  - this requires a level of skill that enables the worker to follow work-related instructions and directions and the ability to seek clarification and comments from supervisors
  - industry work roles will require a literacy level that will enable workers to interpret international safety signs, and complete workplace forms and records where necessary
- Apply oral communication skills required to fulfil work role in a safe manner and as specified by the organisation:
  - this requires a level of skill and ability to follow work-related instructions and directions and to seek clarification and comments from supervisors, individuals and colleagues
- Apply verbal and non-verbal communication skills:
  - industry work roles will require effective verbal and non-verbal communication skills to ask questions, clarify understanding and meaning, recognise and interpret non-verbal cues, adapt communication styles to meet specific needs, provide information and express encouragement and support including active listening and empathy
Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is best assessed on the job or in a simulated workplace under the normal range of conditions
- Consistency in performance should consider the requirements of the particular workplace context
- The candidate must show evidence that they have sourced and provided information and worked with individuals and service providers

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work.
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally and linguistically diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- In recognition of particular issues facing culturally and linguistically [CALD] diverse communities, workers should be aware of cultural and current issues impacting on CALD groups
The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Context of and specific resources for assessment:
- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged.
- Resources required for assessment of this unit include access to a workplace or simulated workplace where assessment may occur.

Method of assessment:
- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on ‘What if?’ scenarios.
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes.
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a ‘period of time’ and/or in a ‘number of locations’, any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, or other appropriate persons.

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.
Potential barriers may include:

- limited activity options available in the area
- limited access to information about available options
- insufficient resources to participate in identified options

4.4 Use constructive strategies for dealing with strong caller emotions and stressful situations
4.5 Discuss own reactions to these strong caller emotions or stressful situations with peers and/or supervisor
4.6 Use a range of effective self-care strategies for responding to strong emotions and stressful situations
4.7 Use peer support to seek advice and knowledge, brainstorm and problem solve collaboratively

Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively perform task skills, task management skills, contingency management skills and job/role environment skills as outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit.

These include knowledge of:

- Awareness of unique issues for callers with special needs, including those from an Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander/culturally and linguistically diverse (CALD) background
- Basic understanding of relevant guidelines and legislation
- Communication styles/techniques and how to apply them
- Organisation policies and procedures
- Personal attitudes, beliefs and values and how these might facilitate or impede effective communication
- Principles of effective communication, in particular, communication processes that support resilience and self-management in others
- Procedures for facilitating referrals and emergency interventions
- Scope and limitations of telephone assessment role
- Service and own role boundaries
- Understanding of the cognitive or emotional barriers and dynamics in seeking help

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Communicate effectively with callers/clients, supervisors and co-workers
- Demonstrate willingness to work within philosophy, policies and procedures of the organisation to address callers’ needs
- Establish priorities, manage time effectively and demonstrate well-developed personal organisation skills
- Identify requirements outside scope of role, responsibility, knowledge and skill
- Use skills in defusing challenging situations to ensure support and positive outcomes for callers who may be highly stressed
- Work collaboratively with internal and external stakeholders to achieve organisation goals

In addition, the candidate must be able to demonstrate relevant task skills, task management skills, contingency management skills and job/role environment skills

These include the ability to:

- Communicate with callers in a representative range of workplace situations and involving:
  - adjusting communication to meet differing needs
  - providing feedback
  - strategies to minimise conflict and tensions
  - using active listening and recognising non-visual triggers
  - using language that is respectful, non-judgemental and neutral
- Demonstrate skills in:
  - accurate data entry using current assessment tools and technology
  - applying basic understanding of relevant guidelines and legislation
  - effective communication
  - information gathering and situation analysis
  - negotiation
• Use oral communication skills (language competence) required to fulfil job roles as specified by the organisation, including:
  • acknowledging and responding to a range of views
  • active listening
  • asking for clarification and probing as necessary
  • asking questions
  • negotiating solutions
  • using interviewing techniques
Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is best assessed in the workplace or in a realistic simulated workplace setting under the normal range of workplace conditions
- Consistency of performance should be demonstrated over the required range of situations relevant to the workplace
- Where, for reasons of safety, space, or access to equipment and resources, assessment takes place away from the workplace, the assessment environment should represent workplace conditions as closely as possible

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in CALD environments
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however, holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources essential for assessment include:
  - workplace health and safety (WHS) guidelines
  - relevant organisation and legislative guidelines, standards and procedures

Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on ‘What if?’ scenarios
The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

- Assessment of this unit of competency will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a ‘period of time’ and/or in a ‘number of locations’, any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons

Related units:

It is recommended that this unit be assessed in conjunction with the following related unit or an equivalent unit on assessment of client’s needs:

- CHCRCP402A Conduct assessment of carer’s needs
Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

The caller may include:
- Advocate
- Care recipient
- Carer
- Family member
- Friend
- Significant other

Active listening skills may include:
- Appropriate brief encouragers which help the caller relate their story and concerns
- Balancing the frequency of questions
- Hearing the caller’s concerns
- Paraphrasing (reflection of content)
- Reflection of feelings/thoughts, behaviours and experience (content)
- Summarising and closure
- Understanding the caller’s context
- Using open and closed questions to expand or clarify understanding

Empowering relationship may include:
- Active listening
- Avoid use of labelling
- Exploring options and potential consequences with the caller
- Facilitating informed caller choices
- Focus the caller on identifying immediate needs and concerns
- Identify achievable tasks to be addressed after the call
- Identifying, affirming and focusing on the caller’s strengths and opportunities
- Reframing, summary and closure

The nature of the call may include:
- A request for information
- A request for advice
- A request for services
- An emergency

Non-visual feedback includes:
- Background noise
- Manner of speech, including rate and type of language used
- Paralingual clues
Cues which may indicate caller stress or distress include:
- Silence
- Tone/pitch of voice
- Crying
- Inability of the caller to articulate problems
- Inability of the caller to identify or accept possible solutions to needs
- Raised tone of voice
- Talking at the same time/not listening to responses
- Terminology of negative words (e.g. burden, prisoner, trapped and can’t cope)

Strategies to effectively manage any abuse appropriately includes:
- Provide a warning that the behaviour is unacceptable
- Report to manager according to organisation guidelines
- Terminate the call appropriately

Strategies to defuse the caller’s anger/frustration include:
- Acknowledge and validate the caller’s feelings
- Identify opportunities to implement active listening skills
- Identify priorities to be addressed and recognise the possible need for additional contact to work through issues
- Manage tone, pitch and pace of voice
- Recognise that the caller is angry/frustrated
- Remain calm while allowing the caller to express their anger/frustration, within limitations
- Take opportunities to empower the caller and assist them to reach a solution to resolve any identified issues

Callers with special needs include but are not limited to:
- Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander callers
- CALD callers
- Callers who have cognitive impairment
- Callers who have hearing impairment
- Callers with dementia
- Callers with mental health problems
- Callers with a speech impediment or decreased verbal communication
- Callers living in rural and remote locations
- Callers who may have experienced social exclusion and/or trauma

Situations where telephone communication is inadequate may include:
- Environmental factors impacting on the caller’s ability to engage over the telephone
- Particular needs facing Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander and CALD callers
- Severe emotional distress
Next steps in the process may include:

- The need for an in-depth assessment
- Establish actions and timeframes
- Clarification of the caller’s expectations of respite/support
- Follow-up contact
- Identification of responsibility for actions
- Referral to another service

Barriers to listening to the caller may include:

- Environmental factors
- Inability to connect with the caller on a personal level
- Lack of understanding of the individual’s context
- Pre-conceived perceptions of the caller and their situation
- Talking at the same time/not listening to responses
- Use of jargons

Strategies for dealing with strong caller emotions and stressful situations may include:

- Awareness of personal vulnerabilities which may be triggered during a call
- Containment skills
- Debriefing
- Externalise caller emotions
- Manage tone, pitch and pace of voice
- Supervision
- Identification of alternative communication mediums

Range of effective self-care strategies may include:

- Constructive feedback about assessment skills
- Debriefing and defusing
- Knowing when and how to ask for back-up/support
- Recognition and processing of call-related experiences
- Recognition of stressful situations when it is appropriate to terminate a telephone call
- Reflection on practice
- Self monitoring

- Assessment of this unit of competency will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a ‘period of time’ and/or in a ‘number of locations’, any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons

Related units:

This unit should be assessed in conjunction with the following related unit:

- CHCRCP403A Support carers to access information and services
Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Intake screening process includes:
- Collection of personal data about the carer
- Collection of required minimum data
- Determination of eligibility of service
- Establishment of next steps for assessment
- Identification of priority for assessment
- Referral to another service

Level of assessment refers to:
- Quick assessment for emergency situations
- Shallow and broad assessment process which includes broad, general questions of all the assessment domains
- In-depth assessment includes specific exploration of identified domains

Assessment process may require the use of tools which may include:
- ACCNA-R
- Caregiver Reaction Assessment scale (CRA)
- Carer Strain Index (CSI)
- K10
- Self Rated Burden scale (SRB)
- Zarit
- Organisation or state specific assessment tools:
  - service coordination tool template (SCOTT)
  - ongoing needs identification tool (ONI)

Carers with special needs include but are not limited to:
- Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander and CALD carers
- Carers who have cognitive impairment
- Carers who have hearing impairment
- Carers with dementia
- Carers with mental health problems
- Carers with a speech impediment or decreased verbal communication
- Carers living in rural and remote locations
- Carers who may have experienced social exclusion and/or trauma
Carer’s needs may include:
- Advocacy
- Case management
- Counselling
- Guided referral for other service
- Information on available services
- Respite services (direct and indirect)

Complex care issues may include but are not limited to:
- Abusive situations by either the carer or care recipient
- Behaviours of concern by the care recipient
- CALD issues
- Family dynamics
- Hidden carers
- High-level support needed for the care recipient
- Situations where the needs of the carer and care recipient are in conflict
- Young carers

Identify and prioritise the carer’s need for a service includes taking into account:
- Adequacy of available respite to the carer
- How much time the carer needs to spend caring
- Increasing needs of the care recipient
- Level of the carer emotional stress/strain (using a screening tool)
- Number of care recipients being cared for
- Other informal and formal support available or currently provided
- Presence of other events affecting the carer’s capacity to care
- Reason the carer has made contact
- Special difficulties, including behaviours of concern
- Whether early intervention or education and training may significantly reduce the risk of serious deterioration or future crisis
- Whether the carer has physical or mental exhaustion or illness (using a screening tool)
- Whether the carer’s health is deteriorating

Active listening skills may include:
- Appropriate brief encouragers which help the carer relate their story and concerns
- Balancing the frequency of questions
- Hearing the carer’s concerns
- Paraphrasing (reflection of content)
- Recognising when higher levels of care may be indicated
- Reflection of feelings, thoughts, behaviours and experience (content)
- Summarising and closure
• Understanding the carer’s context
• Using open and closed questions to expand or clarify understanding

Empowering relationship may include:
• Active listening
• Avoid use of labelling
• Exploring options and potential consequences with the carer
• Facilitating informed carer choices
• Focus the carer on identifying immediate needs and concerns
• Identify achievable tasks to be addressed after the assessment
• Identifying and affirming carer’s strengths and opportunities
• Reframing, summary and closure

Strategies for dealing with strong carer emotions and stressful situations include:
• Awareness of personal vulnerabilities which may be triggered during an assessment process
• Containment skills
• Debriefing
• Externalise carer emotions
• Managing tone, pitch and pace of voice
• Seeking advice from supervisor

Range of effective self-care strategies may include:
• Constructive feedback about assessment skills
• Debriefing and defusing
• Knowing when and how to ask for back-up/support
• Recognition and processing of assessment-related experiences
• Reflection on practice
• Self monitoring

Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively perform task skills; task management skills; contingency management skills and job/role environment skills as outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit.

These include knowledge of:

• Availability of, and eligibility requirements for, current government funded programs

• Awareness of unique issues for carers with special needs including those from Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander and culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds

• Basic understanding of relevant guidelines and legislation

• Current information on range of support services/networks available to carers and care recipients

• OHS policies and procedures related to the provision of respite care

• Procedures for facilitating referrals and emergency interventions

• Procedures for, and limitations to, negotiating services from other service providers for carers

• Specific knowledge of the local community

• Specific issues for carers when caring for care recipients with complex needs including:

• chronic health problems
• health problems relevant to specific disabilities
• health problems with older people including dementia and dementia with challenging behaviours
• mental health problems and understanding of impact of episodic conditions
• Understanding of the role and responsibilities of self and other workers within the organisation
• Understanding the cognitive or emotional barriers and dynamics in seeking help
• Understanding other barriers to provision of services
• Understanding the difference between service directed care and person centered or self managed care
• Understanding of factors that impact on the caring role and how they may contribute to reluctant behaviours including:
  • background and setting of the care giving e.g. cultural aspects, age of carer
  • family dynamics
  • mediators e.g. carer coping strategies, social support, quality of relationship between carer and care recipient, quality of carer’s other relationships, access to respite services, other carer resources

Evidence Guide
EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit could be assessed either on the job or off the job through an appropriate workplace simulation for a range of age groups and a range of conditions over a number of assessment situations
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Access and equity considerations:
- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:
- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment of this unit include access to a range of opportunities defined in the Range Statement, including:
  - a childcare workplace
  - children's services, resources and equipment
  - the local environment

Method of assessment:
- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit may be assessed on the job or through simulation and should reflect the diversity of settings within which leisure and health work takes place
- Consistency of performance should be demonstrated over the required range of workplace situations and should occur on more than one occasion and be assessed by a qualified leisure and health professional

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities
Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged.
- This unit is most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated work environment and under the normal range of environment conditions prior to assessment in the workplace.
- Where, for reasons of safety, access to equipment and resources and space, assessment takes place away from the workplace, simulations should be used to represent workplace conditions as closely as possible.
- Competency should be assessed in the context of:
  - working with individuals and groups
  - target groups relevant to the worker and the activity or program
  - consulting with relevant stakeholders
  - for at least two of the types of activities and programs identified in the Range Statement
  - for at least two of the purposes identified in the Range Statement
  - individually or as part of a team

Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios.
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes.
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons.

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Relevant information may include:

- Interviews with clients
- Social history
- Care plans/case notes
- Research past lifestyles and interests
- Holistic assessment of client

Programs include:

- Activities designed to address needs of target groups or individuals

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Create an environment which fosters participation
- Implement strategies to meet the requirements of clients with complex needs
- Outline a personal philosophy about the use of leisure and health programs to promote well being, social justice and equity of clients with complex needs
- Assess up-to-date information and a range of sources of information as resources for program development

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:

- Demonstrate application of skills in:
  - observation
  - communication skills
  - consultative process
  - identification of local community resources
  - work health and safety (WHS) principles and practices
  - sensitivity and empathy when working with clients with special needs

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit may be assessed on the job or through simulation and should reflect the diversity of settings within which leisure and health work takes place
- Consistency of performance should be demonstrated over the required range of workplace situations and should occur on more than one occasion and be assessed by a qualified leisure and health professional
Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- This unit is most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated work environment and under the normal range of environment conditions prior to assessment in the workplace
- Where, for reasons of safety, access to equipment and resources and space, assessment takes place away from the workplace, simulations should be used to represent workplace conditions as closely as possible

Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Client with complex needs may include:

- Clients requiring multiple service types
- Clients with a range of needs that cannot be met by one service type, including:
  - physical disabilities
  - intellectual disabilities
  - mental health issues
  - aboriginal and torres strait islander
  - youth
  - mature aged
  - ethnic/cultural
  - HIV/aids
  - sensory disability
  - disadvantaged groups, such as homeless
- Clients who have family and carer needs that require additional service inputs

Stakeholders and significant others may include:

- Care givers
- Relatives/friends/partners
- Medical and nursing personnel/specialists
- Health practitioners
- Support networks
- Multi-disciplinary team members
- Management

Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- Theories of human development both biological and psychological
- A range of assessment processes and techniques
- Professional documentation requirements
- The role of leisure and health programs
- Models of professional practice including:
  - social model
  - leisure flow
  - leisure ability
  - integrated community recreation model
  - community
  - person-centred
Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Gather and record detailed information about client/s
- Facilitate the design of programs
- Coordinate the implementation of Implement programs according to plan or instruction
- Monitor and evaluate program
- Promote leisure and health programs
- Plan required resources
- Follow a leisure and health plan

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:

- Demonstrate application of skills in:
  - respect for different family expectations
  - observation
  - communication skills
  - consultative process
  - identification of local community resources
  - OHS principles and practices
  - developing and designing assessment tools
  - managing leisure events
  - adaptation/modification of leisure activity resources
  - identifying characteristics of a range of approaches to leisure and recreation in relation to values and concepts
Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit may be assessed either on the job or through simulation and should reflect the diversity of settings within which leisure and health work takes place
- This unit will be most appropriately assessed in the workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions
- Where, for reasons of safety, space, or access to equipment and resources, assessment takes place away from the workplace, the assessment environment should represent workplace conditions as closely as possible

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios.

- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes.

- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons.

Related units:

This unit must be assessed after or in conjunction with related units:

- CHCRH402B Undertake leisure and health programming
- CHCRH404B Plan, implement and monitor leisure and health programs

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Assessment may include:

- Interview with client, careworkers, parents/family
- Review of care/plan documentation

These include the ability to:

- Demonstrate application of skills in:
  - organisation to coordinate resources necessary to conduct a program
  - communication to provide instructions participation

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- Competency must be demonstrated in a real work environment
- Competence in this unit must be assessed over a period of time in order to ensure consistency of performance over contexts applicable to the work environment
- Consistency in performance should consider the work environment, worker's role and responsibilities in the workplace

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace setting under the normal range of workplace conditions
- Consistency in performance should consider the range of clients and situations encountered in the workplace
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Access and equity considerations:
- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:
- This unit may be assessed through a range of assessment activities that include workplace tasks
- Assessment should reflect the diversity of settings within which leisure and health work takes place and the range of client groups with whom leisure and health professionals work
- Resources required include access to relevant workplace or simulated setting

Method of assessment:
- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on ‘What if?’ scenarios
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Facilitate socially acceptable behaviour may refer to:

- Benefits of using a team approach for clients and staff
- Contributing to developing a unified approach within a supportive culture
- Identifying client needs and issues in relation to facilitating acceptable behaviour
- Identifying triggers for socially unacceptable behaviour
- Preventing and managing anger and conflict
- Developing a set of leisure and health parameters related to individual client's needs
- Duty of care issues
- Contributing to setting up a management plan from a leisure and health program perspective
- Contributing to evaluation of behaviour management strategies
- Identifying different approaches to behaviour management

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- Assessment may be conducted on one or more occasions, but should include the normal range of workplace activities

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities
Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged.
- Resources required for assessment include:
  - access to appropriate workplace where assessment can take place or simulation of realistic workplace setting for assessment.

Method of assessment

- Assessment may include observation, questioning and evidence gathered from the workplace environment.

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Frameworks and legislation relevant to working within the Australian context include:

- Access and equity
- Privacy and confidentiality
- Work health and safety (WHS)
- Anti-discrimination laws
- Mandatory reporting
- Gender equality
- Respectful behaviour in the workplace

Australian cultural protocols may include:

- Respectful behaviour to everyone, irrespective of their gender, age, ethnicity, religion or position within the organisation
- Appropriate dress standards for the workplace
- Types of acceptable interaction in the workplace
- Punctuality
Australian management processes and workplace behaviours may include:

- Having women, including younger women, in a supervisory role
- Completing time sheets
- Completing record forms
- Attending meetings and training
- Dealing with conflict or grievances in the workplace
- Effective advocacy

Vicarious traumatisation:

- Occurs when there is transference of the client's trauma to the worker
- Is more likely when the worker shares some of the experiences of the client
- Results in the worker experiencing (or re-experiencing) signs of traumatisation

Support services may include:

- Counselling services
- Torture and trauma services
- Financial planners
- Translators and interpreters
- English teachers
- Accommodation workers
- Specialist workers within own organisation

- Orientation training
- Peer group supervision
- Feedback on practice (e.g. call sheets)
- Individual supervision
- Ongoing training
- Seeking training outside the agency
- Seeking external professional development opportunities
- Debriefing

Feedback processes would be expected to include:

- Call sheets
- Group supervision
- Individual supervision
Appropriate language and counselling approaches would feature:

- Inclusiveness
- Respect for cultural, linguistic and individual differences
- Non-judgemental responses
- Recognition of client diversity
- Respectful language

Manner will include:

- Tone of voice and use of minimal encouragers

Management of own values includes:

- Developing self-awareness through participation in feedback activities
- Responses to supervised reflection
- Consciously putting own values to one side
- Observing through reflection the impact of verbal and non-verbal responses in others and in self

Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.
Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- Principles and practice of crisis intervention, including relevant ethical guidelines and policy requirements which affect duty of care
- Applications of crisis intervention principles and practices to the telephone counselling medium
- Principles and practices of suicide intervention - particularly the tasks of suicide risk assessment and risk management associated with suicide first aid
- Procedures for facilitating referrals and emergency interventions
- The specific requirements of crisis intervention and how they relate to and complement general telephone counselling
- Knowledge of personal attitudes, beliefs and values and how these might facilitate or impede effective crisis interventions
- General awareness of how mental health issues may impact on crisis intervention
- Principles of self care and support-seeking relevant to involvement in crisis intervention work

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Demonstrate appropriate use of self and accessing appropriate support in providing counselling service in times of crisis so duty of care and safety of client is assured

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:

- Demonstrate application of skills in:
  - competent counselling skills
  - effective general crisis intervention skills
  - suicide risk recognition, assessment, and management (suicide first aid)
  - consulting appropriately
  - facilitating links with higher levels of care
  - self-monitoring and self care
  - seeking and integrating supervisory support
- Use relevant workplace technology safely and effectively in line with work health and safety (WHS) guidelines
- Maintain documentation as required, including effective use of relevant information technology in line with WHS guidelines
Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- Assessment must occur in the workplace or similar environment conducive to professional work

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities
CHCTC403B Provide telephone counselling in crisis situations

Date this document was generated: 31 March 2017

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged.
- Resources for training in and assessment of crisis intervention competencies needs to be available to:
  - provide initial and ongoing training
  - ensure baseline knowledge and skills following basic training
  - observe implementation of these competencies in actual counselling situations and simulated role plays
  - facilitate learning through reflection on practice and integration of supervisory feedback

Method of assessment:

- Consistent performance and development would be expected to be demonstrated involving a combination of oral and written media while also featuring simulated and actual practice.
- Examples might include:
  - group exercises
  - written (e.g. journal) and verbal responses to questioning
  - simulated exercises
  - observation of practice on telephone shifts
  - response to and integration of supervisory feedback

Co-requisites

This unit must be assessed in conjunction with related units:

- CHCTC301C Deliver a service consistent with the organisation’s mission and values
- CHCTC302B Provide client-centred telephone counselling

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional
A crisis is any situation where:

- Internal distress over impactful events, painful transitions or problems in living has escalated to the point where it is disabling a person's ability to cope and function
- The person in crisis may be at risk of self-injury or suicide and may sometimes pose a threat to others
- The focus of crisis intervention is constructive management of the immediate situation
- Its primary goals are to promote safety, reduce distress and restore functioning rather than deal with underlying issues or explore long-term strategies for addressing them
- Crisis intervention always involves vigilance about potential threats to life and safety and development of a safety plan to address any imminent danger assessed to be present
- Crisis intervention complements other strategies adopted by the caregiver or counsellor and focuses on stabilising the current situation and providing a bridge to further help
- Once the immediate crisis has been addressed, other strategies designed to provide counselling, treatment care or support can be commenced or resumed

General context of work:

- Counsellors have received training in the principles and practice of crisis intervention, including risk management and suicide first aid
- Work is performed in a setting where ongoing supervision is provided within a team environment
- Supervision on 24-hour call may be accessed during a call should counsellors require it and must be accessed in certain mandated situations such as a potential suicide in progress
- Work will be assessed in accordance with professional standards of care commensurate with the telephone counselling role
- Enterprise requirements and WHS legislation shall be observed
Working independently must include:

- Counsellors must demonstrate the capacity to work competently and independently according to the principles of their training and within the general context of the supervisory relationship noted above
- They shall be accountable for their own professional conduct and practice including:
  - carrying out assigned tasks
  - working effectively under the pressure of crisis situations
  - maintaining the quality of services to the organisations callers

Internal referral systems may include:

- Training
- Organisations referral database and folders
- Supervisory and on call network
- Support personnel
- Literature - including books and brochures

Unit Descriptor

Descriptor

This unit describes foundation knowledge and skills required to provide suicide intervention in the context of a telephone counselling service to persons potentially at risk, those concerned about someone at risk and people dealing with the aftermath of a suicide.

The focus is on competencies that enable the telephone counsellor to identify and manage immediate suicide risk in the context of a supportive counselling relationship that seeks to work collaboratively with the caller to achieve safe outcomes.

Safe outcomes in this context include a clear safety plan for addressing any immediate danger to the person at risk, or others, mobilising access to emergency medical help when needed and facilitating links with resources able to offer further assessment and care.

The needs and safety of the caller are the primary focus in any suicide call.

However, interventions also need to consider and address the safety of those offering help and potential risk to others in the situation.
Application of the Unit

Application

The unit addresses opportunities for suicide intervention available to the telephone counsellor that recognise the potential and limits of the telephone medium and feature its role in linking callers with further resources.

Telephone counsellors will be persons with training appropriate to their role who apply learning as employees or community volunteers.

Competence in basic helping skills and crisis intervention is foundational preparation for this unit.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements define the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.

The Performance Criteria specify the level of performance required to demonstrate achievement of the Element. Terms in italics are elaborated in the Range Statement.

<thead>
<tr>
<th>ELEMENT</th>
<th>PERFORMANCE CRITERIA</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| 1. Identify and assess a caller's current suicide risk | 1.1 Recognise and respond to signs (such as statements, reactions, thoughts, feelings or disclosed behaviours) indicating that a caller may be considering or affected by suicide
1.2 Attend to any hunches while listening to a caller, perhaps from indirect communications that suggest they may be considering suicide
1.3 Ask directly about suicide whenever there are grounds for concern
If suicide thoughts are present:
1.4 Seek sufficient understanding of why the person is considering suicide, and what links them to life, to guide and facilitate the intervention
1.5 Assess current suicide risk guided by risk assessment considerations outlined in the Range Statement and by whether there is an imminent threat to the caller's safety or the safety of others |
ELEMENT

2. Apply telephone counselling skills to reduce immediate risk of suicide and increase caller safety

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

2.1 Build a collaborative, empathic working relationship with the caller that acknowledges how thoughts of suicide and painful feelings behind them may affect their safety

2.2 Listen to what lies behind thoughts of suicide, while affirming and strengthening the links to safety and living implicit in search for help that prompted the call

2.3 Work with the caller to develop and implement a safety plan that builds on an assessment of suicide risk and reduces the immediate danger of self-harm or suicide

2.4 Facilitate access to emergency medical help in any call where it is assessed to be needed to address an imminent threat to the caller's life or safety (such as a potential suicide in progress)

2.5 Remain mindful of and address, as much as possible over the phone, potential risk to the safety of others involved in the situation

2.6 Be aware of situations where police may need to be involved to address the safety of the caller or others and act accordingly

2.7 Seek and act on feedback from the workplace supervisor and other internal performance review processes to ensure counselling is lawful, complies with good suicide intervention practice, and organisation policies consistent with that practice, ethical processes and duty of care obligations

2.8 Observe work health and safety (WHS) obligations in relation to managing oneself
ELEMENT

3. Facilitate and strengthen the caller's links to further care

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

Having worked with the caller to take any steps needed to address immediate safety:

3.1 Acknowledge how the decision to seek and respond to help in this call has provided foundations for further care

3.2 Provide information to enhance the caller's awareness of the nature and range of available resources and how to access them

3.3 Explore the caller's openness toward available help and where possible address barriers to further help-seeking

3.4 Develop with the caller an agreed plan and first steps for accessing and utilising informal supports and professional help that deal with their suicidality and factors associated with it

3.5 Encourage further use of telephone counselling support and other services when needed
ELEMENT

4. Provide suicide intervention support that resources the caller beyond the immediate suicidal crisis

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

When or if it is assessed that there is no imminent risk that needs to be immediately addressed:

4.1 Identify those aspects of the caller's distress and concern related to their suicidal thoughts that most need attention now

4.2 Help the caller identify coping strategies (both internal and external) which prepare them to manage any recurrence of suicidal thoughts in future, highlighting steps they could take to increase their safety and get help

4.3 Determine whether underlying mental health concerns or personal circumstances (such as depression, substance misuse, significant losses or trauma) are present and require further help

4.4 Provide counselling support to any caller concerned about someone at risk of suicide by exploring and determining the basis of concern and the potential role they may play in increasing that person's safety

4.5 Provide counselling support to any caller impacted by someone else's suicide to ensure the nature of their concerns is explored, threat of risk to caller is evaluated and access to further help is facilitated

4.6 Comply with laws, ethical guidelines and policy requirements that affect duty of care

4.7 Document the suicide risk assessment and safety plan, including any follow up steps taken and the rationale behind them

Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include:
• Awareness that suicide risk may potentially feature in any call
• Knowledge of common indicators or signs of potential suicide risk
• Principles and practices of suicide intervention - particularly the tasks of suicide risk assessment, risk management, development of safety plans and facilitation of access to ongoing support
• Principles and practice of crisis intervention, including relevant laws, ethical guidelines and policy requirements which affect duty of care
• Applications of crisis intervention principles and practices to the telephone counselling medium
• Procedures for facilitating referrals and emergency interventions
• Awareness of personal attitudes, beliefs and values and how these might facilitate or impede suicide intervention
• Examination of common notions about suicide in the light of available evidence
• General awareness of how mental health issues may impact on crisis intervention and suicidal crises
• Principles of self care and support-seeking relevant to involvement in crisis and suicide intervention work

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

• Demonstrate the capacity to work competently and independently according to the principles of their training and within the general context of the supervisory relationship
• Demonstrate accountability for own professional conduct and practice including:
  • carrying out assigned tasks
  • working effectively under the pressure of crisis situations
  • maintaining the quality of services to the organisation's callers
  • strengthening links to life-sustaining options and supports for calls featuring suicide
  • demonstrating a commitment to attend to the pain of persons considering or affected by suicide and to work toward life-affirming outcomes
• Identify calls which may feature suicide risk or bereavement

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role

These include the ability to:

• Demonstrate competent telephone counselling skills in:
  • engaging callers in an empathic, respectful, collaborative helping relationship
  • implementing effective crisis intervention principles and practices
  • providing competent suicide intervention over the phone including:
    • recognition
    • assessment
- safe management of immediate suicide risk
- facilitating links to further emergency help or ongoing care as needed
- facilitating links with higher levels of care including emergency services where necessary
- practising self-monitoring and self care
- seeking and integrating supervisory support
- maintaining documentation as required, including effective use of relevant information technology in line with WHS guidelines

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- Work will be assessed in accordance with professional standards of care commensurate with the telephone counselling role
- Assessment must occur in the workplace or similar environment conducive to professional work over a number of occasions

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities
Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged.
- Resources for training in and assessment of crisis intervention competencies needs to be available to:
  - provide initial and ongoing training
  - ensure baseline knowledge and skills following basic training
  - observe implementation of these competencies in actual counselling situations and simulated role plays
  - facilitate learning through reflection on practice and integration of supervisory feedback

Method of assessment:

- Consistent performance and development would be expected to be demonstrated involving a combination of oral and written media while also featuring simulated and actual practice.
- Examples might include:
  - group exercises
  - written (e.g. journal) and verbal responses to questioning
  - simulated exercises
  - observation of practice on telephone shifts
  - response to and integration of supervisory feedback

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.
General context of the suicide intervention work:

- Telephone counselling will normally be provided in the context of a 24-hour telephone counselling service within the framework of the organisation’s guidelines and competency requirements that reflect good suicide intervention practice
- Telephone counsellors will have received training in generalist telephone counselling skills and in the principles and practices of crisis intervention
- Supervision on 24-hour call may be accessed during a call when needed and must be consulted in certain mandated situations such as a potential suicide in progress
- Other professional community resources such as Poisons Information Service, Ambulance or Police should be accessed as needed
- Intervention builds on the caller's desire for help and links to living, evident in making the call, despite the ambivalence about living and dying that is often present

Identify and assess a caller's current suicide risk involves:

- Vigilance about the potential for suicide risk in any caller
- Recognising the wide range of warning signs that invite help and prompt enquiry about suicide
- Asking directly about thoughts of suicide where there are any grounds for concern
Risk assessment involves:

- Recognising that any suicide thoughts or acts of deliberate self-harm signal significant distress, pose potential risk of injury or death and should be taken seriously.
- Assessing factors that indicate suicide risk which include, but are not limited to, the following:
  - Concern is aroused by the presence of suicide thoughts and things often associated with these thoughts, such as:
    - A desire to escape pain that feels unbearable
    - A sense of hopelessness
    - Current difficulty seeing alternatives to suicide
    - Feeling alone
  - Immediate risk is increased when a person has begun acting on their suicide thoughts or is preparing to do so and/or has expressed suicidal intent - for example:
    - Possible suicide in progress
    - Presence of a suicide plan
    - Available means
  - Risk can be exacerbated if the caller is under the influence of excessive alcohol or other drug use
  - Pertinent background factors, particularly prior suicidal behaviour and the presence of significant mental health problems should be carefully assessed
- A wide variety of contextual or personal considerations help inform assessments and may include such things as:
  - Significant loss
  - Trauma
  - The impact of another person's suicide
  - A pattern of extreme agitation, anger/violent behaviour
- Identifying sources of safety and support within the caller (such as coping skills and beliefs) and around them (such as friends, family and community services)
- Connections to life and living are usually present alongside thoughts of suicide and can provide foundations to build upon in increasing caller safety Safety outcomes include:

- Recognising that:
  - vigilance about safety with all suicide related thoughts or behaviours is essential, even though the caller may have been influenced by a wide range of motives in considering or engaging in deliberate self-harm
  - risks to life and safety can often be greater than callers recognise or intend, so safe outcomes are a primary focus, regardless of stated caller intentions, especially given the limited contextual information available in a telephone counselling intervention

- Implementing suicide safety plans that should be tailored to the caller, but typically include:
  - affirm and build on the desire for help and safety implicit in the call
  - work with the caller to identify and act on clear cooperative steps for reducing immediate risk of suicide or any self-harm during and immediately after the call
  - focus specifically on factors, plans and behaviours, including unsafe use of alcohol and other drugs, that endanger the caller at this particular time and seek to engage them cooperatively in steps that safely manage and reduce that risk
  - enable prompt, timely action that increases support, mobilises access to emergency medical help when needed and reduces the likelihood that the person will act on their suicidal thoughts
  - seek to create a calm environment that promotes safety for the person at risk and others involved in the situation
  - access support and follow up advice from the organisation’s supervisor/coordinator that reflects lawful good suicide intervention practice and follows crisis management and emergency procedures
The range of available resources include:

- Informal support
- Professional help
- Future use of telephone counselling service

A productive connection between the caller and counsellor that accompanies risk assessment and safety management can strengthen hope and motivation to commit to the safety plan and engage further with helping resources.

Appropriate counselling support to people with thoughts of suicide will include:

- The following general practices as a context for risk assessment and safety management:
  - developing an empathic, collaborative counselling relationship
  - recognising that the presence of any thoughts of suicide elevate risk and require plans to increase safety
  - understanding how these thoughts are linked to particular events or experiences - particularly involving loss, a suicide death or trauma - and the person's reaction to them
  - hearing feelings often found behind these thoughts such as pain, and the desire to escape it
  - listening for perceptions such as the caller's current difficulties in seeing alternatives to suicide
  - conducting careful assessment and management of suicide risk
  - developing and implementing a safety plan based on this assessment that includes safely reducing access to suicide methods and generally minimising the harm of any suicidal acts already in progress (e.g. mobilising an emergency medical response)
  - addressing problems in living and strengthening supportive life links and relationships once immediate safety has been addressed
Appropriate counselling support to people concerned about someone at risk include:

- The above set of actions and deciding on:
  - the role the caller might have in reaching out to the person at risk and
  - who else may need to be involved

Appropriate counselling support to people impacted by someone’s suicide includes:

- Determining the nature of the caller’s relationship to the person who died by suicide
- Exploring and responding to the pain and impact of the loss in feelings such as sadness, anger, guilt or remorse
- Asking the caller what aspects of the death or the loss they most need to focus on now and attend to these concerns
- Assessing for suicide risk in the caller
- Exploring internal coping strengths and external supports likely to provide support

Internal referral systems may include:

- Training
- The organisation’s referral database and files
- Supervisory and on call network
- Support personnel
- Protocols for supervisory consultation during a suicide call and accessing emergency services when necessary
- Literature - including books and brochures

Ethical guidelines and policy requirements that affect duty of care include:

- Awareness of appropriate standards of care in suicide intervention
- Observance of any relevant laws
- Compliance with the organisation’s ethical code, policies and procedures related to delivery of the telephone counselling service
- Policies about disclosure and confidentiality, including any limits that may apply in suicide intervention
- Responsiveness to caller requests
- Meeting the organisation’s training standards
- Seeking assistance and providing referrals
- Participation in supervisory activities and professional development and training

Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- Understanding of own work role and responsibilities
- Volunteering as a choice and as being based on reciprocity
- How personal values and attitudes may impact on work as a volunteer
- Job role and accountability
- The need for relevant background checks to be undertaken by the organisation
- The need for undertaking relevant/mandatory training
- Organisation expectations of volunteers
- Valuing self as a volunteer
- Personal motivations for volunteering
- Personal expectations to be gained from volunteer work
- Understanding of the volunteering sector including the nature of volunteer work and the importance of volunteer work to the community
- Understanding of organisation information including: various roles, rights and responsibilities and organisation processes policies and procedures
- Understanding of relevant legislative and procedural requirements, including requirements relating to mandatory notification where relevant

Essential skills:
The candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role

These include the ability to:

- Follow organisation policies and protocols
- Liaise and report appropriately to supervisor
- Adhere to own work role and responsibilities
- Comply with a range of relevant legislative and procedural requirements
- Demonstrate the application of interpersonal relationships of organisation social, ethical and operational standards and use of appropriate interpersonal styles and techniques
- Communicate in a clear and concise manner in both written and verbal modes
- Literacy skills to identify work requirements and process basic, relevant workplace documentation

- Request advice, assistance, clarification and/or further information
- Seek and receive feedback
- Adhere to policies and procedures
- Work as part of a team with paid and unpaid staff
- Use information technology appropriate to specific tasks
- Follow instructions/directions
- Maintain confidentiality
- Relate to people in a way which appropriately acknowledges diversity
- Organise and manage one's own time
- Demonstrate safe and effective use of workplace technology in line with work health and safety (WHS) guidelines

Evidence Guide
The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills.
- It is recommended that assessment or information for assessment will be conducted or gathered over a period of time and cover the normal range of workplace situations and settings.
- This unit will be most appropriately assessed in the workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions.
- Where, for reasons of safety, space, or access to equipment and resources, assessment takes place away from the workplace, the assessment environment should represent workplace conditions as closely as possible.

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work.
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment.
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people.
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities.

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged.
- Resources required for assessment include access to:
  - appropriate workplace where assessment can take place
  - relevant organisation policy, protocols and procedures
  - equipment and resources normally used in the workplace
Method of assessment may include:

- Observation in the workplace
- Written assignments/projects
- Case study and scenario analysis
- Questioning
- Role play simulation

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Principles of volunteering may include:

- Philosophy of volunteering
- Definition and principles of volunteering
- Awareness of:
  - Volunteer Australia's national standards for involving volunteers in not-for-profit organisations
  - National Agenda on Volunteering: Beyond the International Year of Volunteers
  - Australasian Association for Volunteer Administrators (AAVA)
- Volunteer infrastructure includes peak bodies at state/national level, resource and referral centres, websites and National Volunteer Skills Centre Diversity may relate to differences and may include:

- Languages
- Educational background
- Experience
- Skills and knowledge
- Gender
- Race or cultural origin
- Physical capability
- Age
- Socioeconomic status
- Religious affiliation
- Marital status
- Sexual orientation
- Personality styles
- Learning styles
- Working styles
- Motivations for volunteering
- Expectations of volunteer work
- People new to volunteering

Organisation may include:

- Mission and vision statement
- Strategic and business plans (particularly relating to the volunteer program)
- Structure of the organisation including lines of communication, roles, responsibilities and authority
- Aim of volunteer involvement in the organisation
- Rights and corresponding responsibilities of the organisation to volunteers
- Rights and corresponding responsibilities of volunteers to the organisation
- Expectations of volunteers by the organisation
- Expectations of the organisation/volunteer work by volunteers
Legislation/policies and procedures may relate to:

- Policies and procedures including:
  - WHS
  - equal opportunity, harassment and discrimination
  - privacy - personal, organisation and client
  - confidentiality - personal, organisation and client
  - insurance - coverage
  - risk management
  - out of pocket expenses/reimbursement of expenses
  - grievance and disciplinary
  - relationship/difference between paid and unpaid staff
  - use of motor vehicles
  - duty of care
  - orientation, education and training for volunteers
  - employment and recruitment procedures of volunteers
  - minimum/maximum time commitments of volunteer staff
  - pre-employment reference audits/checks (i.e. police etc)
  - volunteer involvement, appropriate roles and position descriptions
  - orientation program for volunteers
  - recognition of volunteer contribution to the organisation
  - support structures/mechanisms for volunteers

Volunteers may include:

- Unpaid workers who are in paid employment elsewhere - part-time or full-time
- Unpaid workers who are not in paid employment

Appropriate persons volunteers may relate to:

- Supervisors
- Paid and unpaid colleagues
- Trainer
- Clients/customers
- General public

Unit Descriptor

Descriptor

This unit specifies the workplace performance required by an individual involved in following work health and safety procedures for direct care work.

The unit focuses on maintaining safety of the worker, the people being supported and other community members

Application

On completion of this unit, the worker in these particular sectors will be able to accurately identify the major work health and safety hazards, manual handling, together with other hazards that may include dealing with behaviours of concern, stress, etc.

The worker will also be able to assess related risk as well as follow instructions and procedures with minimal supervision and support.

The worker will also be capable of participating and contributing to work health and safety (WHS) management issues.

Where the worker is undertaking tasks delegated by a health professional specific instruction or policy should be provided in relation to infection control or the worker should have the skills and knowledge addressed in HLTIN301C Comply with infection control policies and procedures in health work.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements define the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.

The Performance Criteria specify the level of performance required to demonstrate achievement of the Element. Terms in italics are elaborated in the Range Statement.
Elements and Performance Criteria

11) Identify sources of risk to personal safety, assess the level of risk and follow risk minimisation procedures

1.1 Identify environments, situations and client-related risk factors

1.2 Apply practical strategies and organisation procedures to minimise risk

1.3 Identify any behaviours of concern in the work context and follow organisation procedures to minimise risk

1.4 Identify risks associated with driving and travelling with and without clients and follow organisation procedures to minimise risk

1.5 Follow organisation policies and procedures when working in a new or unstable environment

12) Identify manual handling hazards, assess related risk and follow risk minimisation procedures

2.1 Identify manual handling hazards

2.2 Assess the risk using the tools described in the Manual Handling Code of practice (or equivalent) for own State/territory

2.3 Apply recognised control measures for manual handling risk, including eliminating manual handling wherever possible

2.4 Follow established manual handling procedures and work instructions for minimising manual handling activity/risk

13) Identify sources of infection and apply industry accepted practice to minimise risk of infection to themselves, clients and others

3.1 Identify risks of infection

3.2 Apply standard precautions to prevent the spread of infection as part of own work routine

3.3 Recognise situations when additional infection control procedures are required

3.4 Apply additional precautions when standard precautions alone may not be sufficient to prevent transmission of infection

3.5 Identify other sources of infection for workers

14) Identify other hazards and assess risk

4.1 Identify other hazards in the work area during the performance of duties

4.2 Assess level of risk

4.3 Conduct environmental assessment to identify potential sources of risk to personal safety

15) Follow procedures and

5.1 Report hazards in the work area to designated strategies for risk control personnel according to workplace procedures

5.2 Follow accurately workplace procedures and work instructions for controlling risks with minimal supervision

5.3 Whenever necessary, within the scope of responsibilities and competencies, follow workplace procedures for dealing with incidents, fire and/or hazardous events

16) Contribute to WHS in the workplace

6.1 Describe employee rights and employer obligations regarding consultation on WHS matters

6.2 Raise task and/or job specific WHS issues with appropriate people in accordance with workplace procedures and relevant WHS legislative requirements

6.3 Contribute to participative arrangements for WHS management in the workplace within organisation procedures and the scope of responsibilities and competencies

6.4 Provide feedback to supervisor on hazards in work area in line with organisation WHS policies and procedures

6.5 Provide support in implementing procedures to control risks in accordance with organisation procedures
Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role. These include:

- Awareness of all relevant workplace procedures including:
  - hazard management policies and procedures
  - care plans and work instruction
  - procedures for the use of manual handling and mobility equipment, personal protective equipment, duress and other alarms
  - emergency, fire and incident procedures
  - Awareness of the role of Safe Work Australia and the National Work Health and Safety model
  - Current state/territory WHS legislation and how it impacts on workplace regulations, codes of practice and industry standards
  - Basic concepts of likelihood of occurrence and consequences (severity) of injury
  - Basic home fire safety
  - Basic understanding of sources of infection and means to minimise transfer of infectious diseases
  - Awareness that WHS issues are regulated
  - Duty of care within the respective scope of responsibilities
  - Knowledge and understanding of the workplace WHS system sufficient to recognise situations affecting WHS and to take the appropriate action to rectify the situation, including specific awareness of manual handling hazards as well as general awareness of other hazards that occur in the sector
  - Knowledge of the relationship between WHS and sustainability in the workplace, including how the maintenance of health and safety contributes to environmental, economic, workforce and social sustainability
  - Meaning of WHS signs and symbols relevant to the work area
  - Significance of service provision setting
  - Relevant state/territory Manual Handling Code of practice
  - Relevant state/territory WHS authority or department

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Apply and describe procedures for:
This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

- recognising hazards, particularly with regard to manual handling, in the workplace
- reporting hazards identified using documented organisation processes
- Identify manual handling risk and modify work practices appropriately
- Identify risks to personal safety and apply accepted practices to minimise risk
- Demonstrate standard infection control procedures, including use of approved hand washing techniques
- Work safely, and follow the enterprise’s WHS policies and procedures
- Identify, report and manage workplace hazards (within the limits of worker control)
- Undertake appropriate observation and reporting

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role

These include the ability to:

- Access and use manual handling equipment commonly available in the industry sector to reduce risks associated with manual handling
- Communicate WHS issues to designated personnel
- Demonstrate correct use of equipment according to organisation and manufacturer instructions
- Exercise duty of care within the respective scope of responsibilities in accordance with current WHS legislation
- Identify client-related risk factors and modify approach and choice of equipment to minimise risk
- Implement work processes and practices to prevent or minimise risk
- Recognise potential situations that require action and then implement appropriate corrective action as much as possible to eliminate risk
- Refer to and apply safe work practices
- Solve problems
- Take into account and use opportunities to address waste minimisation, environmental responsibility and sustainable practice issues
- Use body biomechanics, as a supplement to other manual handling risk reduction strategies, to reduce the risk in routine tasks
- Use reading and writing skills – appropriate literacy competence – as required to fulfil job roles in a safe manner and as specified by organisation/service and to access information in care plans, read labels and workplace procedures:
  - literacy support in the workplace may range from having access to support or assistance from expert/mentor/supervisor, to having no communication supports available
  - literacy may be required in English, a community language, or Braille, etc, depending on the language used in pamphlets or workplace manual
- Apply communication skills – language competence – as required to fulfil job roles in a safe manner and as specified by the organisation/service:
This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

- assessors should look for skills in asking questions, providing clear information including to client and co-worker, listening to and understanding workplace instructions, and clarifying workplace instructions when necessary
- service/organisation may require competence in English or community language, depending on client group

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects of assessment:

- This unit is most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions.
- Simulation should be based on the actual work setting and must include demonstration of practical skills such as use of appropriate equipment.
- Simulations may also include the use of case studies, scenarios and role play.
- In addition to the practical skills, this unit of competency requires a body of knowledge which may be assessed through questioning and the use of 'what if' scenarios both on site (during demonstration of normal procedures and walk throughs of abnormal ones) and off site (e.g. in transit, home visits, telephone counselling, etc).
- Assessment will occur over a range of situations that may include disruptions to normal smooth operations.
- Assessment may need to be conducted over an extended period of time, or on more than one occasion to cover the relevant range of situations.
- Within the limits of worker, client and public safety and the requirements of the competency, consideration must be given to workers whose literacy skills are limited and/or who are physically and/or intellectually disabled.
The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- Assessment will require access to:
  - Client handling and mobility devices commonly used in the industry sector including patient hoists, standing lifter, wheelchair, slide sheets and other client assistive devices and mobility aids
  - Recognised risk control strategies
  - Appropriate equipment
  - Workplace health and safety policies and procedures
  - Other related policies and procedures
  - Duties statements and/or job descriptions
  - Sample care plans
The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Method of assessment:

- Assessment may be best conducted using a range of practical exercises and scenarios/case studies/what ifs as well as through questions to check the reasoning behind the observable actions
- These assessment activities should include a range of routine problems that may have been generated from the past incident history and hazardous incidents in similar work contexts within the sector and/or industry
- A diversity of assessment tasks is essential for holistic assessment

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Definition of hazard:

- A ‘hazard’ is something with the potential to cause injury or disease to people, damage to property or disruption to productivity
- Hazards arise, for example, from workplace environment; use of plant for example and equipment; poor work design; inappropriate systems, procedures and/or human behaviour

Legislative requirements for manual handling and WHS consultation/participation vary in different states and will include:

- National Work Health and Safety Model
- Current relevant State/territory WHS legislation
- Relevant state/territory Manual Handling Code of Conduct
Examples of manual handling hazards in the aged care and disabilities sectors include:

- Carrying trays and other items
- Lifting tasks such as moving a person in bed, assisting to stand, transfer to chair or wheelchair, lifting objects
- Pushing pulling tasks such as pushing trolleys, wheelchairs, shower chairs, dressing clients
- Reaching and postural tasks such as feeding a person, showering
- Restraining tasks

The risk factors for manual handling are influenced by:

- Duration and frequency of the task
- Environmental conditions such as underfoot conditions, lighting, heat
- Forces exerted
- In people-handling the risk is also affected by the:
  - ability of client to support/control part/whole of the body
  - predictability in movement and behaviours
  - pain levels
  - ability to follow instructions
  - any equipment attached to the client e.g. catheters, IVs etc
  - client clothing
- Movement undertaken
- Postures adopted

Manual handling equipment may include:

- Client hoists
- Other manual handling assistive devices
- Slide sheets
- Standing lifters
Sources of risk to personal safety:

- Alcohol and/or drug use
- Behaviours of concern
- Personal risks may arise from clients, client family, the public or animals
- Risk environments may be in access to work (e.g. car parking arrangements, access to private home) and in carrying out work
- Situations with a higher risk of threat and client related factors may be identified from incident reports, care plans, case management meetings
- Working new, isolated and/or potentially unstable environments

Examples of workplace hazards in aged care, home and community care and disabilities sectors (other than manual handling) may include:

- Biological hazards including body fluids; contaminated food; soiled clothing and linen; clinical waste; syringes and other 'sharps'; etc
- Chemicals (e.g. toxic or hazardous substances, gases and liquids under pressure, includes cleaning chemicals)
- Electrical hazards related to use of equipment, faulty wiring
- Equipment including suitability for purpose and fitness for use
- Personal threat by (e.g. through behaviours of concern) clients and/or visitors
- Work organisation issues such as shift work or irregular hours/on call
- Work-related environment (e.g. underfoot, lighting, space, noise, air quality, furniture/fittings, car parking etc)
- Work-related stress
Standard precautions include:

- Appropriate reprocessing and storage of reusable instruments
- Aseptic technique
- Personal hygiene practices especially washing and drying hands (e.g. before and after client contact)
- Safe disposal of sharps and other clinical waste
- Safe handling of sharps
- Surface cleaning and management of blood and body fluid spills
- Techniques to limit contamination
- Use of personal protective equipment

Additional precautions may include:

- Additional use of personal protective equipment
- Dedicated equipment (e.g. to each client or as appropriate to work function)
- Special ventilation requirements
Organisation procedures for managing risks, including those related to manual handling may be:

- Client assessment documents and care plans
- Communication, consultation and issue resolution procedures
- Hazard management documents include policies and procedures on specific hazards as well as hazard and incident reporting (including follow up to sharps incidents) and investigation, workplace inspections, maintenance etc
- Hazard management policies and procedures (these may be integrated with quality, care or other documents or be separated as WHS policies and procedures)
- Human resources management procedures such as harassment and grievance procedures, induction programs, team meetings, management of performance levels, alcohol and drug policies
- Job procedures and work instructions, including medications policy and procedures
- Other related procedures including waste management, security
- Post incident/injury management such as first aid, critical incident debriefing, compensation and return to work
- Strategies for reducing the amount of manual handling required and manual handling risk
- Supporting people with behaviours of concern

Work instructions may be:

- In a community language
- In English
- Provided visually e.g. video, WHS signs, symbols and other pictorial presentation, etc.
- Verbal
- Work instructions include care plans and there should be an awareness of their role in risk management especially in risks associated with manual handling and behaviours of concern
- Written
Designated personnel for WHS referrals may be:

- Elected Health and Safety Representative/employee representative
- Employer
- Health and Safety committee
- Other personnel with WHS responsibilities
- Supervisor

Examples of WHS issues which may be raised by workers with designated personnel may include:

- Clarification on understanding of WHS policies and procedures
- Communication and consultation processes, including carer input to care plans
- Effectiveness of risk controls in place
- Follow up to reports and feedback
- Hazards identified
- WHS impact of the changing condition of clients
- Problems encountered in managing risks associated with hazards, in particular, manual handling (e.g. availability and appropriateness of handling and mobility equipment) and behaviours of concern
- Training needs

Examples of contributions may include:

- Attendance at meetings
- Behaviour that contributes to a safe working environment which includes following WHS procedures
- Identifying and reporting risks and hazards
- Input to care plans
- Listening to the ideas and opinions of others in the team
- Recommendations on changes to work processes, equipment or practices
- Sharing opinions, views, knowledge and skills
- Using equipment according to guidelines and operating manuals
Examples of participative arrangements may include:
- Documented issue resolution processes
- Easy access to relevant written workplace information
- Formal and informal WHS meetings
- Health and safety committees
- Meetings called by Health and Safety Representatives
- Other committees such as consultative planning and purchasing
- Other means and processes for raising requests and concerns as well as contributing suggestions and reports to management
- Regular information sessions (using clear and understandable language) on existing or new WHS issues
- Team meeting and case management meetings

Risk control in the work area may include:
Application of the hierarchy of risk control, namely:
- Level 1 controls
  - Eliminate hazards
- Level 2 controls
  - Substitute the hazard with something safer
  - Isolate the hazard from people
  - Use engineering controls
- Level 3 controls
  - Use administrative controls
  - Use personal protective equipment (PPE)

Controlling manual handling risks in the work area may include:
- Changes to the load or client
- Changes to work organisation or work practices
- Changes to workplace layout
- Minimising amount of handling
- Provision of equipment
- Task-specific training
Report hazards in the work area may be verbal or written and may include:

- Face-to-face
- Memos
- Notes
- Phone messages
- Specially designed report forms

Basic home fire safety includes knowledge of:

- Behaviour that may contribute to fire injury and/or fatality
- High fire risk groups
- Optimum placement of smoke alarms
- Referring client for smoke alarm installation and maintenance
- Role of a working smoke alarm
- Smoke alarm testing and cleaning
- Types of smoke alarms

- Risk analysis processes in the youth justice setting
• Types of information to access to support functions of job role
• Importance and differences of security awareness in custodial and community youth justice work
• Rights and responsibilities of young people and their families/carers in youth justice system
• Rights and responsibilities of own work performance in youth justice system
• Tensions that may arise between rights and responsibilities and how to resolve these tensions
• Principles and processes of effective communication with diverse groups of young people and colleagues
• Processes for young people and their families/carers to be able to lodge complaints
• Agency systems for recording and reporting a range of information about young people, the youth justice system and related work functions
• Importance of anti-discrimination and inclusivity principles applied to work practices
• Diverse values and beliefs which individuals may hold and how to respond accordingly
• Culture, gender, beliefs can affect attitudes and behaviour and how these may be perceived by others
• Importance of challenging own perceptions and attitudes in relation to work performance and decision-making
• Own work role and from whom assistance and advice should be sought
• Impact of broader social and economic environment on young people

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

• Apply an understanding of the legislation requirements of the job
• Apply work practices that respect the rights of the young person and others
• Reflect upon own practices and seek feedback form supervisors and colleagues on own work performance
• Locate and apply relevant policies and procedures of the youth justice workplace
• Maintain professional boundaries in all youth justice work
• Identify and apply ethical practices to work with young people
• Incorporate theoretical understandings of adolescent development and offending behaviour into work practice

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role

These include the ability to:

• Raise awareness in others of the needs and rights of young people
• Communicate effectively with young people in a range of situations
• Identify the factors which contribute to offending behaviour
• Undertake risk analysis of immediate work environment
• Promote anti-discriminatory practices
• Observe and report matters to revenant personnel as required with the job role
• Implement security procedures for safety of young person, self and others in the work environment as required by the youth justice organisation

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

• The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
• This unit is most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace setting under the normal range of workplace conditions
• Assessment must demonstrate consistency of application of skills and knowledge described in this unit of competency

Access and equity considerations:

• All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
• All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
• In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
• Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities
Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment include access to relevant workplace or simulated realistic workplace setting where assessment may take place

Method of assessment:

- Assessment may include observation, questioning and evidence gathered from a workplace environment

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Different youth justice work contexts may include:

- Community setting
- Custodial/secure settings

Current youth justice issues may include:

- Risk identification
- Over representation of specific groups in custody
- Recidivist offending
- Security risks
- Increased presentations of young offenders with complex issues

Different models of work may include:

- Restorative justice
- Punitive justice
Factors which influence young people's offending behaviour may include:

- Risk taking behaviours associated with adolescent development
- Deprivation/neglect
- Experience and exposure to violence, discrimination, criminal activity, oppression, abuse or other traumatic events
- Vulnerability and reliance on illegal activity for survival
- Capacity and opportunity to participate in community, education and recreational activity
- Factors related to mental health, alcohol and other drugs (AOD) issues for the individual and/or family
- Accommodation, employment and income
- Physical health

Policies and procedures may include:

- Any policies and procedures that have affect upon the work undertaken
- Confidentiality
- Collecting, recording and storing information
- Access and equity policy

- Operations policies

Legislative requirements may include:

- Specific legislations which relates to the work being undertaken - both the context and the individual -and the impact of this on the work
- Youth justice
- Child protection
- Privacy
- Anti-discrimination
- Work health and safety (WHS)

Relevant personnel may include:

- Supervisors
- Colleagues

Issues requiring mandatory notification may include:

- Abuse and neglect
- Notifiable diseases
Issues for Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander young people:

- Deprivation and isolation from family and community contact
- Over representation in custody
- Self-harm issues
- Cultural 'shock' in custodial setting
- Advocacy issues within the justice system
- Socioeconomics
- Education and language barriers

Risks may include:

- Physical security
- Personal safety
- Safety of young person or others
- Property
- Breaches of orders

Communicate with young people may include:

- Verbal
- Non-verbal
- Written
- Electronic
- Assistive communication (disability)

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace setting under the normal range of workplace conditions
- Assessment must demonstrate consistency of application of skills and knowledge described in this unit of competency

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:
- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment include access to relevant workplace or simulated realistic workplace setting where assessment may take place

Method of assessment:
- Assessment may include observation, questioning and evidence gathered from a workplace environment

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Communication strategies may include:
- Use of interpreters
- Use of translators
- Accessing communication protocols
- Liaison with Elders
- Verbal/non-verbal
- Printed and photo language
- Audio or video conferencing
- Respectful use of body language and proximity
- Identification and respect for roles of gender, age and community status in communication
RANGE STATEMENT

Issues affecting young Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander people in the youth justice system may include:

- Risk of self-harm
- Cultural oppression
- Isolation from community, family, spiritual and well being supports
- Over representation in custody
- Recidivist offending
- Geographical and economic barriers for family visitation and contact
- Alcohol and other drug issues
- Social and emotional well being
- Health risks
- Increased presentations of young offenders with complex issues

Specific cultural and community characteristics may include:

- Respect and participation in 'sorry business'
- Community expectations and understandings of culturally appropriate restorative justice processes
- Social and emotional well being of individual and young person
- Historical impacts of stolen generation and institutionalisation - 'black deaths in custody'
- Trust/ respect issues and fear of institutional racism
- Concept and impact of 'shame' in Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander culture and communities
- Issues of grief and loss

Sources of information may include:

- Community elders
- Kinship networks
- Birth parents
- Others in the community as appropriate
- Serviced providers with which the young person has a history
- Teachers
- Siblings
RANGE STATEMENT

Cultural protocols may include those relating to:
- Access and sharing information
- Attendance at community ceremonies and events
- Communication timeframes
- Reintegration into the community and family

Issues requiring mandatory notification may include:
- Abuse and neglect
- Notifiable diseases
- Risk of self-harm

Practical assistance may include:
- Financial
- Transportation and accommodation for visits
- Telecommunication supports
- Assistance with social and emotional well being
- Legal representation
- Interpreter
- Providing and explaining information

Access resources may include:
- Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander legal aid
- Housing services
- Advocacy services
- Interpreter services
- Community justice services
- Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander health service
- Other justice services internal to the organisation

Potential barriers to communication may include:
- Perceived ad real power imbalances
- Language differences
- Literacy levels
- Discriminatory processes and actions
RANGE STATEMENT

Issues affecting Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander young people:

- Deprivation and isolation from family and community contact
- Over representation in custody
- Self-harm issues
- Cultural 'shock' in custodial setting
- Advocacy issues within the justice system
- Socioeconomics
- Education and language barriers

Risks may include:

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is best assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace under the normal range of conditions
- Competency is demonstrated in assisting young people in crisis situations for at least one type of crisis situation taking account of the organisation policies and procedures designed to maximise safety
Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resource requirements for assessment of this unit include access to:
  - a workplace or an accurately simulated environment where assessment may take place

Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- Organisation’s policies, guidelines and procedures related to monitoring the safety and welfare of young people and preventing and responding to incidents risk taking behaviour
- Team roles and responsibilities and reporting requirements
- Responsibilities of child protection reporting and duty of care
- Teamwork principles and strategies
- First aid techniques
- Principles of effective communication for counselling, risk assessment, negotiation, mediation and information management
- Organisation’s reporting procedures and format
- Code of conduct
- Emergency protocols

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Demonstrate knowledge and application of organisation policies and procedures for responding to critical situations
- Demonstrate knowledge and relevance of statutory obligations and duty of care including child protection reporting
- Assess risks to client safety and welfare and selecting approved and effective responses
- Use effective communication skills and techniques under pressure
- Use protective and first aid techniques and equipment
- Demonstrate knowledge of organisation’s delegations, accountability and reporting processes related to critical situations

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:

- Demonstrate application of effective communication skills across a range of situations relevant to the work role
• Maintain documentation as required, including effective use of relevant information technology in line with work health and safety (WHS) guidelines

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

• The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
• This unit is best assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace under the normal range of conditions
• Because of the unpredictable factors included in this unit, assessment in the workplace may depend on indirect or supplementary evidence, particularly the use of simulations and practice drills

Access and equity considerations:

• All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
• All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
• In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
• Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities
Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resource requirements for assessment of this unit include access to a workplace or accurately simulated environment for assessment

Method of assessment:

- Knowledge testing and simulation exercises conducted in a training program
- Knowledge testing through questioning on performance and contingency scenarios
- Observation of performance in routine workplace activities
- Documentation and products produced as part of routine work activities
- Observation and documentation from specially conducted assignments based on routine work requirements
- Observations from supervisors, colleagues, clients and specialist support agencies

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Critical situations will include actions and events:

- From others which jeopardise the safety and welfare of young people
- Which jeopardise the safety and welfare of the public
- Which jeopardise the safety and welfare of staff and colleagues
- Issues of child protection
- Criminal actions
- From themselves (including self-harm and suicidal behaviour)
Response and action designed to minimise risk may include:

- Separation/isolation/searches
- Defusing strategies
- Counselling
- Specialists/experts
- Intervention or mediation
- Special intervention
- Cultural support specialists
- Referrals
- Negotiation
- Specialist response teams

Incidents or conflict may include:

- Potential or actual causes
- Young people expressing violence towards themselves or others
- Young people experiencing violence
- Intense anger or despair

- evaluation and decision making skills to review information presented to the Board and to enact decisions.

Required knowledge

- cultural context relevant to the community and location: as boards of governance oversee a wide variety of organisations, they must therefore ensure that they operate within the traditional and cultural values of the relevant context/s
- key provisions of relevant legislation from all levels of government that affects business operations, codes of practice and national standards, such as:
  - anti-discrimination legislation
  - consumer and corporations laws including appropriate state legislation
  - ethical principles
  - privacy laws
- organisational constitution, codes of conduct functions, policies and procedures.
Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:
- contributing to analysis and decision making of issues affecting Board and organisational performance
- managing a number of different tasks
- dealing with irregularities and breakdowns in routine
- knowledge of organisational constitution, codes of conduct functions, policies and procedures.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure:
- participation on an actual or simulated Board
- access to office equipment and resources
- examples of issues worked with by boards of governance, including community complaints, strategic decisions and internal staffing issues
- examples of relevant documents.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:
- direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate
- assessment of explanation of core functions of the organisation
- assessment of descriptions of relevant provisions of the legislation under which the organisation operates
- analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios
- demonstration of techniques
- observation of presentations
- oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of the roles and responsibilities of Board members
- observation of performance in role plays
- review of documented feedback from the community and stakeholders about services.
| Guidance information for assessment | Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example:
• other governance units. |

Unit Descriptor

| Unit descriptor | This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to manage all aspects of the recruitment selection and induction processes in accordance with organisational policies and procedures. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement. |

Application of the Unit

| Application of the unit | This unit applies to human resources managers or human resources personnel who take responsibility for managing all aspects of selecting new staff and orientating those staff to their new positions. It is not assumed that the manager will be directly involved in the selection processes themselves, although this may well be the case. In small organisations this role may belong to someone who is not a dedicated human resources professional; the unit however will still be applicable. |

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement. |

Application of the Unit

| Application of the unit                                                                 | This unit applies to human resources practitioners who have a role in the management of mediation within their organisation, or who may work as consultants providing mediation services to organisations. The unit covers the policy framework required for the management of mediation and the skills associated with the provision of mediation. Mediation is a process in which the parties to a dispute, with the assistance of a neutral third party (the mediator), identify the disputed issues, develop options, consider alternatives and endeavour to reach an agreement; the mediator has no advisory or determinative role in regard to the content of the dispute or the outcome of its resolution, but may advise on or determine the process of mediation whereby resolution is attempted. Co mediation is where the neutral third party is a team comprising two or more persons (the mediators). |

BSBINM401A IMPLEMENT WORKPLACE INFORMATION SYSTEM

Modification History
Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor
This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to implement the workplace information system. It involves the identification, acquisition, initial analysis and use of appropriate information, which plays a significant part in the organisation's effectiveness.

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit
Frontline managers play a significant role in contributing to the organisation's effectiveness in identifying, acquiring, analysing and using appropriate information.

At this level, work will normally be carried out within routine and non routine methods and procedures, which require planning and evaluation, leadership and guidance of others, and some discretion and judgement.

Licensing/Regulatory Information
Not applicable.

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- literacy skills to work with information, and to research and present information in ways that are appropriate to the work team
- technology skills to work with a range of information systems.

Required knowledge

- information management systems and technology that would be associated with the workplace such as:
  - budgets and financial management systems
  - customer information software or records
  - databases
  - personal digital assistant (PDA)
  - product and service information
  - project management software
  - record management systems
  - spreadsheets.
Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:
- analysis of the information that is required for the effective functioning of the team's work together
- knowledge of the range of information systems that are, or should be, available in the workplace
- ability to recognise what information system changes and improvements will be required in the future.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure:
- access to appropriate documentation and resources normally used in the workplace.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:
- demonstration of techniques in working with information management systems
- direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate
- oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of relevant technology
- review of documentation analysing information trends and developments
- written reports on future information system needs
- review of preparation undertaken for team members to work with new technology and information system changes.

Guidance information for assessment

Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example:
- other units from the Certificate IV in Frontline Management.
Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. BSBINN301A Promote innovation in a team environment

Modification History
Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

| Unit descriptor | This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to be an effective and proactive member of an innovative team. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement. |

Application of the Unit

| Application of the unit | This unit applies individuals who play a proactive role in demonstrating, encouraging or supporting innovation in a team environment. The individual may be a team participant or a team leader. The team may ‘make itself’ or be constructed by others. It may have core members and members who participate at certain times or for particular purposes. It may be permanent or temporary, or come together at different times to work on specific projects. The team could consist of a team of contractors/freelancers, permanent staff, clients and service providers, or any combination of these groups. It may operate within an organisation or across several organisations - or simply across a group of individuals. The key focus of the unit is on what makes for an innovative team, what keeps it working well, how the structure of work can make a difference and what skills and knowledge are needed to maximise opportunities for innovation. Where a greater focus on team leadership is required this unit should be combined with units such as BSBLED401A Develop teams and individuals. |

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication skills to work collaboratively as part of a team, to provide guidance and support to others, and to participate in open and constructive discussions
- creative thinking skills to generate, explore, test and challenge ideas
- learning skills to stretch boundaries of own knowledge and skills
- literacy skills to analyse a wide range of information from varied sources
- planning and organisational skills to participate in the effective allocation of work in a team context
- problem-solving skills to work constructively to overcome issues and challenges of both a practical and conceptual nature and to make ideas become realities
- self-management skills to take a pro-active team role and to reflect on own performance in modelling and encouraging behaviour that supports innovation.

Required knowledge

- barriers to innovation that can occur within a team and broader barriers that sometimes hinder innovation
- broad concepts of innovation including what innovation is, different types of innovation and the benefits of innovation
- characteristics of teams that are more likely to be innovative and characteristics of broader environments that support and encourage innovation
- different roles that people may play within a team, how this impacts on the way a team works and what it might achieve
- group dynamics in a team.

RANGE STATEMENT

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

What the team needs and wants to achieve may relate to:

- addressing particular customer feedback
- conceiving and implementing a particular project
- developing new services or products
- generating ongoing ideas within the work unit
- improving budgetary performance
- improving or changing work conditions
- new ideas that impact beyond the workplace (e.g. that have a broader social or community impact)

Information about current or potential team members' work may relate to:

- interests
- lifestyle preferences
- past jobs
- technical strengths
- work preferences
- working styles

Different ways that different people may contribute may relate to individual strengths around:

- creating positive energy within the team
- fundamental literacy strengths (e.g. particularly strong in visual literacy, written or spoken communication)
- generating ideas
- networks or spheres of influence
- particular ways of thinking
- powers of persuasion
- problem-solving capacities
- specific technical skills or knowledge

Ground rules may relate to:

- boundaries or lack of boundaries for team activities and ideas
- confidentiality
- copyright, moral rights or intellectual property
- regularity of communication
- key roles and responsibilities
- time lines

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication skills to clarify document requirements
- editing and proofreading skills to check own work for accuracy
- keyboarding skills to enter text and numerical data
- literacy skills to read and understand organisation's procedures, and to use basic models to produce a range of correspondence
- problem-solving skills to solve routine problems.

Required knowledge

- formatting styles and their effect on formatting, readability and appearance of documents
- purpose, use and function of word processing software
- organisational requirements for ergonomics, work periods and breaks, and conservation techniques
- organisational style guide.

Application of the Unit

| Application of the unit | This unit applies to leaders working to ensure learning advances individual and organisational capabilities. The mentoring program may apply to a: particular section or group within an educational organisation (for example, as part of a Registered Training Organisation's professional development activities) specific business purpose or objective within an enterprise whose core business is not education collaborative partnership that spans more than one organisation (such as to advance occupational or industry specific skill needs). This unit may relate equally to small scale learning activities within a small to medium sized organisation or to a significant activity in a large organisation. Leaders in learning must be able to plan, implement, monitor and evaluate a mentoring program that results in learning forged through a defined and active learning partnership with a mentor. The program should develop and use tools that enhance both the learning and the phased relationship, and it should be monitored and evaluated to ensure it explores and meets the mentee's learning needs. |

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

- Evidence of the following is essential:
  - rigour in analysing, planning, implementing and evaluating career development services
  - collecting, evaluating and using appropriate information when forming career development strategies and related support systems and resources
  - appreciation of the diverse perspectives individuals can bring to any learning situation or the workplace as a result of their nationality, gender, ethnicity, experience, age, sexuality or disability
  - knowledge of organisational policies on career development.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

- Assessment must ensure:
  - access to an actual workplace or simulated environment
  - competence is consistently demonstrated over time, and over a range and variety of situations providing career development services to a professional standard.

Method of assessment

- A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:
  - direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate
  - completion of applied projects or learning activities such as plans for career development services, quality systems to support career development services and implementation plans
  - direct observation of contextual application of skills when developing quality career development services
  - oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of common patterns of thinking, feeling and behaviour, and the affect on individual career choices.

Unit Descriptor

| Unit descriptor | This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to work with teams and individuals, their standard of conduct and the initiative they take in influencing others. At this level, work will normally be carried out within routine and non routine methods and procedures which require the exercise of some discretion and judgement.

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement. |

Application of the Unit

| Application of the unit | Frontline management provides the first level of leadership within the organisation. This unit applies to people who are making the transition from being a team member, to taking responsibility for the work and performance of others.

Frontline managers have a strong influence on the work culture, values and ethics of the teams they supervise. As such it is important that frontline managers model good practice, professionalism and confidently represent their organisation. |

BSBMGT404A Lead and facilitate off site staff

Modification History
Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

| Unit descriptor | This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to supervise staff who perform agreed duties at an alternative site (usually home) during some or all of the scheduled work hours. OFF SITE WORK is a flexible employment option that meets all legal and regulatory employment requirements. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement. |

Application of the Unit

| Application of the unit | This unit applies to frontline managers who may be supervisors or team leaders who have responsibility for overseeing the work of off site staff. Increasingly, managers and staff are at different locations and the opportunities for face to face communication are reduced. In these cases managers must develop different techniques and approaches to ensure quality standards and work outcomes are met. |

BSBMGT515A Manage operational plan

Modification History
Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

| Unit descriptor | This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to develop and monitor implementation of the operational plan to provide efficient and effective workplace practices within the organisation's productivity and profitability plans. Management at a strategic level requires systems and procedures to be developed and implemented to facilitate the organisation's operational plan. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement. |

Application of the Unit

| Application of the unit | This unit applies to people who manage the work of others and operate within the parameters of a broader strategic and/or business plan. The task of the manager at this level is to develop and implement an operational plan to ensure that the objectives and strategies outlined in the strategic and/or business plan are met by work teams. However in some larger organisations operational plans may be developed by a strategic planning unit. At this level work will normally be carried out within complex and diverse methods and procedures, which require the exercise of considerable discretion and judgement, using a range of problem solving and decision making strategies. |

Unit Descriptor
This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to sustain and develop an environment in which continuous improvement, innovation and learning are promoted and rewarded. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit
This unit applies to people who have managerial responsibilities which include building a better and more effective work environment. Continuous improvement and innovation have links with the model of the learning organisation and people working at this level play an important role in building the culture, values and attitudes of the organisation. Links may be made between continuous improvement and formal quality systems such as International Standardization for Organization (ISO) or quality software. However it is not assumed that formal quality systems or software are in the workplace. Innovation is seen as an important attitude and set of practices which should be fostered by people working at this level in teams and across the organisation.

BSBOHS401B Contribute to the implementation of a systematic approach to managing OHS

Modification History
Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

| Unit descriptor | This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to effectively contribute to the application of a systematic approach to managing occupational health and safety (OHS) to ensure that the workplace is, as far as is practicable, safe and without risks to the health of employees and others. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement. |

Application of the Unit

| Application of the unit | This unit applies to individuals with supervisory responsibilities for implementing and monitoring the organisation's OHS policies, procedures and programs in a work area. It includes contributing to the implementation of developed strategies, systems and plans, as well as recognising the need for expert advice. The unit may apply both in a work unit of a large organisation or in a small to medium enterprise. |

Unit Descriptor

| Unit descriptor | This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to enhance project outcomes through contributing to quality planning, applying quality policies and procedures and contributing to continuous improvement within projects. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement. |

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to a project team member working under the direction of a project manager with other project team members. The individual may be operating within an organisation or as a consultant. The skills should be applied in the context of multiple complex projects, with the individual operating as part of a specialist project management team.

In the context of this unit a complex project is defined as a project which involves:

- the need for a comprehensive and multi-faceted project plan
- the need for a formal internal or external communications strategy
- a dedicated and diverse project budget
- multiple administrative components
- multiple operational components
- a wide range of stakeholders
- a project operations team.

The functions performed by a worker managing a straightforward project or a section of a larger project where project management is not the main focus of the job role are covered by BSBPMG510A Manage projects.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:

- application of quality management and continuous improvement techniques in relation to multiple complex projects
- knowledge of quality auditing processes and requirements.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure:

- access to examples of project management documentation used for quality control purposes
- access to project team records.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skill and knowledge. The following assessment methods are appropriate for this unit:

- direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate
- oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of strategies for managing project quality and their application to different situations
- analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios which present issues and problems in project quality management
- review of records documented and maintained
- evaluation of documented results of project activities and product performance
- evaluation of reports developed about shortfalls in quality outcomes.

Guidance information for assessment

Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example:

- other units from the Certificate IV in Project Management.

Unit Descriptor

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement. |

Application of the Unit

| Application of the unit | This unit applies to an individual who is clearly and solely responsible for the management and leadership of a complex project, either as an employee of an organisation or as an external consultant.
In the context of this unit a complex project is defined as a project which involves:
- the need for a comprehensive and multi faceted project plan
- the need for a formal internal or external communications strategy
- a dedicated and diverse project budget
- multiple administrative components
- multiple operational components
- a wide range of stakeholders
- a project operations team.
The functions performed by a program manager to manage project scope within multiple projects are addressed in BSBPMG602A Direct the scope of a project program. |

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- literacy skills sufficient to interpret and analyse complex project plans and documentation
- planning and organising skills to monitor scope and to respond to potential and actual changes
- problem-solving and analytical skills to address project scope management issues and challenges
- negotiation skills to address changes to scope with a range of stakeholders.

Required knowledge

- role and responsibilities of the project manager in relation to project planning
- project life cycle and the significance of scope management
- problem areas likely to be encountered in scope management
- project management tools used for managing scope.
Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:

- demonstration of scope management for multiple complex projects
- knowledge of scope management plans, tools, issues and likely challenges.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure:

- access to workplace documentation used to document and manage project scope
- consideration of feedback from project stakeholders regarding the management of project scope.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skill and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate
- oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of strategies for managing project scope and their application to different situations
- analysis of responses in addressing case studies and scenarios which present project scope management issues and problems
- observation of demonstrated techniques in negotiating changes to scope
- review of scope management plan
- assessment of documentation about scope management issues and recommended improvements.

Guidance information for assessment

Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example:

- other units from the Diploma of Project Management.

Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

| Project authorisation may: | • already have been decided before involvement of the project manager
| | • be in the form of a scope statement which briefly explains why the project has been formed, what it hopes to achieve and how success will be measured
| | • be required at a number of critical review points during the project |

| Appropriate authority may include: | • client, owner, sponsor, senior executive or other individual or group vested with the authority to make decisions regarding the project |

| Project deliverables may include: | • all products and services defined within the project scope |

| Relevant stakeholders may include: | • team members
| | • clients
| | • sponsors
| | • internal and external parties
| | • decision makers |

| Scope management may include: | • determining that a scope change has occurred or is about to occur
| | • identifying and reporting scope creep, that is, incremental increases to scope that were not part of the original project requirements
| | • identifying factors which influence changes to scope
| | • implementing agreed scope changes
| | • monitoring and reporting the effect of scope changes on other areas and on achievement of project objectives
| | • refining scope progressively throughout the project life cycle
| | • seeking authorisation for changes to project scope |
RANGE STATEMENT

Change control procedures may include:

- formal agreements, for example contracts, sub-contracts, memoranda of understanding
- major elements of the project liable to change, for example design, engineering, finance
- project documentation, including plans, schedules, statements, directives, guidelines and instructions

Unit Descriptor

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement. |

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Application of the unit</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>This unit applies to an individual who is clearly and solely responsible for the management and leadership of a complex project, either as an employee of an organisation or an external consultant.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

In the context of this unit a complex project is defined as a project which involves:

- the need for a comprehensive and multi faceted project plan
- the need for a formal internal or external communications strategy
- a dedicated and diverse project budget
- multiple administrative components
- multiple operational components
- a wide range of stakeholders
- a project operations team.

The functions performed by a program manager to manage procurement within multiple projects are addressed in BSBPMG609A Direct procurement and contracting for a project program.

RANGE STATEMENT

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

| Delegated authority refers to planning and activities that may: | • be conducted routinely or as changing circumstances dictate
• be done independently within broad guidance or by taking the lead of a team
• involve consultation with other project members, teams and internal stakeholders
• involve the selection, use and supervision of appropriate procurement management methods, tools and techniques
• take into account internal organisational change and external environmental change |
| --- | --- |
| Procurement management plan identifies and outlines: | • how procurement arrangements are communicated to stakeholders
• processes to be used for procurement of resources
• process for monitoring and evaluating procurement related to the project
• procurement objectives, strategies and time lines
• resources to be obtained against a time line and budget
• responsibilities for staff/team members |
| Modifications may be made: | • in consultation with project team members, section heads, project manager and stakeholders
• independently or with higher project authority endorsement if necessary
• regularly throughout the project life cycle
• taking into account internal organisational change and external environmental change |
| Procurement records and information may include: | • contract change proposals and approvals
• contract discharge and asset disposal register
• contract documentation
• contract negotiation documentation |

Unit Descriptor

| Unit descriptor | This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to manage the integration of all functions of project management in a program or multiple project context. This covers managing conflicting priorities between projects, directing project managers in re-aligning projects within the program, directing the internal environment with the needs and expectations of the external environment, and directing projects within the program throughout their life cycle. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement. |

Application of the Unit

| Application of the unit | A program is defined as a set of interrelated projects, each of which has a project manager. Multiple projects (sometimes called a portfolio of projects) refers to a number of projects related in some way and managed by the same person as a program to achieve a common organisational objective/s. For the purposes of this unit someone who manages a suite of projects (a program) will be referred to as a program manager. The functions performed by a project manager to manage integration within individual projects are addressed in BSBPMG501A Manage application of project integrative processes. |

3.6. Pass on scope management lessons learned to higher project authority for application in planning and implementation of later projects within the program |
Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- high level literacy skills to review and amend project plans, to communicate decisions and to write quality reports
- high level analysis, planning, organising, problem-solving and evaluating skills in relation to project scope management
- self management skills to prioritise actions for successful outcomes
- negotiation skills to control proposed changes in scope.

Required knowledge

- scope management plans, methodologies, techniques and tools
- project life cycle and the significance of scope management
- typical challenges and issues encountered in project scope management and options for addressing these.

RANGE STATEMENT

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Needs may be:
- activity-oriented, for example to stage major sporting events
- improvement-oriented, for example to find better way/s of doing something
- outcome-oriented, for example to fulfil needs
- product-oriented, for example to acquire new computer systems or buildings

Project authorisation recommendations may include:
- broad details of required project outcomes and objectives
- major projects phases, activities and milestones that will require timing coordination across the program (particularly as new approved projects enter the program)
- project managers' terms of reference, authorisations and limitations directed by the program manager
- relationship between multiple project objectives and the programs and strategic objectives of the organisation

Scope management may include:
- controlling program scope creep, that is incremental increases to scope, to accommodate wishes rather than needs
- determining that a scope change has occurred or is about to occur
- managing factors which influence changes to scope
- managing scope changes when they occur
- managing the effect of scope changes on other areas and on the achievement of multiple project objectives
- progressive refinement of scope throughout multiple project life cycles

Project performance may include:
- time and resources spent on the projects, as compared to baseline data
- projects’ progress in terms of time and

BSBPMG603A Direct time management of a project program

Modification History
Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

| Unit descriptor | This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to direct time management across projects so that key deliverables meet project and program schedules. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement. |

Application of the Unit

| Application of the unit | A program is defined as a set of interrelated projects, each of which has a project manager. Multiple projects (sometimes called a portfolio of projects) refers to a number of projects related in some way and managed by the same person as a program to achieve a common organisational objective/s. For the purposes of this unit someone who manages a suite of projects (a program) will be referred to as a program manager. The functions performed by a project manager to manage time and scheduling within individual projects are addressed in BSBPMG503A Manage project time. |

| 1. Direct project schedule development  | 1.1. Determine from individual project plans the duration, effort, sequence and interdependencies of major activities and milestones to form the basis of the program schedule
1.2. Direct project managers by the use of time management methods, techniques and tools, preferred schedules, time management plans, resource allocation and financial requirements to enable continuous updating and refining of the program schedule
1.3. Formalise and communicate project schedules, with agreement, to stakeholders as the basis for planning, implementation and review of progress |
| 2. Manage program schedules              | 2.1. Develop, implement and modify mechanisms to monitor, control, record and report actual progress in relation to the agreed schedule and plans
2.2. Conduct ongoing analysis to identify and forecast variances and trends, and to develop responses so that projects meet their schedules
2.3. Manage durations of key activities and interdependencies between projects to enable financial and resource rationalisation across the program, to meet strategic expectations within the management/reporting period of the program
2.4. Review progress and refine the schedule throughout the program life cycle to ensure consistency with changing scope, objectives and constraints related to time and resource availability
2.5. Ensure responses to perceived, potential or actual project schedule changes are authorised to achieve program objectives |
| 3. Analyse time management outcomes      | 3.1. Review and analyse multiple project and program outcomes from available records and information to determine the effectiveness of the schedule and time management processes
3.2. Pass on lessons learned to higher project authority and provide feedback for application, planning and implementation of later projects within the program |

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- high level leadership skills to inspire trust and confidence in all stakeholder groups
- literacy skills to communicate decisions and to write quality reports
- communication and interpersonal skills to convey expectations, negotiate, resolve conflict and motivate performance
- planning and organising skills to ensure that time lines are met across projects
- time management skills (of self and others)
- problem-solving skills to address time management issues.

Required knowledge

- relationship between time, cost and resources to the project management framework
- time management and estimating
- methodologies, techniques and tools, their capabilities, limitations, applicability and outcomes.

Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Time management may:

- be conducted non-routinely to meet complex, changing circumstances
- be done by taking the lead in a team environment
- involve consultation with project managers and selective involvement of stakeholders
- involve the direction of the use of appropriate time management methods, processes, procedures, tools and techniques
- take into account the impact of organisational and environmental change on the program’s projects and vice versa

Techniques and tools may include:

- assessing and reporting the potential impact of multiple project timings and their potential for change on the program, and therefore the organisation
- collating and using the products of specialist time analysis to make program-wide time management decisions
- directing qualitative and/or quantitative time analysis, such as schedule simulation, decision analysis, contingency planning and alternative strategy development
- using personal experience and/or subject matter experts

Time management plans may include:

- alternative schedule management strategies and actions
- assigned schedule management responsibilities
- contingency plans
- formal arrangements
- important milestones and critical interdependencies between projects
- program consolidated schedule
- responsibility assignment
- sub-schedules
RANGE STATEMENT

Records may take the form of:

- diaries, incident logs, occurrence reports and other such documentation
- gantt, PERT and other scheduling charts
- lists of variances, trends and forecasts of potential schedule events
- program and/or organisation files and records
- records of analysis, evaluation of options and selection processes
- records of responses, results and lessons learned

BSBREL701A Develop and cultivate collaborative partnerships and relationships

Modification History
Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

| Unit descriptor | This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to establish collaborative partnerships and relationships with business and industry stakeholders to promote and advance learning programs.

The unit also covers communicating to influence others, cultivating new and existing partnerships, establishing positive collaborative relationships, leading the establishment of a partnership program and establishing reporting mechanisms.

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement. |
Application of the Unit

| Application of the unit | This unit applies to leaders or managers working in either an educational organisation or a non educational enterprise where learning is used to build capabilities. It includes forming partnerships or other collaborative arrangements to achieve improved learner, community, career, or work outcomes. Educational leaders gain the respect of colleagues, contacts, clients and the community through demonstrating professionalism in all aspects of their work; this professionalism is underpinned by their educational expertise and effective interpersonal and communication skills. In the vocational education and training sector, learning leaders and managers must build partnerships and lead in a collaborative manner to ensure learning has a strategic role in the ever changing context, and in the face of complex influences that affect learning. |

BSBSUS501A Develop workplace policy and procedures for sustainability

Modification History
Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

While no licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply holistically to this unit at the time of publication, relevant national, state and territory legislation, regulations and codes of practice impact upon this unit. |

This unit addresses the knowledge, processes and techniques necessary to develop approaches to sustainability within workplaces, including the development and implementation of policy.

This unit applies to people with managerial responsibility who undertake work developing approaches to create strategies within workplaces, including the development and implementation of policy and includes:

- communicating with relevant stakeholders
- developing and monitoring policies
- reviewing and improving policies.

A person who demonstrates competence in this unit must be able to provide evidence of the ability to develop and implement integrated sustainability policies and procedures within an enterprise. The review of the policy after implementation will also need to be evidenced.

The context of the unit applies to all sectors of the business industry; it may be applied to all sections of an organisation, including the office, the factory floor, or work area. With such a broad application, the unit will need to be contextualised as it is applied across an organisation and across different industry sectors.

Unit Descriptor

| Unit descriptor | This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to collect, analyse and communicate information and to use that information to develop and maintain effective working relationships and networks, with particular regard to communication and representation. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement. |

Application of the Unit

| Application of the unit | Frontline managers play an important role in developing and maintaining positive relationships in internal and external environments so that customers, suppliers and the organisation achieve planned outputs and outcomes. They play a prominent part in motivating, mentoring, coaching and developing team cohesion through providing leadership for the team and forming the bridge between the management of the organisation and team members. At this level, work will normally be carried out within routine and non routine methods and procedures, which require planning and evaluation, and leadership and guidance of others. |

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor
This unit of competency specifies the outcomes required to inspect various types of property for conditions and compliance with approved requirements. It requires the ability to communicate effectively with those involved in the inspection process, and to have a clear understanding of industry and organisational inspection criteria and methods for carrying out and reporting the results of a property inspection.

The unit may form part of the licensing requirements for persons working in the property industry, including in the real estate, business broking, stock and station agency and property operations and development sectors, in those States and Territories where these are regulated activities.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit
This unit of competency supports the work of those involved in inspecting property.

  - financial probity
  - franchise and business structures
  - industrial relations
  - OHS
  - property sales, leasing and management
- types of property classes and characteristics.

Evidence Guide
EVIDENCE GUIDE
The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, the range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Overview of assessment
This unit of competency could be assessed through practical demonstration of inspecting a property. Targeted written (including alternative formats where necessary) or verbal questioning to assess the candidate's underpinning knowledge would provide additional supporting evidence of competence. The demonstration and questioning would include collecting evidence of the candidate's knowledge and application of ethical standards and relevant federal, and state or territory legislation and regulations. This assessment may be carried out in a simulated or workplace environment.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit
A person who demonstrates competency in this unit must be able to provide evidence of:

• conducting and completing a property inspection within agreed timeframes and in compliance with all applicable industry, legal and organisational requirements
• applying effective communication and coordination techniques required to access property and organise inspection
• knowledge of agency practices, ethical standards and legislative requirements associated with property inspections
• complying with established inspection processes, noting variations in approved property requirements, and preparing findings in a report suitable for analysis and dissemination.

Context of and specific resources for assessment
Resource implications for assessment include:

• access to suitable simulated or real opportunities and resources to demonstrate competence
• assessment instruments that may include personal planner and assessment record book
• access to a registered provider of assessment services.

Where applicable, physical resources should include equipment modified for people with disabilities.

Access must be provided to appropriate learning and/or assessment support when required.

Assessment processes and techniques must be culturally appropriate, and appropriate to the language and literacy capacity of the candidate and the work being performed. Validity and sufficiency of evidence require that:

- competency will need to be demonstrated over a period of time reflecting the scope of the role and the practical requirements of the workplace
- where the assessment is part of a structured learning experience the evidence collected must relate to a number of performances assessed at different points in time and separated by further learning and practice with a decision of competence only taken at the point when the assessor has complete confidence in the person's competence
- all assessment that is part of a structured learning experience must include a combination of direct, indirect and supplementary evidence
- where assessment is for the purpose of recognition (RCC/RPL), the evidence provided will need to be current and show that it represents competency demonstrated over a period of time
- assessment can be through simulated project-based activity and must include evidence relating to each of the elements in this unit.

In all cases where practical assessment is used it will be combined with targeted questioning to assess the underpinning knowledge. Questioning will be undertaken in such a manner as is appropriate to the language and literacy levels of the candidate and any cultural issues that may affect responses to the questions, and will reflect the requirements of the competency and the work being performed.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, the range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Overview of assessment

This unit of competency could be assessed through practical demonstration of administering the leasing of different types of property. Targeted written (including alternative formats where necessary) or verbal questioning to assess the candidate's underpinning knowledge would provide additional supporting evidence of competence. The demonstration and questioning would include collecting evidence of the candidate's knowledge and application of ethical standards and relevant federal, and state or territory legislation and regulations. This assessment may be carried out in a simulated or workplace environment.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

A person who demonstrates competency in this unit must be able to provide evidence of:

- completing tenancy agreement or lease documentation in line with agency practice, ethical standards and legislative requirements
• conducting inspections for prospective tenants in line with agency practice, ethical standards and legislative requirements
• knowledge of agency practice, ethical standards and legislative requirements associated with leasing different forms of property
• knowledge of consumer protection principles and the rights and obligations of licensed real estate agents and real estate representatives in regard to the leasing of property
• obtaining and reviewing tenancy applications in line with agency practice, ethical standards and legislative requirements
• placing tenants in property in line with agency practice, ethical standards and legislative requirements
• recording tenancy arrangements in line with agency practice
• screening tenant enquiries in line with agency practice, ethical standards and legislative requirements.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Resource implications for assessment include:

• access to suitable simulated or real opportunities and resources to demonstrate competence
• assessment instruments that may include personal planner and assessment record book
• access to a registered provider of assessment services.

Where applicable, physical resources should include equipment modified for people with disabilities.

Access must be provided to appropriate learning and/or assessment support when required.

Assessment processes and techniques must be culturally appropriate, and appropriate to the language and literacy capacity of the candidate and the work being performed.

Validity and sufficiency of evidence require that:

• competency will need to be demonstrated over a period of time reflecting the scope of the role and the practical requirements of the workplace
• where the assessment is part of a structured learning experience the evidence collected must relate to a number of performances assessed at different points in time and separated by further learning and practice with a decision of competence only taken at the point when the assessor has complete confidence in the person’s competence
all assessment that is part of a structured learning experience must include a combination of direct, indirect and supplementary evidence

where assessment is for the purpose of recognition (RCC/RPL), the evidence provided will need to be current and show that it represents competency demonstrated over a period of time

assessment can be through simulated project-based activity and must include evidence relating to each of the elements in this unit.

In all cases where practical assessment is used it will be combined with targeted questioning to assess the underpinning knowledge. Questioning will be undertaken in such a manner as is appropriate to the language and literacy levels of the candidate and any cultural issues that may affect responses to the questions, and will reflect the requirements of the competency and the work being performed.

Promotional materials may include:
• agency email and website details
• agent business card
• agent and agency profile
• brochures
• description of property
• list properties for lease or rent
• pamphlets
• testimonials from past tenants.

Effective interpersonal communication techniques may include:
• active listening
• providing an opportunity for tenants to clarify their understanding of the lease process
• soft questioning and seeking feedback from tenants or landlords to confirm own understanding of their needs and expectations
• summarising and paraphrasing to check understanding of tenant message
• using appropriate body language.

Effective questioning techniques may include:
• active listening
• clear questions
• different question types
• reflection
• using silences.

Effective negotiation techniques may include:
• analytical skills
• listening techniques
• non-verbal communication skills
• personal attributes
• presentation techniques
• questioning techniques
• speaking skills.

Tenancy agreement or lease documentation may include:

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, the range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Overview of assessment

This unit of competency could be assessed through practical demonstration of coordinating contractor requirements for a variety of projects. Targeted written (including alternative formats where necessary) or verbal questioning to assess the candidate’s underpinning knowledge would provide additional supporting evidence of competence. The demonstration and questioning would include collecting evidence of the candidate's knowledge and application of ethical standards and relevant federal, and state or territory legislation and regulations. This assessment may be carried out in a simulated or workplace environment.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

A person who demonstrates competency in this unit must be able to provide evidence of:

- completing selection of contractors, including reviewing criteria and reporting recommendations
- evaluating and selecting contractors using appropriate selection criteria and communication techniques
- determining contractor requirements through research and consultation
- knowledge of organisation's practices, ethical standards and legislative requirements associated with coordinating contractor requirements for a variety of projects

- preparing selection schedule and criteria, and arranging people to be involved in the selection process.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Resource implications for assessment include:

- access to suitable simulated or real opportunities and resources to demonstrate competence
- assessment instruments that may include personal planner and assessment record book
- access to a registered provider of assessment services.

Where applicable, physical resources should include equipment modified for people with disabilities.

Access must be provided to appropriate learning and/or assessment support when required.

Assessment processes and techniques must be culturally appropriate, and appropriate to the language and literacy capacity of the candidate and the work being performed.

Validity and sufficiency of evidence require that:

- competency will need to be demonstrated over a period of time reflecting the scope of the role and the practical requirements of the workplace
- where the assessment is part of a structured learning experience the evidence collected must relate to a number of performances assessed at different points in time and separated by further learning and practice with a decision of competence only taken at the point when the assessor has complete confidence in the person's competence
- all assessment that is part of a structured learning experience must include a combination of direct, indirect and supplementary evidence
- where assessment is for the purpose of recognition (RCC/RPL), the evidence provided will need to be current and show that it represents competency demonstrated over a period of time
- assessment can be through simulated project-based activity and must include evidence relating to each of the elements in this unit.

In all cases where practical assessment is used it will be combined with targeted questioning to assess the underpinning knowledge. Questioning will be undertaken in such a manner as is appropriate to the language and literacy levels of the candidate and any cultural issues that may affect responses to the questions, and will reflect the requirements of the competency and the work being performed.
Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording in the performance criteria is detailed below. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

| 1 Establish study requirements. | 1.1 Aims and objectives of feasibility study are clearly established according to client and organisational requirements.
1.2 Study objectives and time lines are negotiated and agreed in consultation with relevant people.
1.3 Relevant documentation and legislative requirements are gathered and reviewed to identify critical requirements of the study.
1.4 Situations requiring specialist advice are identified and support is sought as required according to organisational requirements. |
| 2 Access relevant information. | 2.1 Relevant information is gathered and organised in a format suitable for analysis and interpretation.
2.2 Market information is accessed and evaluated in terms of validity, reliability and relevance according to identified analysis requirements.
2.3 Relevant people are consulted to gather additional information using appropriate communication techniques.
2.4 Environment is scanned to identify and assess factors that may impact on study according to organisational requirements.
2.5 Reliable methods for gathering information are used according to organisational requirements, making efficient use of time and resources. |
| 3 Analyse information. | 3.1 Quantitative and qualitative analysis is undertaken of comparative market data using standard financial analysis techniques.
3.2 Economic trends and market developments are analysed in terms of potential implications and impact on study objectives.

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

4.3 Scenarios are developed and checked against prescribed criteria to minimise subjective assessment.

4.4 Sensitivity analysis is performed on data to identify degree of convergence within identified industry and market benchmarks.

4.5 Property trends and market conditions are identified and evaluated against study requirements.

5 Document feasibility study.

5.1 Feasibility study is presented in appropriate format, style and structure using suitable business equipment and technology.

5.2 Report is prepared and distributed to relevant people within agreed timeframes according to organisational requirements.

5.3 Conclusions are documented that are verifiable, current and sufficiently detailed to meet identified client and organisational requirements.

5.4 Information is securely maintained with due regard to client confidentiality, and legislative and organisational requirements.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, the range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Overview of assessment

This unit of competency could be assessed through practical demonstration of contributing to a formal property feasibility study. Targeted written (including alternative formats where necessary) or verbal questioning to assess the candidate's underpinning knowledge would provide additional supporting evidence of competence. The demonstration and questioning would include collecting evidence of the candidate's knowledge and application of ethical standards and relevant federal, and state or territory legislation and regulations. This assessment may be carried out in a simulated or workplace environment.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

A person who demonstrates competency in this unit must be able to provide evidence of:

- analysing market information to identify economic trends and market developments, as well as risk and contingency factors
- consulting with relevant people and sourcing documentation and relevant legislation to establish study aims and objectives
- documenting and presenting feasibility study using appropriate business equipment and technology
- formulating sensitivity scenarios against industry benchmarks
- knowledge of organisation's practices, ethical standards and legislative requirements associated with property feasibility studies
- sourcing market and environmental information to identify factors affecting study.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Resource implications for assessment include:

- a registered provider of assessment services
- assessment materials and tools
- candidate special requirements
- competency standards
- cost and time considerations
- suitable assessment venue and equipment
- workplace documentation.

Where applicable, physical resources should include equipment modified for people with disabilities.

Access must be provided to appropriate learning and/or assessment support when required.

Assessment processes and techniques must be culturally appropriate, and appropriate to the language and literacy capacity of the candidate and the work being performed.

Validity and sufficiency of evidence require that:

- competency will need to be demonstrated over a period of time reflecting the scope of the role and the practical requirements of the workplace
where the assessment is part of a structured learning experience the evidence collected must relate to a number of performances assessed at different points in time and separated by further learning and practice with a decision of competence only taken at the point when the assessor has complete confidence in the person’s competence
- all assessment that is part of a structured learning experience must include a combination of direct, indirect and supplementary evidence
- where assessment is for the purpose of recognition (RCC/RPL), the evidence provided will need to be current and show that it represents competency demonstrated over a period of time
- assessment can be through simulated project-based activity and must include evidence relating to each of the elements in this unit.

In all cases activity and must include evidence relating to each of the where practical assessment is used it will be combined with targeted questioning to assess the underpinning knowledge. Questioning will be undertaken in such a manner as is appropriate to the language and literacy levels of the candidate and any cultural issues that may affect responses to the questions, and will reflect the requirements of the competency and the work being performed.
Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording in the performance criteria is detailed below. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Clients may include:
- financial institutions
- fund managers
- individuals
- internal and external property groups
- investment organisations.

Organisational requirements may be outlined and reflected in:
- access and equity principles and practice guidelines
- business and performance plans
- complaint and dispute resolution procedures
- goals, objectives, plans, systems and processes
- legal and ethical requirements and codes of practice
- mission statements and strategic plans
- OHS policies, procedures and programs
- policies and procedures in relation to client service
- quality and continuous improvement processes and standards
- quality assurance and procedure manuals.

Relevant people may include:
- accountants
- agents
- clients
- government personnel
- interested parties
- legal representatives
- management and colleagues
- members of industry associations
- taxation specialists.

Relevant documentation may relate to:
- building codes
- current and planned property or site developments
- deposited, survey and other plans and maps
- depreciation schedules
- land title and zoning
- leasing rates
- legal status
management policy and procedures marketing services permits rates notices sales information taxation papers tenancy and other contracts or leases.

Legislative requirements may be outlined and reflected in:

- Australian standards
- general duty of care to clients
- home building requirements
- privacy requirements
- relevant federal, and state or territory legislation that affects organisational operation, including:
  - anti-discrimination and diversity
  - environmental issues
  - EEO
  - industrial relations
  - OHS
- relevant industry codes of practice covering the market sector and industry, financial transactions, taxation, environment, construction, land use, native title, zoning, utilities use (water, gas and electricity), and contract or common law
- strata, community and company titles
- tenancy agreements
- trade practices laws and guidelines.

Specialist advice may be sought from:

- architects
- bankers and financiers
- developers
- land economists
- members of industry associations
- planners
- solicitors
- taxation and accounting practitioners
- valuers.

Sources of information
may include:

- consultants
- industry and organisational databases
- information services
- press clippings
- published industry data, including industry indices
- third parties
- trade journals.
Analysis may include:

- computer modelling
- examination of cash flows and other financial projections
- examination of collected data
- quantitative and qualitative analysis
- probability analysis
- time series recognition.

Communication techniques may include:

- active listening
- clear presentation of options
- consultation methods
- culturally inclusive and sensitive engagement techniques
- questioning to clarify and confirm understanding
- seeking feedback
- two-way interaction
- using language and concepts appropriate to cultural differences
- verbal or non-verbal language.

Environment may relate to:

- competitors
- environmental issues, such as water, noise and air
- financial markets
- leasing and tenanting arrangements or prospects
- market share
- neighbours
- property stakeholders
- situational issues
- size, location and nature of property
- stability of property, industry and market.

Comparative market data may include:

- best practice information
- national and international benchmarking
- inter-organisation comparison data.

Risk factors that may influence the complexity of the feasibility study may include:

- constraints on use
- existing land use and ownership
- government zoning and restrictions
- project financing
- staging of investment or development
- structure of leases
- type and number of tenants.

Contingencies may relate to:

- budget constraints
- building delays
- competing work demands of contractor
- environmental factors, such as time and weather.
• industrial disputes
• non-availability of resources and materials
• public holidays and shut-down periods
• equipment and technology breakdown
• unforeseen incidents
• workplace hazards, risks and controls.

Consultative processes may include:
• face-to-face meetings
• telephone, facsimile and written communication.

Benchmarks may include:
• building operational costs
• business strategy parameters
• economic parameters
• financial constraints
• historical operational costs
• industry published building occupation data
• market expectations
• research data
• statutory costs.

Market conditions may relate to:
• availability of alternatives
• business confidence
• economic conditions
• level of competition.

Business equipment and technology may include:
• computers
• data storage devices
• email
• facsimile machines
• internet, extranet and intranet
• photocopiers
• printers
• scanners
• software applications, such as databases and word applications.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, the range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Overview of assessment

This unit of competency could be assessed through practical demonstration of establishing and coordinating a strata/community management agreement. Targeted written (including alternative formats where necessary) or verbal questioning to assess the candidate's underpinning knowledge would provide additional supporting evidence of competence. The demonstration and questioning would include collecting evidence of the candidate's knowledge and application of ethical standards and relevant federal, and state or territory legislation and regulations. This assessment may be carried out in a simulated or workplace environment.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

A person who demonstrates competency in this unit must be able to provide evidence of:

- consulting with relevant people, conducting a risk analysis, and interpreting sourced information to establish accurate management agreement requirements
- organising appropriate resources and support processes according to budget parameters
- knowledge of organisation's practices, ethical standards and legislative requirements associated with establishing and coordinating a strata/community management agreement
- preparing a management agreement within required timeframes incorporating strategies that address risk management, insurance coverage and resource requirements
- using evaluation techniques to review project processes and implementing recommendations for improvement.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Resource implications for assessment include:

- a registered provider of assessment services
- assessment materials and tools
- candidate special requirements
- competency standards
- cost and time considerations
- suitable assessment venue and equipment
- workplace documentation.

Where applicable, physical resources should include equipment modified for people with disabilities.

Access must be provided to appropriate learning and/or assessment support when required.

Assessment processes and techniques must be culturally appropriate, and appropriate to the language and literacy capacity of the candidate and the work being performed.

Validity and sufficiency of evidence require that:

- competency will need to be demonstrated over a period of time reflecting the scope of the role and the practical requirements of the workplace
- where the assessment is part of a structured learning experience the evidence collected must relate to a number of performances assessed at different points in time and separated by further learning and practice with a decision of competence only taken at the point when the assessor has complete confidence in the person's competence
- all assessment that is part of a structured learning experience must include a combination of direct, indirect and supplementary evidence
- where assessment is for the purpose of recognition (RCC/RPL), the evidence provided will need to be current and show that it represents competency demonstrated over a period of time
- assessment can be through simulated project-based activity and must include evidence relating to each of the elements in this unit.

In all cases activity and must include evidence relating to each of the where practical assessment is used it will be combined with targeted questioning to assess the underpinning knowledge. Questioning will be undertaken in such a manner as is appropriate to the language and literacy levels of the candidate and any cultural issues that may affect responses to the questions, and will reflect the requirements of the competency and the work being performed.
Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording in the performance criteria is detailed below. 4.5 Business equipment and technology are used to securely maintain documentation according to legislative and organisational procedures.

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level, required for this unit.

Required skills:

- analytical skills to interpret and evaluate documentation, assess risks and estimate costings and budget needs
- communication skills to negotiate and consult with relevant people
- computing skills to access the internet and web pages, prepare and complete online forms, lodge electronic documents and search online databases
- interpersonal skills to relate to people from a range of social, cultural and ethnic backgrounds and varying physical and mental abilities
- literacy skills to interpret written and oral information
- organisational skills to schedule and meet time lines and client requirements and to plan maintenance requirements and resource use
- research and evaluation skills to source asset maintenance information and resource requirements and to review and evaluate strategy
- technical skills to schedule tasks and report outcomes.
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

Required knowledge and understanding:

- basic knowledge of property contracts and administrative requirements
- building codes and relevant Australian standards
- building construction practice
- building control legislation
- common hazards to public and personal safety associated with particular types of maintenance work in buildings
- industry benchmarks for maintenance procedures
- limitations of work role, responsibility and professional abilities
- OHS issues and requirements
- organisational and professional procedures, ethical practices and business standards
- relevant building service, trades and operation for maintenance operations
- relevant federal and state or territory legislation and local government regulations related to:
  - anti-discrimination
  - consumer protection

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, the range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Overview of assessment

This unit of competency could be assessed through practical demonstration of determining asset maintenance requirements and implementing and reviewing appropriate strategies to meet the needs of individual clients. Targeted written (including alternative formats where necessary) or verbal questioning to assess the candidate's underpinning knowledge would provide additional supporting evidence of competence. The demonstration and questioning would include collecting evidence of the candidate's knowledge and application of ethical standards and relevant federal, and state or territory legislation and regulations. This assessment may be carried out in a simulated or workplace environment.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

A person who demonstrates competency in this unit must be able to provide evidence of:

- designing a maintenance strategy that includes procedures to select maintenance contractors and ensure the safety and security of clients and others
- determining maintenance system requirements and intervals using industry benchmarks and OHS considerations
- determining asset maintenance requirements and implementing and reviewing appropriate strategies to meet the needs of individual clients
- knowledge of organisation's practices, ethical standards and legislative requirements associated with preparing a detailed budget, including a risk analysis and estimate of resource requirements
- reviewing and evaluating an asset maintenance strategy and presenting the results.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Resource implications for assessment include:

- a registered provider of assessment services
- assessment materials and tools
- candidate special requirements
- competency standards
- cost and time considerations
- suitable assessment venue and equipment
- workplace documentation.

Where applicable, physical resources should include equipment modified for people with disabilities.

Access must be provided to appropriate learning and/or assessment support when required.

Assessment processes and techniques must be culturally appropriate, and appropriate to the language and literacy capacity of the candidate and the work being performed.

Validity and sufficiency of evidence require that:

- competency will need to be demonstrated over a period of time reflecting the scope of the role and the practical requirements of the workplace
- where the assessment is part of a structured learning experience the evidence collected must relate to a number of performances assessed at different points in time and separated by further learning and practice with a decision of competence only taken at the point when the assessor has complete confidence in the person’s competence
- all assessment that is part of a structured learning experience must include a combination of direct, indirect and supplementary evidence
- where assessment is for the purpose of recognition (RCC/RPL), the evidence provided will need to be current and show that it represents competency demonstrated over a period of time
- assessment can be through simulated project-based activity and must include evidence relating to each of the elements in this unit.

In all cases activity and must include evidence relating to each of the where practical assessment is used it will be combined with targeted questioning to assess the underpinning knowledge. Questioning will be undertaken in such a manner as is appropriate to the language and literacy levels of the candidate and any cultural issues that may affect responses to the questions, and will reflect the requirements of the competency and the work being performed.
Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording in the performance criteria is detailed below. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Assets may be static or dynamic and may include:
- buildings
- business and marketing contracts
- equipment
- furniture
- goodwill
- land
- facilities
- vehicles.

Maintenance may include:
- backups
- changing user codes
- confirmation of operational effectiveness
- identification and replacement of worn parts
- inspection, lubrication, cleaning and adjustments
- routine repairs.

Relevant documentation may include:
- certification, including inspection certificates
- costings, receipts and invoices
- logs of equipment and system problems or faults
- operational checks and maintenance conducted
- parts and components replaced and materials used
- planning permits
- property leases, plans or contracts
- recommendations for repairs
- service and maintenance records
- testing and commissioning results
- warranty conditions and allowances.

Legislative requirements may be outlined and reflected in:
- Australian standards, and quality assurance and certification requirements
- award and enterprise agreements
- codes of practice covering the market sector and industry, financial transactions, taxation, environment, construction, land use, native title, zoning, utilities use (water, gas and electricity), and contract or common law
• environmental and zoning laws affecting access security, access and property use
• general duty of care to clients
• home building requirements
• local regulations and by-laws
• relevant federal, and state or territory legislation that affects organisational operation, including:
  • anti-discrimination and diversity
  • environmental issues
  • EEO
  • industrial relations
  • OHS
• relevant privacy laws
• strata, community and company titles
• tenancy agreements

Industry benchmarks may include:
• discounted cash flow
• employment rates
• industry association performance index
• inflation rate
• internal rate of return
• life cycle costing
• published vacancy factors
• tenancy mix.

Maintenance strategy may include:
• cleaning
• electrical
• emergency lighting
• evacuation
• fire lighting
• garden
• housekeeping
- painting
- pests
- plumbing
- sanitary disposal
- security
- vertical movement
- waste disposal
- weather proofing.

Clients may include:
- building supervisors
- government and legal instruments or agencies
- institutions
- insurers
- internal and external property groups
- legal advisers
- private investors
- property agents and property owners
- risk assessors
- tenants.

Maintenance methods may include:
- internal employee services
- lease contractual obligations
- outsourcing of external contracts with arms length organisations.

Safety and security requirements may be satisfied through:
- adherence to OHS policies and procedures for the containment of:
  - emergency situations, including fire, flood, bomb threats, suicide attempts or other actions likely to lead to property or bodily threat
  - potential health and safety hazards, such as physical, mechanical or chemical agents already in the work environment, or brought to the environment, or created as a by-product of work done on the site.

Specialist advice may be sought from:
- architects
- bankers and financiers
- builders
- government officials
- investment consultants
- members of industry associations
- planners
- real estate agents
- solicitors
- subcontractors
- technical experts.
Resources may relate to:
- materials
- personnel
- tools and equipment
- training
- transport.

Relevant people may include:
- agents
- clients
- engineers and technicians
- government personnel
- installers
- legal representatives
- management and colleagues
- members of industry associations
- property owners
- site personnel
- subcontractors
- technical experts
- tenants
- tradespeople.

Communication strategies may include:
- active listening
- clear presentation of options
- consultation methods
- culturally inclusive and sensitive engagement techniques
- questioning to clarify and confirm understanding
- seeking feedback
- two-way interaction
- using language and concepts appropriate to cultural differences
- verbal or non-verbal language.

Evaluation methods could be qualitative or quantitative and may include:
- checklists
- cost data analysis
- expert and peer review
- interviews
- observation
- questionnaires
- review of quality assurance data.

Business equipment and technology may include:
- data storage devices
- email
- facsimile machines
- internet, extranet and intranet
- photocopiers
- printers
- scanners
- software applications, such as databases and word applications
- work computers.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, the range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Overview of assessment

This unit of competency could be assessed through practical demonstration of promoting and maintaining positive public relations for the enterprise and property industry. Targeted written (including alternative formats where necessary) or verbal questioning to assess the candidate's underpinning knowledge would provide additional supporting evidence of competence. The demonstration and questioning would include collecting evidence of the candidate's knowledge and application of ethical standards and relevant federal, and state or territory legislation and regulations. This assessment may be carried out in a simulated or workplace environment.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

A person who demonstrates competency in this unit must be able to provide evidence of:

- conducting media interviews that provide clear and accurate information in a professional manner, and are appropriate and sensitive to the audience
- maintaining positive relationships and networks with the media and industry personnel through effective communication and interpersonal techniques
- promoting and maintaining positive public relations for the enterprise and property industry
- knowledge of organisation's practices, ethical standards and legislative requirements associated with preparing and distributing media releases that present a positive image for the property or client
- reviewing work processes to include feedback from colleagues and clients on strategies to further improve and maintain relationships and networks.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Resource implications for assessment include:

- a registered provider of assessment services
- assessment materials and tools
- candidate special requirements
- competency standards
- cost and time considerations
- suitable assessment venue and equipment
- workplace documentation.

Where applicable, physical resources should include equipment modified for people with disabilities.

Access must be provided to appropriate learning and/or assessment support when required.

Assessment processes and techniques must be culturally appropriate, and appropriate to the language and literacy capacity of the candidate and the work being performed.

Validity and sufficiency of evidence require that:

- competency will need to be demonstrated over a period of time reflecting the scope of the role and the practical requirements of the workplace
- where the assessment is part of a structured learning experience the evidence collected must relate to a number of performances assessed at different points in time and separated by further learning and practice with a decision of competence only taken at the point when the assessor has complete confidence in the person's competence
- all assessment that is part of a structured learning experience must include a combination of direct, indirect and supplementary evidence
- where assessment is for the purpose of recognition (RCC/RPL), the evidence provided will need to be current and show that it represents competency demonstrated over a period of time
- assessment can be through simulated project-based activity and must include evidence relating to each of the elements in this unit.

In all cases activity and must include evidence relating to each of the where practical assessment is used it will be combined with targeted questioning to assess the underpinning knowledge. Questioning will be undertaken in such a manner as is appropriate to the language and literacy levels of the candidate and any cultural issues that may affect responses to the questions, and will reflect the requirements of the competency and the work being performed.

  - anti-discrimination
  - consumer protection
  - environmental issues
  - equal employment opportunity (EEO)
  - financial probity
  - franchise and business structures
  - industrial relations
  - OHS
  - privacy
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- property sales, leasing and management
- risk management associated with property or facility performance.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, the range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Overview of assessment
This unit of competency could be assessed through practical demonstration of monitoring the ongoing performance of a property or facility portfolio. Targeted written (including alternative formats where necessary) or verbal questioning to assess the candidate's underpinning knowledge would provide additional supporting evidence of competence. The demonstration and questioning would include collecting evidence of the candidate's knowledge and application of ethical standards and relevant federal, and state or territory legislation and regulations. This assessment may be carried out in a simulated or workplace environment.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit
A person who demonstrates competency in this unit must be able to provide evidence of:

- conducting research of relevant documentation and legislation and accurately determining client performance expectations through consultation
- developing an assessment process, and measuring performance of portfolio against set criteria
- knowledge of organisation's practices, ethical standards and legislative requirements associated with monitoring the ongoing performance of a property or facility portfolio
- monitoring portfolio performance using data analysis methods and identifying variations in performance expectations
- providing advice and recommendations to clients based on a comprehensive evaluation of portfolio performance, including feedback using business equipment and technology.

Context of and specific resources for assessment
Resource implications for assessment include:

- a registered provider of assessment services
• assessment materials and tools
• candidate special requirements
• competency standards
• cost and time considerations
• suitable assessment venue and equipment
• workplace documentation.

Where applicable, physical resources should include equipment modified for people with disabilities.

Access must be provided to appropriate learning and/or assessment support when required.

Assessment processes and techniques must be culturally appropriate, and appropriate to the language and literacy capacity of the candidate and the work being performed.

Validity and sufficiency of evidence require that:

• competency will need to be demonstrated over a period of time reflecting the scope of the role and the practical requirements of the workplace
• where the assessment is part of a structured learning experience the evidence collected must relate to a number of performances assessed at different points in time and separated by further learning and practice with a decision of competence only taken at the point when the assessor has complete confidence in the person's competence
• all assessment that is part of a structured learning experience must include a combination of direct, indirect and supplementary evidence
• where assessment is for the purpose of recognition (RCC/RPL), the evidence provided will need to be current and show that it represents competency demonstrated over a period of time
• assessment can be through simulated project-based activity and must include evidence relating to each of the elements in this unit.

In all cases activity and must include evidence relating to each of the where practical assessment is used it will be combined with targeted questioning to assess the underpinning knowledge. Questioning will be undertaken in such a manner as is appropriate to the language and literacy levels of the candidate and any cultural issues that may affect responses to the questions, and will reflect the requirements of the competency and the work being performed.
Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording in the performance criteria is detailed below. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Performance may relate to:
- concepts and plans
- customer service outcomes
- productive use of property and assets
- strategies and placement of capital in property for investment.

Relevant people may include:
- accountants
- analysts
- clients
- government personnel
- legal representatives
- management and colleagues
- members of industry associations
- taxation specialists.

Organisational requirements may be outlined and reflected in:
- access and equity principles and practice guidelines
- business and performance plans
- complaint and dispute resolution procedures
- emergency and evacuation procedures
- employer and employee rights and responsibilities
- goals, objectives, plans, systems and processes
- legal and ethical requirements and codes of practice

• architects
• bankers and financiers
sought from:

- builders
- environmental auditors
- government officials
- investment consultants
- members of industry associations
- real estate agents
- solicitors
- technical experts
- valuers.

Performance of portfolio

may be influenced by:

- capacity to improve assets
- capital growth versus short-term gain
- cash flows
- change to organisational structure
- demographics
- gearing possibilities
- geographic aspects
- limits to financial resources
- return on investment
- return versus risk
- taxation considerations
- type of property or facility.

Market conditions

may relate to:

- availability of alternatives
- business confidence
- economic conditions
- level of competition.

Industry benchmarks

may include:

- discounted cash flow
- employment rates
- industry association performance index
- inflation rate
- internal rate of return
- life cycle costing
- published vacancy factors
- tenancy mix.

Recommendations

may include:

- new finance arrangements
- new tenant or lease arrangements
- rebuilding
- redeveloping
- refitting
- refurbishment and fit-outs
- renovation
- repackaging.
Business equipment and technology may include:
- computers
- data storage devices
- email
- facsimile machines
- internet, extranet and intranet
- photocopiers
- printers and scanners
- software applications, such as databases and word applications.

Feedback may be obtained from:
- clients and colleagues
- legal representatives
- documentation and reports
- quality assurance data
- questionnaires
- regular meetings.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, the range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Overview of assessment

This unit of competency could be assessed through practical demonstration of conducting an assessment of investment feasibility. Targeted written (including alternative formats where necessary) or verbal questioning to assess the candidate's underpinning knowledge would provide additional supporting evidence of competence. The demonstration and questioning would include collecting evidence of the candidate's knowledge and application of ethical standards and relevant federal, and state or territory legislation and regulations. This assessment may be carried out in a simulated or workplace environment.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

A person who demonstrates competency in this unit must be able to provide evidence of:

- analysing market information to identify economic trends, market developments and risk factors
- documenting and presenting investment feasibility study using appropriate business equipment and technology
- formulating investment scenarios against industry benchmarks
- knowledge of organisation's practices, ethical standards and legislative requirements associated with conducting an assessment of investment feasibility
- sourcing documentation and information through consultation to establish study aims and objectives, and make initial comparisons of similar properties
- sourcing market and environmental information to identify factors affecting study.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Resource implications for assessment include:

- a registered provider of assessment services
- assessment materials and tools
- candidate special requirements
- competency standards
- cost and time considerations
- suitable assessment venue and equipment
- workplace documentation.

Where applicable, physical resources should include equipment modified for people with disabilities.

Access must be provided to appropriate learning and/or assessment support when required.

Assessment processes and techniques must be culturally appropriate, and appropriate to the language and literacy capacity of the candidate and the work being performed.
Validity and sufficiency of evidence require that:

- competency will need to be demonstrated over a period of time reflecting the scope of the role and the practical requirements of the workplace
- where the assessment is part of a structured learning experience the evidence collected must relate to a number of performances assessed at different points in time and separated by further learning and practice with a decision of competence only taken at the point when the assessor has complete confidence in the person's competence
- all assessment that is part of a structured learning experience must include a combination of direct, indirect and supplementary evidence
- where assessment is for the purpose of recognition (RCC/RPL), the evidence provided will need to be current and show that it represents competency demonstrated over a period of time
- assessment can be through simulated project-based activity and must include evidence relating to each of the elements in this unit.

In all cases activity and must include evidence relating to each of the where practical assessment is used it will be combined with targeted questioning to assess the underpinning knowledge. Questioning will be undertaken in such a manner as is appropriate to the language and literacy levels of the candidate and any cultural issues that may affect responses to the questions, and will reflect the requirements of the competency and the work being performed.
Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording in the performance criteria is detailed below. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, the range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Overview of assessment

This unit of competency could be assessed through practical demonstration of assessing and formulating a viable property investment strategy. Targeted written (including alternative formats where necessary) or verbal questioning to assess the candidate's underpinning knowledge would provide additional supporting evidence of competence. The demonstration and questioning would include collecting evidence of the candidate's knowledge and application of ethical standards and relevant federal, and state or territory legislation and regulations. This assessment may be carried out in a simulated or workplace environment.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

A person who demonstrates competency in this unit must be able to provide evidence of:

- interpreting and applying applicable legal, ethical and organisational requirements
- establishing investment requirements and expectations through an assessment of consultation and sourced market information
- formulating a property investment strategy, including identified investment options and a defined risk management plan
- knowledge of organisation's practices, ethical standards and legislative requirements associated with assessing and formulating a viable property investment strategy
- testing the viability and performance of potential investment options against investment parameters
- using suitable analysis methods and techniques to identify and assess economic trends and market data and developments.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Resource implications for assessment include:

- a registered provider of assessment services
- assessment materials and tools
- candidate special requirements
- competency standards
- cost and time considerations
- suitable assessment venue and equipment
- workplace documentation.

Where applicable, physical resources should include equipment modified for people with disabilities.

Access must be provided to appropriate learning and/or assessment support when required.

Assessment processes and techniques must be culturally appropriate, and appropriate to the language and literacy capacity of the candidate and the work being performed.

Validity and sufficiency of evidence require that:

- competency will need to be demonstrated over a period of time reflecting the scope of the role and the practical requirements of the workplace
- where the assessment is part of a structured learning experience the evidence collected must relate to a number of performances assessed at different points in time and separated by further learning and practice with a decision of competence only taken at the point when the assessor has complete confidence in the person's competence
- all assessment that is part of a structured learning experience must include a combination of direct, indirect and supplementary evidence
- where assessment is for the purpose of recognition (RCC/RPL), the evidence provided will need to be current and show that it represents competency demonstrated over a period of time
- assessment can be through simulated project-based activity and must include evidence relating to each of the elements in this unit.

In all cases activity and must include evidence relating to each of the where practical assessment is used it will be combined with targeted questioning to assess the underpinning knowledge. Questioning will be undertaken in such a manner as is appropriate to the language and literacy levels of the candidate and any cultural issues that may affect responses to the questions, and will reflect the requirements of the competency and the work being performed.
Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording in the performance criteria is detailed below.
