	• use of metaphors and analogies
	• vision circles
	• visualisation
	• wishful thinking
	• word salads

Experimentation may involve consideration of:	• contrast • direction • exploring tonal range to produce illusion of 3-dimensionality • harmony • linear perspective • mark making • modelling volume through marks and tone • pattern

	• positive and negative shape • proportion • rhythm • shape • size • texture • tone
Concept or idea to be communicated may relate to a range of activities such as:	• advertising and promotion • artistic works • exhibitions or events • fashion designs • interactive digital media products • interior designs • sign making
Materials, tools and equipment may include:	• cardboard • air brushes • cutting blades • digital equipment • found materials • glue • inks and washes • markers • measuring tools • pencils • pens and nibs • range of brushes • range of papers • receptacles • relevant and current software • rulers • scissors • spatulas • sponges • spray guns
Concept realisations or samples may be:	• digital output • drawn, painted, printed, collaged • photographs

BSBDES303A Explore and apply the creative design process to 3D forms

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to explore and creatively apply the design process to the development of 3 dimensional (3D) forms. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals who apply the creative design process to the development of 3-dimensional forms. The unit underpins many other specialised design units.

Licensing/Regulatory Information

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

1. Source information on 3-dimensional design	1.1. Identify and access relevant sources of information on 3-dimensional design 1.2. Evaluate and collate information to build a knowledge of 3-dimensional design
2. Explore the creative design process for 3-dimensional forms	2.1. Use creative thinking techniques to generate a range of ideas and options 2.2. Use experimentation to explore and challenge a range of different ideas 2.3. Challenge assumptions, reflect on ideas and refine approaches 2.4. Consciously change perspective, and evaluate ideas and situations in new ways
3. Communicate concepts or ideas through application of design processes to 3-dimensional forms	3.1. Investigate and reflect on how a particular concept or idea might be communicated in a 3-dimensional form 3.2. Select materials, tools and equipment relevant to the realisation of the concept or idea 3.3. Apply a creative design process to produce a range of 3-dimensional concept realisations 3.4. Reflect on own application of design process and success in communicating the concept or idea 3.5. Seek and obtain feedback from others about the 3-dimensional form and its success in communicating the concept or idea 3.6. Present and store concept realisations or samples in a format which takes account of the need for professional presentation and potential value for future work

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills
• communication skills to explain ideas and to have discussions about design concepts with others • literacy skills sufficient to read and interpret information about 3-dimensional design • visual literacy skills to make judgements about the application of the design process to 3-dimensional forms.
Required knowledge
• copyright, moral rights, intellectual property issues and legislation, and their impact on aspects of design • creative thinking techniques that can be used as part of the design process • elements and principles of design as applied to 3-dimensional forms • materials, tools and equipment required for the design of 3-dimensional forms in the relevant work context • notion of individual interpretation and choice within the design process • particular challenges and issues in the design of 3-dimensional forms • relationships between form and space.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

EVIDENCE GUIDE
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • production of a range of samples or concept realisations which show the creative application of the processes to 3-dimensional forms • knowledge of the design process as it applies to 3-dimensional work.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to the materials resources and equipment needed to apply design processes to 3-dimensional forms.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • evaluation of samples or concept realisations produced by the candidate and interrogation of the creative process used • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of 3-dimensional design.
Guidance information for assessment	The design process does not occur in isolation. Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended.

BSBDES304A Source and apply design industry knowledge

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to source, apply and update a general knowledge of the design industry. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals who need to source and apply knowledge on the design industry to support professional design practice. The unit acknowledges the concept of a design industry and design as a discrete profession. BSBDES202A Evaluate the nature of design in a specific industry context is more appropriate for those involved in design related activity as part of a broader job role. Design is a practice based on problem solving, aesthetics, materials and processes. It refers to professional design of work involving two dimensions and forms in space which respond to a brief, and may relate to the design of digital media, graphics, illustrative work, industrial designs, events/exhibits, fashion, jewellery, fashion accessories, furniture, furnishing, interior or urban design.
