Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is best assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace under the normal of range conditions
- Assessment should be gathered on one or more occasions but must reflect the normal range of client situations encountered in the workplace
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice is encouraged with other community services units of competency, such as:
  - CHCFLE302A Educate clients in fundamental financial literacy skills
  - CHCFLE303A Educate clients to understand debt and consumer credit
- Resources required for assessment of this unit include access to:
  - an appropriate workplace where assessment can take place or simulation of realistic workplace setting for assessment
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on ‘What if?’ scenarios.
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes.
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a ‘period of time’ and/or in a ‘number of locations’, any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills in the application of working effectively with a psycho-educational group
- Evidence of competency in this unit will need to be assessed over a period of time in order to gather evidence of performance
- This will include contexts applicable to the work environment, such as actual or simulated workplace situations involving a combination of direct, indirect and supplementary forms of evidence
- Assessment must confirm sufficient ability to effectively facilitate and review a psycho-educational group

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Context of and specific resources for assessment:
- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment include access to an appropriate workplace or simulation of realistic workplace setting where assessment can take place

Method of assessment:
- Evidence for assessment of competence may be gathered by appropriate combination of the following:
  - demonstration of competency within the working environment through the facilitation and review of psycho-educational groups as a guide, current international benchmarks for psycho-educational group work is thirty hours of supervised practice
  - realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'what if?' scenarios, case presentations, written assessment
  - observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questions on essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
  - where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a period of time and/or in a number of locations, any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons
  - The assessment environment should not disadvantage the candidate
  - Assessment practices should take into account any relevant language or cultural issues related to Aboriginality, gender or language barriers other than English
  - Where the candidate has a disability, reasonable adjustment may be applied during assessment
  - Language and literacy demands of the assessment task should not be higher than those of the work role

- The outcomes of participation in a psycho-educational group may involve changes in beliefs, values and ideas and will often result in changes to behaviour as a result of these
- The focus for other groups may include:
  - Task/work groups which involve organisation settings for group and team work and where the focus is to complete a task or set of tasks
  - Group counselling which is a less structured group and involves specifically working with individuals’ issues within the group context
  - Group psychotherapy which is a less structured group that focuses on individual experiences where participants have not had their emotional needs met during childhood and have developed some psychopathology
RANGE STATEMENT

Selection process may include:

- Suitable group members are identified based on the relevance of the group to meeting their personal needs
- Matching of appropriateness of group content and planned processes to potential participants
- Ensuring sufficient similarity is shared between the group members to allow learning and trust to develop
- Consideration of the ability of the group members to fulfil the requirements of the group and achieve a satisfactory attendance
- Consideration of an existing or identified community issue

Selection criteria which may include:

- relevance of target issues for the client
- age
- gender
- life circumstances or situations
- location
- ability to commit to group process

Screening activities which may include:

- phone interview
- one-on-one discussions
- referral information
- responses to questionnaires

Consideration of appropriateness of the psycho-educational group to meet the needs of the client including:

- suitability for intervention focus
- presence of serious mental illness
- drug and alcohol abuse
- incompatibility with selection criteria
- language, literacy, numeracy and education abilities prevent effective engagement with program and achievement of program outcomes

Learning activities may include but is not limited to:

- Fish-bowls
- Written reflections
- Drawings/collages
- Dyads and triads
- Creative props
- Fantasy reflections
- Reading reflections
- Experiential exercises
- Values clarifications
- Group discussion
- Video questions
- Miracle questions:
  - 'You wake up tomorrow morning and a miracle has happened, your problem has less affect on you'
  - On a scale of 0 to 5 how much is the problem now affecting you?
  - How will you know things have improved? What will be different?
  - What will others notice is different?'
- Scaling questions:
  - 'On a scale of 0-5, how much is the problem affecting you?'
  - scaling questions help to identify the problem, set achievable goals, have a starting point for change, notice what is already working well, identify strengths and limitations, and measure progress
- Discussing teachable moments
- Letter writing exercises
RANGE STATEMENT

Effective facilitation of learning may include:

- Engagement of group members at commencement of the group:
  - recognised by leader and called by name
  - have learned one thing
  - something about the group is attractive to them
  - know what to expect in the next session

- Clear communication:
  - active listening
  - body language
  - I-messages
  - clarifying
  - responding
  - modelling respectful language and behaviour in the group

- Responding to group dynamics:
  - conflict between group members
  - conflict between group members and the group leader
  - boredom and disinterest

- Managing conflict within the group:
  - responding to strong emotional expression in the group
  - cutting off scape-goating and personal attacks
  - clarifying and normalising feelings
  - sensitively challenging where required
  - addressing appropriate underlying issues

- Protecting self whilst leading/facilitating the group:
  - appropriate self-disclosure
  - clear purpose for self-disclosure
  - supervision and debriefing difficult sessions

- The use of strengths-based approaches for the development of growth and learning:
  - identification of the potential for positive change
  - articulating positive change that has already occurred
  - identifying blocks or challenges for further change to occur

- Managing silent periods within a group situation:
  - identification of silence that allows people to
RANGE STATEMENT

- recognising the value and importance of appropriate silence
- building on new learning once the silence has finished

continued ...

Effective facilitation of learning may include: (contd)
- Debriefing group members after an intervention has been used:
  - recognition of feelings and new learning
  - recognition of challenges
  - identification of the further need for more debriefing
- Maintaining appropriate boundaries and safety:
  - confidentiality and mandatory reporting requirements
  - appropriate supervision of the facilitator/s during the life of the group
  - recognition of the type of group facilitated
  - transparent group environment
  - personal disclosure
  - sensitivity to individual readiness
  - appropriate expression of feelings
  - use of interventions where sufficient training exists
  - appropriate closure of group sessions or group program
  - referral to other services as necessary
  - appropriate debriefing after the use of interventions

Phases of the group must include:
- Tuning-in phase
- Beginning phase
- Middle phase
- Termination phase
RANGE STATEMENT

Group work may include:
- When working with groups consideration of relevant group work theory for example:
  - Tuckman
  - Lang
  - Heron
  - Schwartz

Inclusive work practice must include:
- The ability to work effectively and inclusively with the whole client, considering the full range of possible influences in their lives including personality, culture, language, religion, age, gender, family of origin, education levels, learning abilities, health, disabilities and issues and the interplay and dynamics of each of these
- To work inclusively requires the worker to respond respectfully to the whole person demonstrating cultural competence through sensitively valuing each and every person as a whole unique individual

Follow up may include:
- Writing up of program outcomes and evaluations
- Documenting the program for statistical and reporting requirements
- Follow up with program participants to ensure their needs have been met or to provide additional referral where required

5.1 Assess participants' understanding of key concepts and achievement of learning objectives during delivery

5.2 Identify additional issues raised which are not addressed within the scope of the program and initiate referral or follow up action to address them

5.3 Conduct program evaluation according to program evaluation process and complete reporting in line with requirements

5.4 Gather and assess feedback on program to guide continuous improvement of delivery

5.5 Review effectiveness of implementation with co-facilitator or supervisor

5.6 Identify opportunities to improve program delivery

Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- Group selection processes
- Relevant subject matter of the delivery
- The content and requirements of the learning program and/or delivery plan
- Learner group profile including characteristics and needs of individual learners in the group
- Different delivery methods and techniques appropriate to face-to-face group delivery
- Adult learning theory and models
- Behaviours in group participants which may indicate difficulties with content or
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- Conflict resolution and mediation
- Evaluation/revision techniques, for example:
  - development of assessment criteria
  - developing simple questionnaires and feedback forms
  - administering evaluation forms
  - using questioning for evaluation purposes
- Specific resources and support services available for group participants including those with special needs
- Organisation and program requirements for evaluation and reporting

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Effectively facilitate a group including being able to:
  - facilitate discussion and group interaction
  - maintain group cohesion
  - handle difficult situations
  - manage group activities
  - manage conflict
  - observe and interpret behaviour that puts others at risk
- Apply adult learning theory and techniques
- Apply different delivery and facilitation methods/techniques, such as:
  - demonstration/modelling
  - instruction
  - presentations/lectures
  - guided facilitation of individual and group learning activities/group work/case studies
  - initiating and facilitating group discussions
  - brainstorming activities
  - enabling and supporting effective learner participation
- Use time and process management skills within a group facilitation context
- Model effective, respectful and inclusive communication skills including listening, empathetic responding, paraphrasing, summarising, questioning, body language, models of conflict resolution, assertiveness, tact and sensitivity
- Maintain records appropriate to the group
- Work effectively and inclusively with the whole client, considering the full range of possible influences in their lives including personality, culture, language, religion, age, gender, family of origin, education levels, learning abilities, health, disabilities and issues and the interplay and dynamics of group members

- Demonstrate awareness of self, own values, beliefs and experiences which may impact on work practice
- Engage in critical reflection and self-evaluation of work practice
- Respond appropriately to group dynamics
- Protect self whilst leading/ facilitating the group
- Respond to strong emotional expression in the group

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills in the application of the planning, delivery and review of short, structured programs within identified resources including timeframes
- Evidence of competency in this unit will need to be assessed over a period of time in order to gather evidence of performance
- This will include contexts applicable to the work environment, such as actual or simulated workplace situations involving a combination of direct, indirect and supplementary forms of evidence
- Assessment must confirm sufficient ability to deliver short, structured programs to groups
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment include access to an appropriate workplace or simulation of realistic workplace setting where assessment can take place
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Method of assessment:

- Evidence for assessment of competence may be gathered by appropriate combination of the following:
  - demonstration of competency within the working environment through the facilitation of short structured groups selected through appropriate application of a selection process
  - realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'what if?' scenarios, case presentations, written assessment
  - observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questions on essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
  - where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a period of time and/or in a number of locations, any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons

- The assessment environment should not disadvantage the candidate
- Assessment practices should take into account any relevant language or cultural issues related to Aboriginality, gender or language barriers other than English
- Where the candidate has a disability, reasonable adjustment may be applied during assessment
- Language and literacy demands of the assessment task should not be higher than those of the work role

Related units:

This unit is to be assessed after or in conjunction with the following related unit of competency:

- CHCGROUP403D Plan and conduct group activities

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Special needs may include:
- Those associated with:
  - potential for self-harm
  - disability
  - literacy level
  - travel
  - childcare
  - cultural influences or protocols

Pre-group assessment may include but is not limited to:
- Phone interview
- One-on-one discussions
- Referral information

Conditions potentially incompatible with program objectives may include:
- Mental illness
- Domestic and family violence issues
- Drug and alcohol abuse
- Incompatibility with selection criteria
- Language, literacy, numeracy and education abilities prevent effective engagement with program and achievement of program outcomes

Selection criteria may include:
- Location
- Life circumstances or situations
- Relevance to target issues
- Age
- Gender
- Ability to commit to group process
- Suitability for intervention focus

Boundaries and limitations of program may include:

- That the program is designed to touch on many issues but not cover them in depth and is not designed to:
  - provide counselling
  - act as a support group
  - act as a forum for story telling
  - deal with advocacy issues

Presentation tools may include:

- Overhead projector
- Whiteboard
- Flip paper
- Butcher's paper
- Powerpoint presentations
- Case studies, scenarios
- Pictures, photographs, diagrams

Support services may include but is not limited to:

- Other professionals within own service
- Other programs offered by own or other services
- Self-help/support groups
- Counselling services
- Alcohol and other drug support services
- Mental health support services
- Domestic and family violence support services
- Financial assistance and counselling services
- Child Support Agency
- Family Magistrate Service
- Centrelink/Family Assistance Office
- Mediation centres
- Australian Taxation Office
- Family Court of Australia
- Phone support services, e.g. Mensline
- Family relationship centres
- Other agencies providing support and counselling
- Websites for example MENDS and Parenting Children
- Stepfamily Association of Australia

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:
The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- Theoretical models and frameworks for working with groups including:
  - ecosystems theory and their influence on people and relationships
  - group work specialisations and the role of psycho-educational group work
  - development or modification of existing psycho-educational programs to suit group members needs
  - relevant models for stages of group development
  - different types of group leadership
  - dynamics in groups
- Current best practice in relation to psycho-educational groups including:
  - appropriate boundaries for psycho-educational groups
  - models and tools for facilitating a psycho-educational group
  - appropriate criteria and processes for selection of psycho-education groups
  - appropriate record-keeping processes for the psycho-education group
- Adult learning principles

Essential skills:
It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Facilitate a psycho-educational group in the community
- Identify and articulate and apply knowledge of theoretical frameworks and models of group work including ecosystems theory to identify connections between learning in a group and wider life experiences and explore these connections with members of the group and the group as a whole
- Work effectively and inclusively with the whole client, considering the full range of possible influences in their lives including personality, culture, language, religion, age,
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- gender, family of origin, education levels, learning abilities, health, disabilities and issues and the interplay and dynamics of each of these
- Implement best practice in psycho-education
- Engage in critical reflection and self-evaluation of work practice
- Use clear and appropriate communication
- Respond appropriately to group dynamics
- Effectively manage conflict within the group
- Protect self whilst leading/facilitating the group
- Respond to strong emotional expression in the group
- Use strengths-based approaches for the development of growth and learning for group members
- Maintain records appropriate to the group
- Maintain awareness of self, own values, beliefs and experiences which may impact on work practice

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills in the application of theoretical frameworks and models for working with groups, specifically in the application of ecosystems theory in the facilitation of a psycho-education group.
- Evidence of competency in this unit will need to be assessed over a period of time in order to gather evidence of consistent performance.
- This will include contexts applicable to the work environment, such as actual or simulated workplace situations involving a combination of direct, indirect and supplementary forms of evidence.
- Assessment must confirm sufficient ability to work effectively with psycho-education groups applying ecosystems theory.

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work.
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment.
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people.
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities.

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged.
- Resources required for assessment include access to an appropriate workplace or simulation of realistic workplace setting where assessment can take place.
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Method of assessment:

- Evidence for assessment of competence may be gathered by appropriate combination of the following:
  - demonstration of competency within the working environment through the facilitation of psycho-educational groups using ecosystems theory
  - realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'what if?' scenarios, case presentations, written assessment
  - observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questions on essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
  - where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a period of time and/or in a number of locations, any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons

- The assessment environment should not disadvantage the candidate
- Assessment practices should take into account any relevant language or cultural issues related to Aboriginality, gender or language barriers other than English
- Where the candidate has a disability, reasonable adjustment may be applied during assessment
- Language and literacy demands of the assessment task should not be higher than those of the work role

Related units:

This unit should be assessed after or in conjunction with the following related unit of competency:

- CHCGROUP403D Plan and conduct group activities

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

_Ecosystems and the interplay between and within ecosystems may include:_

- Ecosystems may include group, family, work, political, cultural, religious, social, physical, gender, economic, organisation environments
- Interplay between and within ecosystems will exist whereby the individual members within an ecosystem and members from different ecosystems will interact with each other in a continuing dynamic which will impact on the functioning and effectiveness of the group and achievement of individual and shared goals
- Impact of facilitator/leader on ecosystems and the affect of the group on the facilitator/leader

Theoretical frameworks for group work may include:

- Four aspects of a psychosocial approach to group work:
  - intrapersonal processes which:
    - assume that group behaviour is primarily influenced by the internal life of the participants
    - focus on personality characteristics and inner conflicts
  - interpersonal processes which
    - assume that group behaviour is primarily influenced by the group member to group member interactions
    - focus on quality and type of relationships that exist between the participants, communication patterns, and information flow, level of trust/conflict and relating styles between participants
  - group level (group-as-a-whole) processes in which:
    - it is assumed that the whole group social system and how individual participants relate to that system primarily influence group behaviour
    - when an individual acts, he or she is not acting only on his/ her own behalf, but on behalf of the group or parts of the group
    - the participant’s behaviours are seen as a vehicle through which the group expresses its life
  - inter-group processes in which:
    - it is assumed that group behaviour is primarily understood through relationships between various groups and sub-groups
    - inter-group relations can be based on sex, race, age, cultural identities, roles and ideological differences
- These frameworks can be used by group leaders to assist them to understand group behaviour
RANGE STATEMENT

Group may include:

- Groups covered by this unit are psycho-educational groups
  - these are structured designs that help participants develop knowledge and skills for coping adaptively with potential or immediate problems, developmental transitions, or life crises
  - participants in a psycho-educational group are able to apply their newly acquired knowledge and skills to current and future life circumstances beyond their experiences in the group
  - participants in a psycho-educational group have the capacity to learn from each other as well as from the facilitator and the program activities
  - the outcomes of participation in a psycho-educational group may involve changes in beliefs, values and ideas and will often result in changes to behaviour as a result of these

- The focus for other groups may include:
  - task/work group which involves organisation settings for group and team work and where the focus is to complete a task or set of tasks
  - group counselling which is a less structured group and involves specifically working with individuals' issues within the group context
  - group psychotherapy which is a less structured group that focuses on individual experiences where participants have not had their emotional needs met during childhood and have developed some psychopathology

Connections within the group may include:

- The social choices and interactions that group members use to communicate with other group members using non-verbal and verbal expression

Effective facilitation of learning may include:

- Engagement of group members at commencement of the group:
  - recognised by leader and called by name
  - have learned one thing
  - something about the group is attractive to them
  - know what to expect in the next session

- Clear communication:

- Responding to group dynamics:
  - conflict between group members
  - conflict between group members and the group leader
  - boredom and disinterest

- Managing conflict within the group:
  - responding to strong emotional expression in the group
  - cutting off scapegoating and personal attacks
  - clarifying and normalising feelings
  - addressing appropriate underlying issues

- Protecting self whilst leading/ facilitating the group:
  - appropriate self-disclosure
  - clear purpose for self-disclosure
  - supervision and debriefing difficult sessions

- The use of strengths-based approaches for the development of growth and learning:
  - identification of the potential for positive change
  - articulating positive change that has already occurred
  - identifying blocks or challenges for further change to occur

- Managing silent periods within a group situation:
  - identification of silence that allows people to learn
RANGE STATEMENT

- recognising the value and importance of appropriate silence
- building on new learning once the silence has finished

continued ...

Effective facilitation of learning may include: (contd)

- Debriefing group members after an intervention has been used:
  - recognition of feelings and new learning
  - recognition of challenges
  - identification of the further need for more debriefing
- Maintaining appropriate boundaries and safety:
  - confidentiality and mandatory reporting requirements
  - appropriate supervision of the facilitator/s during the life of the group
  - recognition of the type of group facilitated
  - transparent group environment
  - personal disclosure
  - sensitivity to individual readiness
  - appropriate expression of feelings
  - appropriate closure of group sessions or group program
  - referral to other services as necessary
  - appropriate debriefing after the use of interventions

Phases of the group must include:

- Tuning-in phase
- Beginning phase
- Middle phase
- Termination phase

Needs of individuals may include:

- The physical, emotional, intellectual and psychological needs that group members have whilst attending a group

Needs of the group may include:
- The common physical, emotional, intellectual and psychological needs that are shared by the group members whilst attending a group.

Inclusive work practice must include:
- The ability to work effectively and inclusively with the whole client, considering the full range of possible influences in their lives including personality, culture, language, religion, age, gender, family of origin, education levels, learning abilities, health, disabilities and issues and the interplay and dynamics of each of these.
- To work inclusively requires the worker to respond respectfully to the whole person demonstrating cultural competence through sensitively valuing each and every person as a whole unique individual.

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include:
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- Understanding of the group work specialisations and the role of psycho-educational group work
- Current best practice in relation to psycho-educational groups
- Models and tools for facilitating a psycho-educational group
- Appropriate boundaries for psycho-educational groups
- Adult learning principles
- Stages of group development and theories and models for working with groups
- Range of activities/interventions/strategies

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Develop or modify existing psycho-educational programs to suite group members needs
- Work effectively and inclusively with the whole client, considering the full range of possible influences in their lives including personality, culture, language, religion, age, gender, family of origin, education levels, learning abilities, health, disabilities and issues and the interplay and dynamics of each of these
- Implement best practice in psycho-education
- Engage in critical reflection and self-evaluation of work practice including an awareness of self, own values, beliefs and experiences which may impact on work practice
- Facilitate a range of suitable interventions
- Use clear and appropriate communication
- Respond appropriately to group dynamics
- Effectively manage conflict within the group
- Protect self whilst leading/ facilitating the group
- Respond to strong emotional expression in the group
- Use strengths-based approaches for the development of growth and learning for group members
- Use supervision to support work practice including debriefing and reflective work practice

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills to effectively deal with disclosures and disruptions when facilitating psycho-educational groups.
- Evidence of competency in this unit will need to be assessed over a period of time in order to gather evidence of consistent performance.
- This will include contexts applicable to the work environment, such as actual or simulated workplace situations involving a combination of direct, indirect and supplementary forms of evidence.
- Assessment must confirm sufficient ability to manage disclosures and disruptions in psycho-educational groups.

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work.
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment.
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people.
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities.
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged.
- Resources required for assessment include access to an appropriate workplace or simulation of realistic workplace setting where assessment can take place.

Method of assessment:

- Evidence for assessment of competence may be gathered by appropriate combination of the following:
  - demonstration of competency within the working environment through the effective facilitation of psycho-educational groups including managing disclosures and disruptions. as a guide, current international benchmark for psycho-educational group leaders is thirty hours of supervised practice.
  - realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'what if?' scenarios, case presentations, written assessment.
  - observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questions on essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes.
  - where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a period of time and/or in a number of locations, any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons.
- The assessment environment should not disadvantage the candidate.
- Assessment practices should take into account any relevant language or cultural issues related to Aboriginality, gender or language barriers other than English.
- Where the candidate has a disability, reasonable adjustment may be applied during assessment.
- Language and literacy demands of the assessment task should not be higher than those of the work role.

Related units: This unit is to be assessed after or in conjunction with the following related units of competency:
- CHCFAM407B Work effectively in relationship work
- CHCGROUP403D Plan and conduct group activities
- CHCGROUP408B Facilitate and review a psycho-educational group

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Possible reactions may include:
- Display of strong emotions including, grief, guilt, anger, excitement
- Challenging, confrontational and argumentative behaviour
- Withdrawal, disengagement from group and group processes
- Attempts to dominate group processes
- Attempts to sabotage group, undermine group processes

Psycho-educational group includes:

- Structured designs that help participants develop knowledge and skills for coping adaptively with potential or immediate problems, developmental transitions, or life crises
- Participants in a psycho-educational group are able to apply their newly acquired knowledge and skills to current and future life circumstances beyond their experiences in the group
- Participants within a psycho-educational group have the capacity to learn from each other as well as from the facilitator and the program activities
- The outcomes of participation in a psycho-educational group may involve changes in beliefs, values and ideas and will often result in changes to behaviour as a result of these
- The focus for other groups may include:
  - task/work group which involves organisation settings for group and team work and where the focus is to complete a task or set of tasks
  - group counselling which is a less structured group and involves specifically working with individuals’ issues within the group context
  - group psychotherapy which is a less structured group that focuses on individual experiences where participants have not had their emotional needs met during childhood and have developed some psychopathology

Alternatives and responses to possible reactions may include:

- Respectful acknowledgement of differences of beliefs, values, opinions and perspectives and individual's rights to these
- Acknowledgement of respective rights and responsibilities and perceptions of all participants
- Relevant principles and practice of conflict resolution are clarified and confirmed and agreement sought to implement these where required
- Offering alternative exercises and / or activities which can be undertaken without threatening the comfort levels of the group participant
- Sensitive and assertive re-focusing of group from individual to group issues and processes
- Linking individual experiences to group outcomes through use of relevant examples
- Shift from whole group to small group, pair or individual activities to redirect energy, diffuse tensions and ensure opportunities for engagement for all participants
- Debriefing of individual outside of the group which may include referral to other services
- Future exclusion from the group in extreme circumstances where continued participation significantly undermines the group outcomes and the participant's needs are clearly unable to be met

Support strategies may include:

- Encouraging the participant to identify when their own personal boundaries for operating comfortably within the group are in danger of being exceeded
- Establishing avenues for support including buddy system within the group, permission to self-select time out from the group either by physically leaving or by engaging in individual activity for example journal work, emotional regulation strategies, relaxation exercises
- Referral to counselling or other support services

Inclusive work practice must include:

- The ability to work effectively and inclusively with the whole client, considering the full range of possible influences in their lives including personality, culture, language, religion, age, gender, family of origin, education levels, learning abilities, health, disabilities and issues and the interplay and dynamics of each of these.
- To work inclusively requires the worker to respond respectfully to the whole person demonstrating cultural competence through sensitively valuing each and every person as a whole unique individual.

Disclosure may include:

- Child sexual assault
- Separation and divorce
- Adoption
- Sexual assault
- Family domestic violence
- Mandatory reporting
- Experience of violence
- Workplace harassment
- Alcohol and other drug use
- Gambling
- Illness

Phases of the group must include:

- Tuning-in phase
- Beginning phase
- Middle phase
- Termination phase

Group work may include:

- Consideration of relevant group work theory, for example:
  - Tuckman
  - Lang
  - Heron
  - Schwartz

Disruptive behaviour may include:

- Angry outburst
- Emotional outburst
- Conflict with other group member
- Conflict with facilitator
- Disagreement with group content
- Disagreement with group purpose
- Disagreement with group activity

Supervision may include:

- Formal and/or informal supervision sessions
- Group supervision
- Telephone supervision
- Peer appraisals (where appropriate levels of experience exist)
- Internal or external supervision
- Journals
- Videotapes of facilitation of groups
- Co-facilitation and reports from these
- Reflecting on practice
- Negotiation of supervision between the supervisor and the supervisee
- Establishment and shared understanding of the roles and responsibilities of the supervision process
- Activities undertaken through the development of an appropriate professional relationship
- Considering the growth of the person, their professional development, gaining of knowledge, skills, attitudes for the further development of their professional practice

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- Relevance of theoretical frameworks used in group work
- Relevant models for indifferent stages of group development
- Different types of group leadership
- Effective communication strategies
- Working knowledge of appropriate responses to disclosure
- Self awareness and understanding of the impact this may have on the process and effective group counselling leadership

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Identify relevant models for stages of group development
- Use effective communication in group setting
- Address individual issues while maintaining the focus of the whole group
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- Implement group interventions and debriefing processes
- Effectively manage the group
- Develop and maintain a positive group environment
- Link group changes to wider life experiences of the group members
- Facilitate the referral of individuals whose needs cannot be met within the group

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The person being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- Observation of workplace performance is preferred for assessment of this unit
- Consistency of performance should be demonstrated over a period of time in order to ensure consistency of performance over contexts applicable to the workplace
- The candidate will need to demonstrate competence in the following contexts:
  - observe group interactions and link the issues being discussed within the group to an appropriate theoretical framework
  - establish appropriate safety and boundaries within a group context
  - facilitate interventions in response to individual and group needs
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Access and equity considerations:
- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work

Context of and specific resources for assessment:
- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment include access to an appropriate workplace or simulation of realistic workplace setting where assessment can take place

Method of assessment:
- Observation in the workplace of applied group work processes and small group facilitation (if possible)
- Written assignments/projects or questioning should be used to assess knowledge
- Case study and scenario as a basis for discussion of issues and strategies to contribute to best practice.
- The assessment environment should not disadvantage the candidate
- Assessment practices should take into account any relevant language or cultural issues related to Aboriginality, gender or language barriers other than English
- Where the candidate has a disability, reasonable adjustment may be applied during assessment
- Language and literacy demands of the assessment task should not be higher than those of the work role
Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Boundaries to maintain group members safety may relate to:
- Transparent group environment
- Personal disclosure
- Appropriate expression of feelings
- Use of interventions where sufficient training exists
- Appropriate closure of group sessions or group program
- Appropriate debriefing after the use of interventions
- Appropriate professional behaviour

Group interventions may include:
- Impact of different interventions
- Types of interventions include:
  - use of immediacy in discussions
  - unstructured group discussions
  - structured exercises
  - use of role play and sculpture

Ecosystems may include:
- Ecosystems may include group, family, work, political, cultural, religious, social, physical, economic, organisation environments
- Interplay between and within ecosystems
- Impact of facilitator/leader on ecosystems and the affect of the group on the facilitator/leader

Support change through different group phases may include:
- Change owned and directed by individual group members
- Negotiating the timing of individual and group interventions
- Individuals identifying positive progress regarding their personal goals
- Negotiating choice in the context of group work

Connections may include:
- The social choices and interactions that group members use to communicate with other group members using non-verbal and verbal expression

Individual needs may include:
- The physical, emotional, intellectual and psychological needs that group members have whilst attending a group
- Their reason for initially attending a counselling group

Collective focus may include:
- The common physical, emotional, intellectual and psychological needs that are shared by the group members have whilst attending a group.
- The shared purpose that guides the group discussion on a routine basis

Confidentiality may include:
- The basic right for privacy of each individual group members.
- Group members and the issues they discuss should not be discussed outside the group context unless:
  - for the purpose of professional supervision
  - due to mandatory notification of child protection matters
  - the possibility of self-harm or violence to others

Social systems may include:

- The physical and social environment (physical, social, cultural, emotional, psychological, religious factors) that has a significant affect on group members' life
- Identification of how group member interactions in a group situation support or influence the physical and social environment they experience in the rest of their life

Theoretical frameworks for group work may include:

- Intrapersonal processes - Assumes that group behaviour is primarily influenced by the internal life of the participants. Focuses on personality characteristics and inner conflicts
- Interpersonal processes - Assumes that group behaviour is primarily influenced by the group member to group member interactions. Focus on quality and type of relationships that exist between the participants, communication patterns, information flow, level of trust/conflict and relating styles between participants
- Group level (group-as-a-whole) processes - Assumes that the whole group social system and how individual participants relate to that system primarily influence group behaviour. When an individual acts, he or she is not acting only on his/her own behalf, but on behalf of the group or parts of the group. The participant's behaviours are seen as a vehicle through which the group expresses its life
- Intergroup processes - Assumes that group behaviour is primarily understood through the relationships between various groups and sub-groups. Intergroup relations can be based on sex, race, age, cultural identities, roles and ideological differences

Group interventions may include:

- Dealing with group flight/fight:
  - stage of group development
  - intrapersonal issues
  - interpersonal issues
  - group-as-a-whole issues
- Responding to conflict:
  - cutting off
  - identifying key issue
  - connecting conflict in group with wider context
- Working in the here-and-now:
  - identifying discussion themes
  - balancing cognitive, affective and action
  - connecting group discussions with individual goals and learning
  - identifying the uniqueness of individual group members
- Modelling of appropriate responses
- Responding to group members who monopolise and dominate may include:
  - cutting off
  - refocusing
  - exploring the broader issues around the monopolising by group member/s
- Removal of group members where appropriate:
  - self-disclosure
  - timing
  - appropriateness
  - purpose
- Structured interventions:
  - use of structured exercises to aid learning
RANGE STATEMENT

Individual, sub-group level and group-as-a-whole level may include:

- Interventions that focus on change at either an:
  - individual level (change in an individual occurs when the intervention is focuses on one individual)
  - sub-group level (change in an individual occurs when the intervention is focuses on a small group of group members)
  - group-as-a-whole level (change in an individual occurs when the intervention is focuses on working with the whole group of group members)

Transference may include:

- Transference: Feelings and reactions that are placed on the group leader by the group members
- Counter-transference: Feelings and reactions that are placed on the group members by the group leader:
  - Interpersonal learning: learning that occurs between group members
  - Inappropriate/out of context behaviour
  - Repetitious/reoccurring behaviours
  - Intense/over the top reactions
  - Ambivalence and emotional withdrawal
  - Conflictual interactions

Counter-transference may include:

- Emotional withdrawal
- Conflictual interactions
- Stress reactions

Interpersonal learning may involve:

- Corrective emotional experiences
- Dynamic interaction between members and the group
- Group as social microcosm
- Individual differences and group learning
- Recognition of behavioural patterns

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Prepare group members may include:

- Establishment of appropriate norms at the individual and group level:
  - punctuality
  - regular attendance
  - appropriate focus for group discussion (free association)
  - honesty in feedback
  - socialising with members outside of the group
  - eating, drinking and chewing gum and smoking in the group
  - alcohol or other drug use before the group

Therapeutic alliance for change may include:

- Therapeutic alliance:
  - Development of curative factors operating in a group environment (Yalom, 2000)

- Meaning attribution:
  - Application of learning within the group to the wider life context of each group member

- Defenses:
  - Responses that group members adopt when faced with a challenge, including:
    - altruism
    - group cohesiveness
    - interpersonal learning
    - guidance
    - catharsis
    - identification with and modelling of other group members
    - family re enactment
    - self-understanding
    - instillation of hope
    - universality
    - existential factors (new reflections on life)

Evaluate continuous interventions may include:

- The effect the intervention had on the group members and group interaction at cognitive, affective and behavioural levels
RANGE STATEMENT

Key transitions and stages of group development may include:
- Range of changes that group experience at the following transitions:
  - pre-group
  - group commencement
  - working stage of a group
  - group termination

Group interventions may be cognitive, affective and behaviourally focused and may include:
- Group interventions that primarily focus on change at either of the following levels:
  - cognitive
  - affective (emotional)
  - behavioural

Meaning attribution may include:
- Individual experience and reflection on life

Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- Importance of modelling
- Importance of listening
- The range of children's feelings and reactions to key events in their lives
- The importance of consistent communication of guidelines for children's behaviour
- Organisation standards, policies and procedures

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Communicate verbally and non-verbally and set and apply appropriate limits, taking into account child's age, development, culture and needs

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:

- Demonstrate application of skills including:
  - interpersonal relationship
  - active listening
  - use and respond to non-verbal communication and cues of children
Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit must be assessed on the job under the normal workplace conditions for a range of age groups, a range of conditions, over a number of assessment situations

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment of this unit include access to a range of opportunities defined in the Range Statement, including:
  - a childcare workplace
  - children's services, resources and equipment
  - the local environment
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios.
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes.
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Be accessible for the child may include:

- Proximity to child
- Making eye contact
- Working at child's level

Communication with children will vary according to the age of the child

Some examples are:

For babies and infants
- Worker responds to non-verbal cues and decides whether a response is required
- Initiation or reflection of babbling and cooing
- Responds to crying in ways that meets the babies/infants need

For toddlers
- Responds to verbal and non-verbal communication of the toddler
- Spend sufficient time to respond to child's comments

For 3 to 5 year olds
- Conversations during routines and experiences

For 6 to 12 year olds
- Interactions are more reciprocal
- Communication focuses on events that are important
- Interactions are often informal in nature

The application of guidelines and limits will vary according to the age of the child

Some examples are:

For babies and infants
- Saying no
- Remove child from problem/trouble
- Distract to another activity

For toddlers:
- Patiently respond, provide a consistent message

For 3 to 5 year olds:
- Communicate the guidelines of the service clearly

For 6 to 12 year olds
- Will involve discussions with children e.g. About the reason the guideline is required

Service policies on response to behaviour may include:
- Accurate documentation of incident
- Report incidents to colleagues, more senior workers or appropriate authority

Limits and guidelines may cover:

- Out of bounds areas
- Expectations about behaviour with other children/adults
- Procedures for health and safety

Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:
The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- Range of legislation, standards and regulations that apply to children service workers and the children services environment
- Organisation policies and procedures for ensuring compliance with regulations, standards and legislation
- Relationship between quality assurance standards and regulations
- Relevant bodies with carriage and enforcement responsibilities for standards, regulations and legislation
- Variance in regulatory compliance across jurisdictions
- Organisations process for maintaining up to date knowledge of compliance requirements in the children's services industry

Essential skills:
It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Locate and interpret copies of regulations and quality assurance standards provided by the children's services workplace
- Apply regulations and quality assurance standards for children's services workers into daily duties
- Seek clarification to increase understanding of regulatory requirements and how to apply them in the job role
- Self reflect and monitor own compliance with regulatory requirements
- Communicate with others about complex information such as legislation and related materials for quality assurance standards and regulatory requirements
- Use technology to access information on legislation, standards and regulations related to children's services
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:

- Use literacy skills to read and interpret complex information
- Follow processes and guidelines as required to implement regulatory requirements in the workplace
- Assess situations of non compliance and identify implications and consequences of non compliance for the children, organisation, worker and others

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace setting under the normal range of workplace conditions
- Assessment must demonstrate consistency of application of skills and knowledge described in this unit of competency
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Access and equity considerations:
- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work.
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment.
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people.
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities.

Context of and specific resources for assessment:
- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged.
- Resources required for assessment include access to relevant workplace or simulated realistic workplace setting where assessment may take place.

Method of assessment:
- Assessment may include observation, questioning and evidence gathered from a workplace environment.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit could be assessed on the job or off the job through an appropriate workplace simulation for a range of age groups, and a range of conditions, over a number of assessment situations

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment of this unit include access to a range of opportunities defined in the Range Statement, including:
  - a childcare workplace
  - children's services, resources and equipment
  - the local environment
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios.

- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes.

- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

Positive behaviour may be promoted by:

- Verbal comments and attention
- Physical contact e.g. hug
- Providing physical and psychological space
- Opportunities that suit the child's preferences
- Opportunities to 'let off steam' are created
- Acknowledgment and encouragement

Limits and guidelines may cover:

- Out of bounds areas
- Expectations about behaviour with other children/adults
- Procedures for health and safety

Methods to promote positive behaviour will vary according to the age of the child

Some examples are:

For babies, infants and toddlers:

- Smiles
- Attention
- Distraction

For 3 to 5 year olds:

- Choice of favourite activity
- Praise, encouragement
- Anticipating trouble and redirecting or distracting child

For 6 to 12 year olds:

- Non-verbal communication appropriate to age and peer group
- Talking about feelings
- Modelling

For some developmentally delayed children these may be used in addition:

- Tangible rewards
- Charts

Expectations of children's behaviour will be demonstrated differently according to the age of the child

Some examples are:

For babies and infants
- Smiling
- Clapping verbal and non-verbal approval

For toddlers:
- Modelling
- Repetition of guidance's for appropriate behaviour e.g. 'we walk inside'
- Talking about appropriate behaviour

For 3 to 5 year olds:
- Reasons for guidelines are explained

For 6 to 12 years old:
- Children will be involved in the establishing of guidelines

Guidelines are communicated to:
- Children, especially those new to the service
- Parents
- Potential users of the service
- Relief or other staff
RANGE STATEMENT

The application of guidelines and limits will vary according to the age of the child:

For babies and infants:
- Saying 'no' and using the child's name e.g. 'James, no' with use of appropriate facial expressions and tone of voice
- Remove child from problem/trouble
- Distract to another activity

For toddlers:
- Patiently respond, provide a consistent message
- Acknowledge feelings
- Provide appropriate activities to release feelings
- Reason for limit is explained in simple terms to child

For 3 to 5 year olds:
- Provide a consistent message
- Acknowledge feelings
- Provide appropriate activities to release feelings

For 6 to 12 year olds:
- Children are involved in the establishment of guidelines
- Written guidelines can be given to children
- Periodically reviewing guidelines

Needs of the child which may influence the worker's response to a serious incident of behaviour may be due to:
- Family crisis
- Family stress and problems
- Major changes in the child's profile

Other circumstances which may influence the worker's response include:
- Location of incident
- Risk to child or others
- Other potential or actual consequences

Incidents causing concern may be reported according to the service's guidelines to:
- Parent/s of the child
- Parent/s of other children affected
- Co workers
- Management/supervisor
RANGE STATEMENT

Service policy and procedures on response to serious incidents or behaviour may include:

- Accurate documentation
- Report incidents to colleagues and more senior workers

Communication that may be used to consult and collaborate with children include:

- Verbal and written and non-verbal
- In a group or individual discussions
- On regular basis and spontaneous
- Surveys/evaluations
- Requests, chatting
- Discussions, meetings
- Suggestion boxes
- Anecdotal
- Listening to informal conversations

Ways in which children are encouraged to consider new ideas and interests may be through:

- Encouraging children to consult with each other
- New and stimulating material is presented to children
- Children's ideas are shared with others in a group situation

Resources that are limited may include:

- Physical environment
- Equipment
- Time available
- Staff numbers
- Budget
- Space

Safety and legal requirements may include:

- Staff ratios
- Behavioural or medical problems
- Duty of care responsibilities
- 'Unsafe' policy
- Staff ratio for excursions
- High risk activities
- Weather
- Location of activity

Children can be consulted about all their interests including:

- Food
- Discipline policies
- Activities
- Programming
- Behaviour
- Parents
- Staff

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- Cultural practices, beliefs and expectations and impact on child care delivery
- Emerging issues and inclusive practices related to cultural diversity and worker cultural competence
- Demonstrated understanding of diverse family and social structures and experiences that impact on practices required to ensure inclusiveness in the workplace.
- Organisation standards, policies and procedures
- Services providing support to families from diverse cultural backgrounds including:
  - services for migrant and refugee status
  - relevant Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander programs and services

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Demonstrate acceptance and respect for children and families irrespective of their socioeconomic status, culture, gender, colour of skin, race, ability, family type, belief system or lifestyle
- Demonstrate challenge of own biases/stereotyped expectations of children and families and reflection on practice and specific ways of interacting with a child who has a different experience, etc

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:

- Apply interpersonal skills with a range of groups
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- Develop appropriate educational activities
- Use effective language, literacy and numeracy skills as required for the work role, including those required to develop, implement, review and promote programs, resources and activities to support inclusion

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit could be assessed either on the job or off the job through an appropriate workplace simulation for a range of age groups, a range of conditions, over a number of assessment situations

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged.
- Resources required for assessment of this unit include access to a range of opportunities defined in the Range Statement, including:
  - a childcare workplace
  - children’s services, resources and equipment
  - the local environment

Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios.
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes.
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons.

Related units:

This unit is to be assessed in conjunction with related unit:

- CHCPR510A Design, implement and evaluate programs and care routines for children

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge and understanding of:

- Understanding of own work role and responsibilities
- Processes and strategies to support people with personal care needs
- Basics of body hygiene and grooming
- Basics of oral hygiene
- Knowledge to interpret a personal care support plan, including terminology, basic understanding/knowledge of human body systems, goals, objectives, actions
- Personal safety and security risks associated with provision of personal care support
- Strategies to minimise personal safety and security risks associated with provision of personal care support
- Role of carers
- Common equipment and aids utilised in provision of personal care support
- Principles and practices of confidentiality and privacy
- Principles and practices in undertaking technical skills associated with supporting/assisting people to meet personal care needs
- Significance of service setting including specific contexts of supporting personal care needs in a residential care setting and in a client’s private home
- Work health and safety (WHS) issues and procedures, (including those related to manual handling and infection control)

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Follow organisation policies and protocols
- Liaise and report appropriately to supervisor and/or health professionals
- Make informed observations and report appropriately
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- Adhere to own work role and responsibilities
- Obtain relevant information from a personal care support plan
- Provide physical and psychosocial support to the person when assisting with personal care needs
- Provide personal care support within the individual personal care context
- Respond to a client's personal preferences wherever appropriate
- Provide general hygiene and grooming including physical ability to:
  - perform personal care tasks
  - provide oral hygiene
  - perform client lifting and use moving methods
  - use aids and equipment

- Communicate effectively with people requiring personal care support
- Identify variations to personal care support requirements
- Identify and respond to risks associated with providing personal care support
- Demonstrate safe and effective use of workplace technology in line with work health and safety (WHS) guidelines

Essential skills (contd):

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role

These include the ability to:

- Apply reading and writing skills required to fulfil work role in a safe manner and as specified by the organisation/service:
  - this requires a level of skill that enables the worker to follow work-related instructions and directions and the ability to seek clarification and comments from supervisors, clients and colleagues
  - industry work roles will require workers to possess a literacy level that will enable them to interpret international safety signs, read client's service delivery plans, make notations in clients records and complete workplace forms and records
- Apply oral communication skills required to fulfil work role in a safe manner and as specified by the organisation:
  - this requires a level of skill that enables the worker to follow work-related instructions and directions and the ability to seek clarification and comments from supervisors, clients and colleagues
  - industry work roles will require workers to possess oral communication skills that will enable them to ask questions, clarify understanding, recognise and interpret non-verbal cues, provide information and express encouragement

- Apply numeracy skills required to fulfil work role in a safe manner and as specified by the organisation:
  - industry work roles will require workers to be able to perform basic mathematical functions, such as addition and subtraction up to three digit numbers and multiplication and division of single and double-digit numbers
- Apply basic problem solving skills to resolve problems of limited difficulty within organisation protocols
- Work effectively with clients, colleagues and supervisors

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- It is recommended that assessment or information for assessment will be conducted or gathered over a period of time and cover the normal range of workplace situations and settings
- This unit must be assessed in a work context and under the normal range of workplace conditions
- Where, for reasons of safety, space, or access to equipment and resources, some assessment takes place away from the workplace, the assessment environment should represent workplace conditions as closely as possible
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Access and equity considerations:
- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:
- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment include access to:
  - appropriate workplace where assessment can take place
  - relevant organisation policy, protocols and procedures
  - WHS industry guides
  - health care checklists, health management plans, personal healthcare diaries
  - equipment and resources normally used in the workplace

Method of assessment may include:
- Observation in the workplace
- Written assignments/projects
- Case study and scenario analysis
- Questioning
- Role play simulation

Unit Descriptor

Descriptor

This unit describes the knowledge and skills required to provide support for people to sustain quality of life according to individualised plans

Application of the Unit

Application

This unit is appropriate for application in a residential, home care or community care environment with clients who require support to address their personal needs and whose specific support requirements have been assessed and documented in an individualised care support plan.

In some settings, aspects of the plan may be assessed and delegated by a health professional and, in these cases, participation in these tasks must be within the limits established by the health professional.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- It is recommended that assessment or information for assessment will be conducted or gathered over a period of time and cover the normal range of workplace situations and settings
- This unit will be most appropriately assessed in the workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions
- Where, for reasons of safety, space, or access to equipment and resources, assessment takes place away from the workplace, the assessment environment should represent workplace conditions as closely as possible

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Context of and specific resources for assessment:
- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment include access to:
  - appropriate workplace where assessment can take place
  - relevant organisation policy, protocols and procedures
  - equipment and resources normally used in the workplace

Method of assessment may include:
- Observation in the workplace
- Written assignments/projects
- Case study and scenario analysis
- Questioning
- Role play simulation

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills.
- This unit will be most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions.
- It is recommended that assessment or information for assessment will be conducted or gathered over a period of time and cover the normal range of workplace situations and settings.
- Where, for reasons of safety, space, or access to equipment and resources, assessment takes place away from the workplace, the assessment environment should represent workplace conditions as closely as possible.

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work.
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment.
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people.
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities.

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged.
- Resources required for assessment include:
  - access to appropriate workplace where assessment can take place
  - Relevant organisation policy, protocols and procedures.
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Method of assessment may include:

- Observation in the workplace
- Written assignments/projects
- Case study and scenario analysis
- Questioning
- Role play simulation

Related units:

This unit of competency should be assessed after or in conjunction with related unit:

- CHCICS302A Participate in the implementation of individualised plans

AND

In the case of working with older people, the unit should be assessed after or in conjunction with:

- CHCAC318B Work effectively with older people

In the case of working with people with disabilities, the unit should be assessed after or in conjunction with:

- CHCDIS301B Work effectively with people with a disability

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Carer may include:

- Family members
- Other non paid support person e.g. friend

Carer needs may include:
- Affirmation
- Choice about involvement in specific aspects of care
- Education

- Observe a person's behaviour in an objective, non-judgemental manner
- Collect behavioural information and data relevant to a response plan
- Observe circumstances that have an adverse impact on people

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:

- Demonstrate application of knowledge and skills in:
  - crisis management (basic)
  - reporting procedures for incidents and accidents
  - referral procedures for specialist services
  - use of basic self protective strategies (e.g. passive self defence)
  - strategies that avoid behaviour escalation (basic)

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- Assessment should be conducted on more than one occasion to cover a variety of circumstances to establish consistency
- A diversity of assessment tasks is essential for holistic assessment
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work.
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment.
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people.
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities.

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged.
- Resource requirements include access to all relevant resources commonly provided in the service setting, including:
  - relevant organisation policy and procedure manuals, legislation and standards.
  - organisation mission statement, strategic and business plan.
  - other documentation relevant to the work context such as:
    - individual routines
    - staff routines
    - neuropsychological reports
    - behaviour support plans
    - data collection techniques
    - specific communication tools
    - skills development plans
    - accident and incident forms
    - referral forms
    - lifestyle review package
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Method of assessment:
- Observation of work performance
- Written tasks
- Interview and questioning
- Authenticated portfolio/log book
- Supporting statement of supervisor/s
- Authenticated evidence of relevant work experience and/or formal/informal learning

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Client may be:
- Individual or groups

Routines may include:
- Written plans that describe an individual's daily activities and strategies for engaging them in their daily activities.

Staff routines may include:
- Written plans that guide the activities of the staff for the individual/s they are providing support to
- They include skills development activities and behaviour support plans

Safe and predictable environment includes:
- Consistent application of routines and procedures
RANGE STATEMENT

Organisation policies and procedures may include:

- Behaviour management guidelines, work safety and health policies and procedures, emergency procedures

Behaviour likely to put the person and/or others at risk of harm may include those that:

- Have the potential for physical harm or destruction (e.g. hurting self or others, damaging property)
- Last for an excessively long time (e.g. either in a single incident or in multiple incidents over time, continued screaming, persistent scratching causing skin irritation)
- Isolate the person, it stops them from engaging in valued roles (with friends, family, community access, work) e.g. disinhibition, perseveration
- Interferes with the person's learning and developing new skills
- Reduces their quality of life (e.g. lack of motivation, depression)
- Are disruptive or are outside the rules of community living (e.g. yelling or singing loudly in a supported residential service, going into other people's rooms, making constant demands or repeatedly asking questions)
- Limits or delays access to the use of ordinary community facilities (e.g. inability to attend day centre due to poor personal hygiene)
- That make others feel uncomfortable or distresses the person themselves (e.g. sexually inappropriate behaviour such as groping breasts or masturbating in public)

Strategies to assist in managing behaviour may include:

- Lifestyle enhancement
- Skills development
- Structure and routine
- Teaching functional communication
- Reinforcement schedules
- Increasing engagement
- Teaching relaxation
- Active listening and observation
- Using effective communication
- Compensatory strategies (memory aids such as whiteboard, diary)
- Proximity management
- Interrupt and redirect
- Instructional education/facilitation
- Stimulus change (changing environment)
- Antecedent management
- Consequences (highlight potential difficulties in applying consequences in an attempt to change behaviour for people with ABI who have memory impairment and executive system dysfunction)
- Time out strategies
- Emergency containment strategies
- Behaviour support plans
- Time out strategies
- Team work and consistency
- Positive solution focused approaches
- Seeking expert assistance

Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:
The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include:

- Basic anatomy and physiology of the foot and basic understanding of foot pathology
- Basic pathology of nails
- Basic understanding of structure and functioning of skin and integuments
- Indicators suggestive of the need for podiatry assistance
- Infection control protocols relevant to foot care
- Principles of basic foot hygiene
- Record-keeping requirements
- Relevant organisation policies and procedures
- The function of medicaments, including:
  - emollients
  - astringents
  - moisturisers
  - antiseptics

Essential skills:
It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Wash, clean, dry and monitor feet of clients
- Safely and effectively file non-pathological toenails
- Identify indicators of pathological nail and skin conditions
- Apply medicaments, including:
  - emollients
  - astringents
  - moisturisers

- antiseptics

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:

- Apply appropriate occupational health and safety (OHS) and infection control requirements
- Effectively make appropriate referral based on organisation procedures and protocols
- Maintain relevant records
- Take into account and use opportunities to address waste minimisation, environmental responsibility and sustainable practice issues
- Use effective observation skills

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is best assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace under the normal range of conditions
- Consistency in performance should consider the particular workplace context
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Access and equity considerations:
- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:
- This unit can be delivered and assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment of this unit include access to:
  - an appropriate workplace where assessment can take place or simulation of realistic workplace setting for assessment

Method of assessment:
- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Equipment and materials may include:

- Files
- Medicaments, including:
  - antiseptics
  - astringents
  - emollients
  - moisturisers
- Personal protective equipment such as eyewear, gloves, masks

Indicators of foot issues requiring attention include:

- Altered nail status
- Altered skin integrity and status

Client may include:

- Clients at low risk of foot complications (may include older person and person with a disability)

Appropriate referral may include:

- Direct referral to podiatrist
- Informing carer
- Informing supervisor

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- It is recommended that assessment or information for assessment will be conducted or gathered over a period of time and cover the normal range of workplace situations and settings
- This unit will be most appropriately assessed in the workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions
- Where, for reasons of safety, space, or access to equipment and resources, assessment takes place away from the workplace, the assessment environment should represent workplace conditions as closely as possible
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment include access to:
  - appropriate workplace where assessment can take place
  - relevant organisation policy, protocols and procedures
  - WHS industry guides
  - health care checklists, health management plans, personal healthcare diaries
  - equipment and resources normally used in the workplace

Method of assessment may includes:

- Observation in the workplace
- Written assignments/projects
- Case study and scenario analysis
- Questioning
- Role play simulation
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Related units: This unit must be assessed in relation to the specific context in which it will (or may) be applied

In the case of working with older people, this unit is recommended (but not required) to be assessed in conjunction with:

- CHCAC318A Work effectively with older people

OR

In the case of working with people with disabilities, it is recommended (but not required) to be assessed in conjunction with:

- CHCDIS301A Work effectively with people with a disability

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Work with the client (and carer) may include:

- Questioning
- Formal assessment tool
- Demonstration
- Provision of personal care

Client may include:

4.8 Follow organisation policies and procedures related to behaviour support |
5. Monitor effectiveness of response plan

5.1 Monitor strategies to determine effectiveness in developing and maintaining positive and adaptive responses

5.2 Monitor strategies to determine reduction of risk of harm to the person and others

5.3 Monitor strategies to determine level of intrusion on person's dignity and self-esteem

6. Complete documentation

6.1 Comply with the organisation's reporting requirements

6.2 Complete documentation according to organisation policy and protocols

6.3 Maintain documentation in a manner consistent with reporting requirements

6.4 File documentation organisation policy and protocols
Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge and understanding of:

- Principles and practices which focus on the individual person
- The social model of disability
- The impact of social devaluation on an individual’s quality of life
- Competency and image enhancement as a means of addressing devaluation

- Observe a person’s behaviour in an objective, non-judgemental manner
- Observe circumstances that have an adverse impact on people
• Demonstrate mastery of techniques such as data collection, generating hypothesis and functional assessment
• Apply advanced crisis management strategies
• Develop an individual response plan
• Develop a crisis response plan
• Monitor the effectiveness of a response plan
• Demonstrate well developed problem solving skills
• Demonstrate application of knowledge and skills in:
  • reinforcement strategies including, sampling, menus, individualisation of schedules and differential reinforcement schedules
  • use of advanced self protective strategies (e.g. passive self defence)
  • strategies that avoid behaviour escalation (advanced)
  • advanced proactive strategies based on functional and cognitive assessment
Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- Assessment should be conducted on more than one occasion to cover a variety of circumstances to establish consistency
- A diversity of assessment tasks is essential for holistic assessment

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resource requirements include access to all relevant resources commonly provided in the disability service setting, including:
  - relevant organisation policy and procedure manuals, legislation and standards
  - organisation mission statement, strategic and business plan
  - other documentation relevant to the work context such as:
    - individual routines
    - staff routines
    - neuropsychological reports
    - behaviour support plans
    - data collection techniques
    - specific communication tools
    - skills development plans
accident and incident forms
lifestyle review package
functional assessment tools

Method of assessment:

- Observation of work performance
- Written tasks
- Interview and questioning
- Authenticated portfolio/log book
- Supporting statement of supervisor/s
- Authenticated evidence of relevant work experience and/or formal/informal learning
Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Client may be:

- Individual or groups

Pro-active strategies may include:

- Ecological manipulations - making changes in the persons environment that will reduce the likelihood of the behaviours of concern occurring
- Positive programming - long term instructional programs designed to give the person greater skills and competencies
- Focused support strategies - these include differential reinforcement strategies, stimulus control and instructional control

Organisation policies and procedures may include:

- Behaviour management guidelines
- Occupational safety and health policies and procedures
- Emergency procedures

Behaviours of concern may include those that:

- Have the potential for physical harm or destruction (e.g. hurting self or others, damaging property)
- Lasts for a long time (e.g. either in a single incident or in multiple incidents over time)
- Isolates the person, it stops them from engaging in valued roles (with friends, family, community access, work) e.g. disinhibition / perseveration / depression
- Interferes with the person's learning and developing new skills
- Reduces quality / enjoyment of life

Strategies to assist in reducing and managing behaviours of concern may include:

- Functional assessment
- Data collection
- Generating a hypothesis
- Multi-element support plans:
  - proactive
  - ecological manipulations e.g. making changes to the person's environment, changing the teaching method, reviewing and changing the learning goals
  - positive programming e.g. teaching general skills, teaching coping skills, teaching functionally equivalent skills
• focused support
e.g. differential reinforcement schedules
• Reactive strategies e.g. antecedent management, interrupt and redirect, geographical containment, emergency physical containment and individualised emergency management plans
• Seeking expert assistance

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment
- The individual being assessed must provide evidence and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- This unit will be most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions.
- It is recommended that assessment or information for assessment will be conducted or gathered over a period of time and cover the normal range of workplace situations and settings.
- Where, for reasons of safety, space, or access to equipment and resources, assessment takes place away from the workplace, the assessment environment should represent workplace conditions as closely as possible.

Access and equity considerations:
- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work.
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment.
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include understanding of:

- Own work role and responsibilities
- Client-centred philosophy and practices
- Empowerment and rights-based practices
- Strengths-based philosophy and practices
- Self-management in the context of a client with cognitive impairment
- Processes and strategies to support people to make informed choices and decisions
- Different cultural responses to chronic disease
- Risk analysis strategies and processes
- Work health and safety (WHS), risk assessment and risk management relevant to the job role
- Role of the worker within a human rights perspective

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Follow organisation policies and protocols
- Support a client to identify options across a range of variables such as support and service requirements, access requirements and lifestyle options
- Use facilitation skills to foster client-focused and strengths-based practice
- Liaise and report appropriately to supervisor and/or health professionals
- Adhere to own work role and responsibilities
- Identify and respond to risks for client, carer and worker associated with providing personal care
- Use appropriate communication strategies and tools
- Follow relevant WHS guidelines
- Work within a person-centred practice framework

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:

- Apply reading and writing skills required to fulfil work role in a safe manner and as specified by the organisation/service:
  - this requires a level of skill that enables the worker to follow work-related instructions and directions and the ability to seek clarification and comments from supervisors, clients and colleagues

- industry work roles will require workers to possess a literacy level that will enable them to interpret international safety signs, read client's service delivery plans, make notations in clients records and complete workplace forms and records

- Apply oral communication skills required to fulfil work role in a safe manner and as specified by the organisation:
  - this requires a level of skill that enables the worker to follow work-related instructions and directions and the ability to seek clarification and comments from supervisors, clients and colleagues
  - industry work roles will require workers to possess oral communication skills that will enable them to ask questions, clarify understanding, recognise and interpret non-verbal cues, provide information and express encouragement

- Apply numeracy skills required to fulfil work role in a safe manner and as specified by the organisation:
  - industry work roles will require workers to be able to perform basic mathematical functions, such as addition and subtraction up to three digit numbers and multiplication and division of single and double-digit numbers

- Apply basic problem solving skills to resolve problems of limited difficulty within organisation protocols

- Work effectively with clients, colleagues and supervisors

- Demonstrate safe and effective use of workplace technology in line with WHS and manual handling guidelines relevant to the jurisdiction and workplace

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- It is recommended that assessment or information for assessment will be conducted or gathered over a period of time and cover the normal range of workplace situations and settings
- This unit will be most appropriately assessed in the workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions
- Where, for reasons of safety, space, confidentiality or access to equipment and resources, assessment takes place away from the workplace, the assessment environment should represent workplace conditions as closely as possible

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:

- Apply reading and writing skills required to fulfil work role in a safe manner and as specified by the organisation/service:
  - this requires a level of skill that enables the worker to follow work-related instructions and directions and the ability to seek clarification and comments from supervisors, clients and colleagues
  - industry work roles will require workers to possess a literacy level that will enable them to interpret international safety signs, read client’s service delivery plans, make notations in clients records and complete workplace forms and records
- Apply oral communication skills required to fulfil work role in a safe manner and as specified by the organisation:
  - this requires a level of skill that enables the worker to follow work-related instructions and directions and the ability to seek clarification and comments from supervisors, clients and colleagues
- Industry work roles will require workers to possess oral communication skills that will enable them to ask questions, clarify understanding, recognise and interpret non-verbal cues, provide information and express encouragement
- Apply numeracy skills required to fulfil work role in a safe manner and as specified by the organisation:
  - Industry work roles will require workers to be able to perform basic mathematical functions, such as addition and subtraction up to three digit numbers and multiplication and division of single and double-digit numbers
- Apply basic problem solving skills to resolve problems of limited difficulty within organisation protocols
- Work effectively with clients, colleagues and supervisors
- Demonstrate safe and effective use of workplace technology in line with WHS guidelines

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- It is recommended that assessment or information for assessment will be conducted or gathered over a period of time and cover the normal range of workplace situations and settings
- This unit will be most appropriately assessed in the workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions
- Where, for reasons of safety, space, or access to equipment and resources, assessment takes place away from the workplace, the assessment environment should represent workplace conditions as closely as possible

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people

- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged

- Resources required for assessment include access to:
  - appropriate workplace where assessment can take place
  - relevant organisation policy, protocols and procedures
  - equipment and resources normally used in the workplace

Method of assessment may include:

- Observation in the workplace
- Written assignments/projects
- Case study and scenario analysis
- Questioning
- Role play simulation

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Lifestyle issues may include:

- Diet
- Exercise
- Work/life balance
- Alcohol
- Drugs and substances
- Smoking
- Side effects of prescribed medication

Supports may include:

- Financial
- Family
- Formal support networks
- Professional support, such as:
  - doctors
Facilitate access to services and/or resources may include:

- dieticians
- physiotherapists
- direct care workers
- psychologists
- psychiatrists
- teachers
- Friends
- Provision of information
- Formal referrals
- Supporting client to make contacts
- Assisting the client to attend sessions

Health and emotional well being may include:

- Identification to variations in health and emotional well being
- Referral to appropriate health and community professionals
- Reporting to the supervisor concerns/changes to client's health and well being
- Following the strategies identified in the client's support plan
- Identifying and reporting deficits in the client's support plan

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit will be most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions
- It is recommended that assessment or information for assessment will be conducted or gathered over a period of time and cover the normal range of workplace situations and settings
- Where, for reasons of safety, space, or access to equipment and resources, assessment takes place away from the workplace, the assessment environment should represent workplace conditions as closely as possible
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Access and equity considerations:
- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:
- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment include access to:
  - appropriate workplace where assessment can take place
  - relevant organisation policy, protocols and procedures

Method of assessment may include:
- Observation in the workplace
- Written assignments/projects
- Case study and scenario analysis
- Questioning
- Role play simulation

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Carers are defined as:
- Family members and friends who provide care and support for a person with a disability, and/or who is frail aged and/or has a mental illness and/or chronic condition

Strategies to support the rights of families and carers may include:
- Information about carer legislation
- Access to an assessment
- Information and access to complaint procedures
- Access to an independent advocate

Positive strategies for involving families and carers in the design and delivery may include:
- Encouraging positive contact between the family, carer and friends with the service
- Encouraging positive contact between the family, carer and friends with the client
- Consultation
- Provision of information in appropriate formats

Implications for carers may be:
- Changes in role, relationships, identity, family structure and dynamics
- Pathways into informal and formal care
- Planning for the future
- Accessing services and resources e.g. eligibility, waiting lists etc
- Social impacts e.g. isolation
- Financial impacts
- Family communication

Transitions may include:
- Pre caring
- Taking on a carer role
- Engaging formal services
- Life cycle transitions e.g. childhood, adolescence, young adulthood, middle and older age
- Client entry into day or overnight respite
- Client move from home to a supported residential setting
- End of life/palliative care

Strategies to maximise the positive aspects of transition may include:
- Acknowledge anxiety
- Provide opportunities for active involvement
- Maximise support structure
- Acknowledge loss and grief issues
- Promote the benefits of taking time for self care
- Provide reassurance

Strategies to support clients to maintain relationships through life cycle transitions may include:
- Sharing interests and meaningful activities together
- Sharing time and meals together
- Sharing feelings about any difficulties
- Mutual respect
- Having valued roles
- Privacy and confidentiality

Barriers to self care may include:
- Physical
- Emotional
- Spiritual
- Cultural
- Upbringing
- Personality
RANGE STATEMENT

Strategies may include:

- Learning about the client's condition
- Accessing supportive health professionals and services
- Pastoral care
- Self awareness
- Counselling
- Basics of healthy caring
- A self care plan

- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment of this unit include access to:
  - an appropriate workplace where assessment can be conducted or simulation of realistic workplace setting for assessment
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Method of assessment may include:
- Observations
- Questioning
- Evidence gathered from the workplace environment
- Demonstration over a period of time to ensure consistency of performance

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role. These include the ability to:

- Document variations using appropriate terminology
- Report identified variations of life stage development in line with industry requirements
Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified fundamental essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is most appropriately assessed in conjunction with units involving application of knowledge in a work context
- Essential knowledge covered in this unit is to be assessed before application in a work context, especially where client safety issues are involved
- Consistency in performance should consider the range of clients and situations encountered in the workplace

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment

EVIDENCE GUIDE

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit will be most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions
- It is recommended that assessment or information for assessment will be conducted or gathered over a period of time and cover the normal range of workplace situations and settings

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment of this unit include access to:
  - an appropriate workplace where assessment can be conducted
  - relevant organisation policy, protocols and procedures
  - resources normally used in the workplace
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Method of assessment may include:

- Observation in the workplace
- Written assignments/projects
- Presentation of portfolio of examples of work
- Case study and scenario analysis
- Questioning
- Role play simulation

Related units:

It is recommended (but not required) that this unit be assessed in conjunction with related unit:

- CHCAD401D Advocate for clients

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Consideration to be given in Australian States and Territories to different:

- Legislation and subordinate legislation such as regulations including the Acts Interpretation Act
- Support services, resourcing bodies, peak organisations
- Resources e.g. written material that interprets legislation
- Methods of dispute resolution e.g. tribunals, courts, alternative dispute resolution models

Factors influencing tenancy advisers include:
- Demographics of area servicing
- Size of community
- Cultural differences
- Rural, remote or metropolitan
- Situations causing conflict of interest for a tenancy advisor

Key stakeholders include:
- Administrators of the Act
- Industry groups

Unit Descriptor
Descriptor
This unit describes the skills and knowledge required by those providing language and literacy support to adult learners who wish to develop their core skills of oral communication, reading, writing and learning.

The unit provides the skills and knowledge to work with a supervisor to develop strategies and resources to reinforce language and literacy skills and to support learners during various phases in the development of their language and literacy competence.

Application of the Unit
Application
This unit applies to those supporting adult language and literacy learners in a variety of contexts.

The work in this unit could be conducted by a tutor in consultation with learners, and would be monitored by a program supervisor with appropriate language and literacy expertise.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:
The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge and understanding of:

- Definition of texts and range of texts that learners need to interpret
- Key concepts of the Australian Core Skills Framework (ACSF) to engage in discussion with supervisor of learner levels and requirements and learning plan, including:
  - the five core skills
  - spiky profiles: varying levels of performance in each core skill
  - factors that may influence performance
- Language and literacy concepts and terminology relevant to learner needs and context
- Relationships between spoken language and literacy
- Requirements of the support program, including administrative and confidentiality requirements
- Risk-management strategies to negotiate sometimes complex situations and learning environments
- Roles and responsibilities of those providing language and literacy support and of their supervisors
- Range of basic communication and learning strategies, including techniques that:
  - model talk to support learner comprehension
  - scaffold learning and assist learners to problem solve
- Tools to evaluate learning outcomes, such as the ACSF

Essential skills:
It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Negotiate learner language and literacy needs and program outcomes based on identified skill gaps, in consultation with supervisor and learner where appropriate
- Identify, adapt, develop and use a variety of learning strategies and resources based on agreed outcomes
- Support language and literacy skill development in learners
- Use a range of strategies to encourage and model skill development

continued ...

Essential skills (contd):

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include:

- Communication skills, including:
  - listening skills to identify learner needs and elicit learner responses
  - speaking skills to model language and question effectively
  - writing skills to model learners' writing requirements and fulfil reporting requirements
- Initiative and enterprise skills to use appropriate support strategies for diverse learner needs
- Interpersonal skills to:
  - interact with clients from a range of social, cultural, religious and linguistic backgrounds and with varying physical and mental abilities
  - show respect for, and draw on, the expertise and background of the learner
- Language and literacy skills to:
  - identify, collate and develop or adapt resources to support the development of learners' language and literacy skills
  - maintain and complete records, where required
- Planning and organisation skills to develop, follow and evaluate learning plans
- Problem-solving skills to select strategies that address learner needs
- Self-management skills to:
  - know own limitations and set appropriate boundaries
  - review own practice
- Teamwork skills to collaborate with supervisor to:
  - analyse learner needs in relation to development of language and literacy
  - apply appropriate model of learning to develop learners' language and literacy skills
  - implement support strategies appropriate to learner needs
- Technical skills to:
  - adapt spoken language to meet the needs of individual learners and the learning program
  - apply key concepts of the ACSF
  - use a range of strategies to:
    - support learners in acquiring and applying language and literacy skills and knowledge
    - adapt or design resources that cater for individual learners
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- Technology skills to:
  - use a range of technology to support language and literacy learning
  - use software packages as part of the learning program
- Time-management skills to plan and deliver learning programs

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- Assessment should ensure the candidate addresses the elements and performance criteria on at least three occasions, over a period of time

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- Competency must be demonstrated in a realistic simulated or real work environment
- Assessment requires access to a range of opportunities defined in the range statement, including access to:
  - an educational work environment or simulation to enable candidates to demonstrate their skills and knowledge while working with supervisors and learners
  - literacy terminology used in the role

Method of assessment:

- Assessment methods suitable for valid and reliable assessment of this competency may include a combination of:
  - case studies
  - demonstration
  - observation
  - oral and written questioning
  - scenarios, simulation or role plays
  - authenticated evidence
- Assessment methods should reflect work demands, such as literacy, and the needs of particular individuals, such as:
  - people in rural and remote locations
  - people with disabilities
  - people from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds
  - Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
  - women
  - young people
  - older people

Guidance information:

- This unit may be assessed independently, however holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended
Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Supervisor may include:

- Experienced tutor
- Literacy specialist
- Mentor

Identifying learner's language and literacy level may include:

- Considering:
  - information provided in supervisor briefing
  - learner's educational background
  - psychological, social and cultural factors
- Using key concepts of tools such as the ACSF and International Second Language Proficiency Rating (ISLPR), when considering:
  - strengths and weaknesses of learner's core skills
  - relevance of context, support, task and text
RANGE STATEMENT

Factors that may inhibit the development of language and literacy skills may include:

- Cultural barriers relating to ethnicity and identity, for example
- Disabilities, such as acquired brain injury
- Geographic factors, such as isolation
- Health issues, including chronic conditions
- Language barriers relating to, for example:
  - influence of first language on later language learning
  - use of standard English or non-standard English
- Learning difficulties
- Limited opportunities for practice
- Personal barriers relating to such things as:
  - age
  - displacement issues for refugees
  - emotional issues
  - family circumstances
  - gender
  - previous formal schooling experiences
  - religion
  - social circumstances
  - trauma
- Technology issues, such as:
  - lack of access
  - skill level

Resources may include:

- Computer hardware and software
- Games
- Handouts and workbooks
- Online and digital resources
- Realia
- Reference materials
- Visual aids, such as photographs, displays and posters

Program requirements: • May be developed by:
  • the tutor
  • consulting with supervisor
  • consulting with learner
• May include:
  • program guidelines
  • program resources

Aspects of communication may include:
• Different contexts in which an individual uses core skills in all aspects of their lives, including:
  • cooperative: interacting in groups
  • personal: expressing identity
  • procedural: performing tasks
  • public: interacting with the wider community
  • systems: interacting in organisations
  • technical: using tools and technology

Using spoken language to effectively interact may include:
• Encouraging participation in group or individual discussions and informal conversation
• Using:
  • clear articulation and diverse intonation
  • books, stories and photos to stimulate recall, prediction, discussion, and vocabulary
  • language appropriate to learner background, culture, age, interests, needs and language level
  • language appropriate to the situation and purpose
  • realia from learner's life

Talking about language may include speaking about:

- Effectiveness of language used for the chosen audience
- How a word may be broken into syllables to help with spelling or meaning
- Letter-sound relationships
- Open-ended questioning about meaning and alternative ways to convey meaning
- Processes used to:
  - determine meaning
  - work out the spelling of words
- Purpose of the language used
- Relating the new to the known
- Structure of a sentence
- Thinking processes involved in constructing communications

Texts may be drawn from many genres and include:

- Everyday texts associated with a range of contexts, such as education, leisure, work, family and daily life
- Literary texts appropriate to learners' interests
- Mass-media texts

Strategies for supporting learners in interpreting texts may include:

- Asking for learners’ opinions about parts of the text
- Asking learners to compare the text to other texts and their own experiences
- Encouraging learners to:
  - analyse and criticise the text
  - consider the effectiveness of the text's messages
  - consider the genre of the text
- Engaging in discussion that summarises or encourages comment about information in the text
- Orientation to the text

Strategies to develop learners' skills in the use of written language may include:

- Developing spelling
- Helping learners to attempt unknown words
- Scribing for beginning writers
- Stringing sentences
- Transformations for supported writing
- Using a digital camera to support writing
- Using temporary spelling as a tool for early writing
- Written conversations

Performance features may include:

- Audience
- Grammar and punctuation
- Legibility
- Plan, proof, draft and review
- Range and register
- Structure and cohesion
- Vocabulary and spelling

Strategies to develop performance features may include:

- Deciding on audience, message and purpose
- Drafting
- Editing, including checking and revising
- Researching specific information and references
- Structuring the writing to best convey message to audience
- Encouraging learners to critically reflect on their writing

Applications of mathematics skills and knowledge may include:

- Using mathematics in real-life work, social, community and leisure contexts, such as:
  - interpreting timetables and timelines
  - measuring area, volume, length, weight, etc.
  - performing operations and calculations
  - placing orders
  - planning use of spaces
  - reading and interpreting data displays
  - reading maps, driving and navigating
  - telling the time
  - using phone numbers
  - using shopping catalogues

- Working mathematically to solve problems, including those specific to a particular context, such as:
  - calculating medical doses
  - comparing prices
  - understanding bills

Language of numeracy at the appropriate level includes:
- Formal and informal language
- Knowledge of the level, e.g. $5.98, 1/2, +, -, 12/5/07, simple and highly familiar tables and graphs
- Language, such as:
  - addition, subtraction, division and multiplication
  - up, down, behind, right, left, over, through
  - comparative language, such as taller, heavier, hotter, smaller
  - language of shape, size, colour, such as straight, curved, square, circle, triangle
  - language of measurement, such as SI units of measurement, weight, height
- Symbolic and diagrammatic representations and conventions of mathematics e.g. Language of position
- Simple symbolism, diagrams and conventions relevant to mathematics

Accurate mathematics terminology and concepts may include:
- Displays, such as graphs and tables
- Mathematics specific conventions
- Place values
- Ratio
- Symbols
- Units of measurement
- Vocabulary - mathematics context versus real world contexts

Aspects of communication may include:
- Different contexts in which an individual uses numeracy skills in all aspects of their lives, including:
  - cooperative: interacting in groups
  - personal: expressing identity
  - procedural: performing tasks
  - public: interacting with the wider community

Unit Descriptor
Descriptor
This unit describes the skills and knowledge required to identify when clients' language, literacy and numeracy (LLN) are impeding their access to the service being provided, to adjust service delivery where required to accommodate client LLN skills, and to refer appropriately in order to improve client outcomes.

The unit does not provide workers with the skills and knowledge to identify LLN skill levels or to actively intervene in developing a client's LLN skills.

Application of the Unit
Application
This unit of competency applies to workers from a range of backgrounds who support clients with LLN needs.

It may apply to workers carrying out individual client assessments and managing caseloads as part of their work role.

Workers undertaking this unit do not require specialist LLN skills or knowledge.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:
The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge and understanding of:

- Awareness of cultural diversity and protocols to inform service delivery around LLN
- Communication techniques

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- Assessment should ensure the candidate addresses the elements and performance criteria on at least three occasions, over a period of time

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- Competency must be demonstrated in a realistic simulated or real work environment
- Assessment must ensure access to opportunities to work with clients with a range of LLN needs
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Method of assessment:

• Assessment methods suitable for valid and reliable assessment of this competency may include a combination of:
  • case studies
  • demonstration
  • observation
  • oral and written questioning
  • scenarios, simulation or role plays
  • authenticated evidence

• Assessment methods should reflect work demands, such as literacy, and the needs of particular individuals, such as:
  • people in rural and remote locations
  • people with disabilities
  • people from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds
  • Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
  • women
  • young people
  • older people

Guidance information

• This unit may be assessed independently, however holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- Evidence of competency in this unit will need to be assessed over a period of time in order to gather evidence of consistent performance
- This will include contexts applicable to the work environment, such as actual or simulated workplace situations involving a combination of direct, indirect and supplementary forms of evidence
- Evidence will be determined by selection from the Range Statement, justified in terms of work requirements, work roles and responsibilities and occupational specialisations
Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Where assessment is conducted within the workplace there are no resource implications above those normally available in the workplace
- Where assessment is conducted in a simulated or non-workplace environment then access to the necessary equipment and research resources should be provided
  Access to simulated exercises, case studies related to mediation service delivery issues is also required if non-workplace assessment paths are utilised
Method of assessment:

- Demonstration of competency within the working environment in preparing for the mediation process
- Where there is not an opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'what if?' Scenarios
- Observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questions on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a period of time and/or in a number of locations, any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons
- Review of any documentation produced by the candidate related to the preparation for mediation

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- Evidence of competency in this unit will need to be assessed over a period of time in order to gather evidence of consistent performance
- This will include contexts applicable to the work environment, such as actual or simulated workplace situations involving a combination of direct, indirect and supplementary forms of evidence
- Evidence will be determined by selection from the Range Statement, justified in terms of work requirements, work roles and responsibilities and occupational specialisations

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Where assessment is conducted within the workplace there are no resource implications above those normally available in the workplace
- Where assessment is conducted in a simulated or non-workplace environment then access to the necessary equipment and research resources should be provided
  Access to simulated exercises, case studies related to mediation service delivery issues is also required if non-workplace assessment paths are utilised

Method of assessment:

- Demonstration of competency within the working environment in preparing for the mediation process
- Where there is not an opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'what if?' Scenarios
- Observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questions on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a period of time and/or in a number of locations, any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons
- Review of any documentation produced by the candidate related to the preparation for mediation

Related units:

This unit should be assessed after or in conjunction with related units:

- CHCMED419C Facilitate alternative dispute resolution processes

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is best assessed on the job or in a simulated workplace under the normal range of conditions
- Consistency in performance should consider the requirements of the particular workplace context

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment of this unit include access to a workplace or simulated workplace where assessment may occur

Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons

Related units:

This unit should be assessed after or in conjunction with:

- Address duty of care requirements when conducting assessment and facilitating a recovery plan

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role. These include the ability to:
Apply reading and writing skills required to fulfil work role in a safe manner and as specified by the organisation/service:
- this requires a level of skill that enables the worker to follow work-related instructions and directions and the ability to seek clarification and comments from supervisors, clients and colleagues
- industry work roles will require a literacy level that will enable workers to interpret international safety signs, read client service delivery plans, make notations in client records and complete workplace forms and records

Apply verbal and non-verbal communication skills:
- industry work roles will require effective verbal and non-verbal communication skills to ask questions, clarify understanding and meaning, recognise and interpret non-verbal cues, adapt communication styles to meet specific needs, provide information and express encouragement and support including active listening and empathy

Work effectively with clients, social networks, colleagues, supervisors and other services/agencies

---

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:
- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit will be most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions
- It is recommended that assessment or information for assessment will be conducted or gathered over a period of time and cover the normal range of workplace situations and settings
- Where, for reasons of safety, space, or access to equipment and resources, assessment takes place away from the workplace, the assessment environment should represent workplace conditions as closely as possible
Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment include:
  - access to appropriate workplace where assessment can take place
  - relevant organisation policy, protocols and procedures

Method of assessment may include:

- Observation in the workplace
- Written assignments/projects
- Case study and scenario analysis
- Questioning
- Role play simulation

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.
Nature of assessment may include:

- Competency based assessment
- Domain based assessment
- Needs based assessment
- Norm based assessment

Person’s needs may include:

- Psychological needs:
  - a sense of control
  - acceptance of disability
  - freedom from undue stress
  - life stage acceptance
  - personal identity
  - self-determination
  - self-esteem
  - sense of belonging
  - veteran/war widow related issues

- Spiritual needs:
  - ceremonial observances
  - formal and informal religious observance
  - need for privacy and an appropriate environment to reflect and/or participate in spiritual activities

- Cultural needs:
  - ceremonial and festive observances
  - dress and dietary observance
  - need for continued interaction with cultural community

- Sexuality and identity:
  - access to assistive/protective devices
  - love and affection
  - need for privacy and discretion
  - physical appearance
  - touch
Different planning options may include:

- Informal plans
- Organisation planning processes, including:
  - care plan
  - education plan
  - employment plan
  - individual program plan
  - recovery plan
  - recreation and access plan
- Person-centred planning processes, including:
  - MAPS
  - PATH
  - Personal Futures Planning

Readiness for development of a plan may refer to:

- Capacity to make decisions
- Capacity to participate
- Capacity to understand the process
- Involvement of an advocate
- Power imbalances

Logistical requirements of planning may include:

- Advance notification of stakeholders
- Information gathered from other involved health and community services and from family and friends, where appropriate
- Time, place and venue

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is best assessed on the job or in a simulated workplace under the normal range of conditions
- Consistency in performance should consider the requirements of the particular workplace context
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment of this unit include access to a workplace or simulated workplace where assessment may occur

Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons
RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Evidence Guide
The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is best assessed on the job or in a simulated workplace under the normal range of conditions
- Consistency in performance should consider the range of services provided to clients in the workplace

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in CALD environments
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment of this unit include access to a workplace or simulated workplace where assessment may occur
Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios
- Assessment of this unit of competency will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Reasons for seeking help may be identified with assistance from:

- The client
- Carers

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

• The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
• This unit is most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace setting under the normal range of workplace conditions
• Assessment must demonstrate consistency of application of skills and knowledge described in this unit of competency
Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment include access to relevant workplace or simulated realistic workplace setting where assessment may take place

Method of assessment:

- Assessment may include observation, questioning and evidence gathered from a workplace environment

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills.
- This unit is most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions. This may include the use of languages other than English and alternative communications systems.

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work.
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment.
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people.
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities.

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged.
- Resource requirements for assessment of this unit include access to:
  - an appropriate workplace where assessment can be conducted or simulation of realistic workplace setting for assessment.

Method of assessment:

- Assessment may include observations, questioning and evidence gathered from the workplace environment.
Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios.
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes.
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons.

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Application of the Unit

Application
This unit is appropriate for workers in a range of health and community services environments whose work roles involve the type of interactions with clients that would enable the use of basic oral health screening tools.

Application could be stand alone or as part of other screening processes to identify the need for referral to an oral health practitioner or for additional education or instruction in oral health care.

Examples of tools that are accepted by the oral health sector for oral health screening are listed in the Range Statement of this unit.

| 1. Prepare for and participate in basic routine oral health screening services | 1.1 Explain screening procedure and rationale to clients
1.2 Take into account client's ability to self report
1.3 Seek information and guidance on tools to work with certain individuals and the most suitable approach, taking into consideration factors such as, cognitive ability, communication methods and culture
1.4 Obtain feedback from client to determine that procedure is understood and obtain consent from client or relevant substitute decision maker to conduct screening
1.5 Prepare screening materials and documents
1.6 Perform basic routine screening in line with legislative requirements, organisation requirements and within own work role
1.7 Use only screening tools that are currently accepted by the oral health sector and are fit for basic oral health screening as part of client support work
1.8 Use tools correctly, strictly according to instructions, guidelines and/or training approved by the oral health sector' |
ELEMENT

2. Follow screening tool questioning, observation and recording requirements

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

2.1 Use screening tool to question clients about their oral health taking into account specific individual issues

2.2 Document and record client responses to questions

2.3 Record observations about client's oral health in appropriate format according to tool and organisation guidelines

2.4 Consult with other health personnel where necessary to assist with, confirm or clarify screening and recording processes and outcomes

2.5 Complete reporting processes using information from client, significant others and own observations

2.6 Confirm available and appropriate referral pathways to address identified client needs in line with own work role

2.7 Where appropriate and in consultation with others where necessary, refer clients to address identified needs for oral health education and/or assessment

2.8 Where screening was unsuccessful report and follow up appropriately

3. Review screening process and outcomes

3.1 Ask for feedback from clients and other relevant stakeholders to determine the effectiveness of screening processes and identify any issues in own use of screening tool/s

3.2 Where appropriate, discuss with clients and other relevant stakeholders any issues or obstacles relating to referrals made

3.3 Discuss feedback with other members of the team and take appropriate action to address feedback where required
Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role. These include knowledge of:

- Own role in oral health screening
- Relevant referral pathway options
- Relevant screening tools and procedures and associated rationale for use
- Relevant workplace policies, procedures and programs for screening

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Communicate effectively to provide information and ensure understanding of information provided in a range of formats
- Consult effectively with other health and community services personnel
- Reflect on and improve own level and application of skills and knowledge to achieve desirable outcomes and maintain own capabilities
- Use appropriate referral practices and pathways
- Use approved simple oral health screening tool/s appropriately and effectively in line with established oral health sector guidelines
- Use communication skills to effectively establish a relationship of trust with clients and/or family or significant others
- Use relevant technology, including information technology safely and effectively

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role. These include the ability to:

- Apply basic problem solving skills to resolve problems within organisation protocols
- Apply literacy and numeracy skills required to fulfill work role in a safe manner and as specified by the organisation
- Consistently demonstrate interpersonal skills, including empathy when relating to people from a range of backgrounds and abilities
- Incorporate oral health screening processes with other organisation screening
- Work effectively with clients, colleagues and supervisors
Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is best assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace under the normal range of conditions
- Consistency in performance should consider the particular workplace context

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in health and community services environments should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be delivered and assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment include:
  - access to appropriate workplace where assessment can take place
  - simulation of realistic workplace setting
Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios
- Assessment of this unit of competency will include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Consistency of performance should be demonstrated over a range of relevant workplace conditions

Related units:

- This unit may be assessed independently or in conjunction with other units with associated workplace application

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Basic routine oral health screening services may include:

- Routine screening by age, sex, ethnicity and regional disease prevalence
- Screening practices in line with relevant, organisation, local, state, territory and national guidelines

Screening refers to:

- Following a process to collect specific information and determine a prescribed course of action
Tools to work with certain individuals may include but not be limited to:

- Abbey pain scale - an augmentative pain screening tool for people with cognitive impairment, such as that caused by dementia
- Augmentative or alternative communication systems, such as symbols or picture cards
- Bite blocks
- Tongue depressors
- Torch

Substitute decision maker (in relation to consent) must be:

- The person appointed with the right to speak for the client and may include:
  - advocate
  - carers
  - guardians
  - health attorneys
  - medical power of attorney
  - members of family
  - other practitioners
  - parent of child
  - person responsible
  - public trustee

Legislative requirements refers to:

- Federal, state or territory legislation that may impact on workers' practices and responsibilities, noting that implementation of the unit of competency must reflect the legislative framework in which a worker operates

Screening tools that are currently accepted by the oral health sector include:

- Basic instruments that are appropriate for use in simple oral health screening, such as:
  - computer-assisted triaging tools, such as 'Relative Needs Index' and 'Information System for Oral Health'
  - 'Lift the Lip'
Specific individual issues may include but not be limited to:
- Ability to self-report
- Age
- Cultural and socioeconomic background
- Current knowledge and practices
- Developmental stage

Document and record may include the use of:
- Photographs
- Verbal reports
- Written reports

Organisation guidelines may include but are not limited to:
- Clinical protocols
- Position descriptions
- Workplace policies and procedures, including:
  - infection control
  - work health and safety (WHS)

Other health personnel may include but are not limited to:
- Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander health workers
- Allied health professionals, such as:
  - dietitians
  - health promotion officers
  - nutritionists
  - occupational therapists
  - physiotherapists
  - speech therapists
- General practitioners
- Members of the community who provide health care
- Nurses
- Oral health practitioners
- Specialists

Feedback may be provided:
- As a recording using sound or visual media
- In writing
- Using symbols or drawings
- Verbally

ELEMENT

2. Provide information related to oral health in a planned, individualised, client focused and outcomes based manner

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

2.1 Access and provide accurate, current and relevant oral health information as required to address planned outcomes

2.2 Ensure information provided is relevant to the target audience and is presented in a manner that engages the client and/or group, addresses their needs and encourages them to ask questions and improve their oral health

2.3 Provide accurate information to clients about risk factors, including the importance of diet and nutrition

2.4 Provide information on the causes and problems of poor oral health, including dental plaque, dental caries, dental erosion and periodontal disease

2.5 Provide information on the causes and prevention of oral diseases, consequences of oral diseases and the impact of oral health on general health and well being

2.6 Provide information on prevention of oral injury and injury management

2.7 Provide information on oral pain and options for appropriate management

2.8 Provide information on available oral health care resources, services and referral pathways, including oral health practitioners, other health practitioners and specialist resources

2.9 Ensure flexible approach to delivery, using materials and methods that take into account social and cultural determinants of health, location, economic and physical circumstances, age, culture, capability and communication needs of the target audience

2.10 Maintain client confidentiality in line with organisation and legislative guidelines
ELEMENT

3. Provide specific information on oral hygiene self-care techniques and appropriate aids

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

3.1 Provide information on and demonstrate a variety of relevant oral hygiene techniques, including appropriate infection control practices

3.2 Provide information on the use of appropriate aids and explain their advantages in terms of achieving and maintaining effective oral hygiene

3.3 Provide appropriate information to assist people with special needs with their oral hygiene self care technique

3.4 Encourage clients to follow effective oral hygiene practices and to make knowledge, attitude and behavioural changes where necessary

4. Follow up and reinforce oral health information

4.1 Obtain feedback from the client and/or group to determine whether the information is correctly received and understood

4.2 Implement a review strategy to determine the effectiveness of the oral health information session and whether planned outcomes for the target audience were met

4.3 Implement changes to information or delivery processes based on review outcomes

4.4 Regularly update and maintain records of oral health care programs according to organisation policies and procedures
Required Skills and Knowledge
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:
The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role. These include knowledge of:

- Awareness of the National Oral Health Plan and other relevant state, territory and national government policy and programs
- Basic anatomy and physiology underpinning oral health
- Causes and prevention of tooth wear, including erosion, abrasion and attrition
- Effective self-care practices for oral health
- Factors that impact on oral health, including:
  - abuse
  - access to services
  - accumulation of plaque and calculus
  - alcohol, licit and illicit drugs and substances and over the counter and herbal treatments
  - alcohol misuse
  - bacteria in dental plaque
  - client education
  - correct infant feeding practices
  - diet and nutrition, including fluids
  - fluoride
  - general health and wellbeing
  - immunosuppressant conditions
  - medical history
  - oral piercings
  - psychological issues, such as fear of being seen without dentures or persisting with ill fitting dentures for satisfaction of others
  - salivary function
  - smoking
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- social and cultural determinants of health
- susceptible tooth surfaces
- transmission of bacteria particularly from parent to child
- trauma, such as from seizures
- Guidelines for use of relevant technology, including information technology
- Healthy eating and drinking recommendations as identified in the National Health and Medical Research Council’s (NHMRC) Australian Dietary Guidelines
- Impact of certain health conditions and related treatments on oral health e.g. immunosuppressant conditions, HIV, chemotherapy and radiation
- Individual motivating factors for improving oral health

continued ...

Essential knowledge (cont'd):

- Legislation and organisation policies and procedures relating to client confidentiality, documentation and infection control standards
- Oral disease and broad treatment options available
- Oral health information, including oral hygiene techniques
- Oral injury prevention and management:
  - first response e.g. falls, teeth falling out, swallowing teeth, soft tissue damage, such as that related to seizures
  - mouth guards
- Oral side effects of medications, such as metallic taste in the mouth, dry mouth syndrome and ulcers
- Own role in client health education and where it fits on the continuum of health promotion e.g. policy, communication and action
- Referral pathways for both private and public oral health services
- Relevant evaluation criteria for monitoring effectiveness of oral health care program
- Risk and preventive factors associated with oral disease
- Roles of oral health practitioners
- Saliva and its role in the maintenance of oral health:
  - acting as a lubricant
  - delivering calcium, phosphate and fluoride to the tooth surface
  - its effect on the ability to swallow
  - protecting teeth by neutralising acid
- Specific oral health information related to special needs due to disability, aged care, children's needs, general health, language, culture and social circumstances
- Symptoms and signs that suggest a need for further assessment
- The interaction between oral health and general health
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Acknowledge client ability with oral health self-care and encourage and motivate them to improve, including encouraging friends, family and/or carers where appropriate
- Carry out effective oral health self-care practices
- Communicate effectively with a wide range of people to provide information that addresses their oral health care needs in a manner that takes into account their specific requirements, including the use of augmentative and alternative communication strategies where required
- Evaluate how well target audience has understood information provided
- Reflect on and improve own level and application of skills and knowledge to achieve desirable outcomes and maintain own capabilities
- Use evaluation skills to review the effectiveness of oral health information provided
- Use initiative in finding opportunities to promote oral health care
- Use relevant technology, including information technology safely and effectively

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role

These include the ability to:

- Apply basic problem solving skills to resolve problems within organisation protocols
- Apply literacy and numeracy skills required to fulfill work role in a safe manner and as specified by the organisation
- Consistently demonstrate interpersonal skills, including empathy when relating to people from a range of backgrounds and abilities
- Work effectively with clients, colleagues and supervisor

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is best assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace under the normal range of conditions
- Consistency in performance should consider the particular workplace context

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in health and community services environments should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work

  - access to appropriate workplace where assessment can take place
  - simulation of realistic workplace setting
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios.
- Assessment of this unit of competency will include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes.
- Consistency of performance should be demonstrated over a range of relevant workplace conditions.

Related units:

- This unit may be assessed independently or in conjunction with other units with associated workplace application, such as:

- Where this function involves working with groups, candidates may need to undertake a unit in working with groups, such as:
  - CHCGROUP403D Plan and conduct group activities

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Good oral health refers to but may not be limited to:

- A person's mouth that has:
  - breath without offensive odour
  - inflammation and lesion-free soft tissue
  - intact and stable teeth without cavities
  - moist lips without chapping
  - no build up of food, calculus or plaque
  - no oral pain
  - pink, moist, uncoated tongue
  - watery plentiful saliva
- Looking after the whole mouth, including natural and artificial teeth, gums, tongue, lips and inside the cheeks
- Oral health related quality of life factors, such as appearance, social interaction and self esteem

Oral health messages refers to:

- State, territory or national statements that include evidence based current best practice techniques and strategies for maintaining good oral health

Oral health issues may be related to:

- Damage to teeth due to trauma
- Damage to soft tissues e.g. due to smoking or prescribed and non-prescribed drugs and over the counter and herbal treatments
- Dental decay
- Developmental abnormalities
- Non-carious tooth wear:
  - abrasion
  - attrition
  - erosion (acid)
- Oromotor impairment
- Periodontal disease
- Physical impairment
- Poor nutrition and eating and drinking habits
- Poor oral hygiene
- Poorly fitting or lack of dentures and other prosthesis
- Quality and quantity of saliva
- Soft tissue lesions
- Systemic conditions

Risk factors for oral diseases may include but not be limited to:

- Age-related deterioration
- Bleeding gums
- Chronic conditions, such as diabetes
- Cognitive, physical or psychological disability
- Diet and nutrition related factors, including:
  - consumption and frequency of foods with high sugar content and/or highly acidic drinks, such as carbonated drinks, fruit juices and sports drinks
  - incorrect use of infant feeding and dummies in babies/children
- Eating disorders
- Exposure to radiation and chemotherapy
- High levels of plaque
- Impact of chewing tobacco
- Impact of smoking
- Lack of fluoride
- Lack of regular dental visits
- Mental illness or disorder
- Metabolic disorders
- Oral piercing
- Poor oral hygiene
- Salivary function
- Use and misuse of alcohol, licit and illicit drugs and substances and over the counter and herbal treatments e.g. opioids and psychotropic drugs

Oral hygiene techniques refer to the care of teeth, soft tissue and prostheses and may include, but not be limited to:

- Appropriate use of oral health products, including fluoride toothpaste and alcohol-free mouthwash when recommended
- Cleaning and maintaining of full and partial dentures and all natural teeth
- Manual and electric tooth brushing technique
- Modifications to toothbrush handles for specific needs of client/carer e.g. as modified by an occupational therapist
- Techniques for clients with specific needs e.g. cognitive impairment, physical disability, aged clients and carer, young children and babies
- Techniques required for clients wearing oral appliances e.g. braces, crowns, implants and dentures
- Use of other specific oral hygiene techniques and aids as specified in client's oral health care plan

Social and cultural determinants of health refer to:

- The socio-economic and cultural factors that affect the living circumstances, quality of life, health literacy and in turn the health and wellbeing of individuals and communities

Individual motivations may include but are not limited to:

- Access to services
- Financial priorities
- General health and wellbeing
- Independence
- Pain management
- Potential consequences of poor oral hygiene, including impact on general health and specific health issues
- Previous experience of oral health care
- Psychological e.g. fear of being seen without dentures
- Self-awareness of personal appearance
- Self-esteem and social interaction

Oral health information may include but is not limited to:

- Brochures, posters and information sheets
- Models and mirrors
- PowerPoint presentations
- Resources available for specific groups, such as children, people from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds and people with disabilities
- Videos/DVDs/CD-ROMs
- Web based resources, such as those available on the National Oral Health Clearinghouse and government health department websites, including oral health messages

Planned outcomes refer to:

- The intended change in oral health knowledge, attitude and behaviour specific to the needs of the individual or group

Target audience may include but is not limited to individuals and groups who are:

- Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples
- Children and adolescents
- Financially or socially disadvantaged
- Friends, families and/or carers of clients
- From culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds, including refugees and migrants
- Living in rural, remote or isolated areas
- Older people
- Palliative care clients
- People with chronic disease e.g. diabetes and osteoporosis
- People with disability and/or support needs
- People with immunosuppressed conditions
- People with mental health issues
- People with substance misuse issues
- Pregnant women
- Taking medications that affect oral health
- Young parents

Importance of diet and nutrition on oral health may include:
- Ensuring dietary habits, including fluids are in line with current Australian Dietary Guidelines and taking into consideration:
  - composition
  - consistency
  - following
  - frequency of intake
  - quantity of intake
- Impact of cariogenic and acidic food and drinks

Dental plaque refers to:
- A biofilm containing bacteria deposited on the teeth and associated with the development of dental caries

Dental caries refers to:
- A disease where bacterial processes damage hard tooth structure (enamel, dentine, and cementum)
  - also known as tooth decay

Dental erosion refers to:
- Erosion of the tooth enamel and possibly the dentine caused by acids not of bacterial origin, such as those in acidic foods, acidic drinks and stomach acids

Periodontal disease refers to:
- Diseases of the gum and/or the supporting bone that range from simple gingival or gum inflammation to serious disease that results in major damage to the soft tissue and bone that support the teeth:
  - gingivitis and periodontitis
  - characterised by:
    - bad breath (halitosis)
    - bleeding gums
    - discomfort in the gums
    - inflammation/infection
    - loosening of the teeth
    - receding of the gums
    - spaces opening between teeth

Prevention of oral diseases may include but is not limited to:

- Addressing alcohol, drug and substance misuse issues within a harm minimisation framework
- Appropriate timing of oral hygiene e.g. after food or medication
- Dietary change
- Effective oral health self-care practices
- Encouraging smoking cessation
- Increasing salivary flow and optimising its composition
- Increasing water intake to recommended amount
- Plaque control and removal
- Preventing oral trauma from sports and other injuries
- Promoting the use of fluorides
- Regular visits to oral health practitioners

Consequences of oral diseases may include but are not limited to:

- Behavioural change
- Emotional and psychological issues
- Financial impact e.g. loss of employment
- Ill health
- Impaired social interaction
- Inability to concentrate related, for example, to pain
- Infection
- Missed school or work days
- Nausea
- Noticeable physical changes
- Nutritional deficiencies
- Pain which may vary from minor to extreme levels
- Possible systemic illness
- Reduced life span
- Reduced quality of life
- Reduced self-esteem
- Speech impairment

Oral health practitioners include:
- Dental assistants
- Dental hygienists
- Dental prosthetists
- Dental specialists e.g. orthodontist
- Dental technicians
- Dental therapists
- Dentists
- Oral health therapists

Other health practitioners include but are not limited to:
- Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander health workers
- Dietitians
- Enrolled nurses
- General practitioners
- Health promotion officers
- Nutritionists
- Occupational therapists
- Registered nurses
- Speech pathologists

Methods of delivery may include but are not limited to:
- Audio visual presentation
- Augmentative and alternative communication systems
- Pamphlets and flyers
- Pictures
- Verbal presentation
- Written documents

Appropriate aids may include:
- Face mirror for client
- Range of interdental aids
- Range of manual and electric toothbrushes
- Range of toothpastes
- Range of topical self-care products e.g. alcohol-free mouthwash, fluoride supplements and tooth remineraliser
- Resources e.g. teaching models
RANGE STATEMENT

Special needs include but are not limited to:

- Anxiety, including as a trigger for seizures
- Cognitive impairment
- Communication impairment
- Cultural preferences
- High gag reflex
- Homelessness/rough sleeping
- Immunosuppressed conditions
- Intellectual disability
- Language barriers
- Mental illness
- Oromotor impairment
- Physical impairment
- Swallowing disorder

Knowledge, attitude and behavioural changes may include:

- Appropriate infant feeding, including:
  - breast and bottle feeding
  - introduction of solids
- Cessation of smoking
- Ensuring fluoride intake
- Improved diet and nutrition, including reduced frequency of drinks containing acid and sugars, such as carbonated drinks, fruit juices and sports drinks
- Improved oral hygiene techniques and practices, including increased salivary flow
- Increased sense of control over own oral health
- Increased use of oral health services
- Limiting foods or drinks that stay in the mouth for long periods of time
- Minimised harm from illicit drug use
- Reduced frequency of snacking

3. Follow up and reinforce oral health information and instruction

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

3.1 Implement a review strategy to determine the effectiveness of the oral health information and instruction and whether planned outcomes were met

3.2 Implement changes to oral health information and instruction processes based on review outcomes

3.3 Regularly update and maintain records of oral health care programs delivered according to organisation policies and procedures
Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role. These include knowledge of:

- Awareness of the National Oral Health Plan and other relevant state, territory and national government policy and programs
- Basic anatomy and physiology underpinning oral health
- Broad understanding of oral hygiene techniques, including for soft tissues and natural and artificial teeth
- Causes and prevention of tooth wear, including erosion, abrasion and attrition
- Client-specific issues such mental health, disability, age and general health
- Effective self-care practices for oral health
- Factors that impact on oral health, including:
  - abuse
  - access to services
  - accumulation of plaque and calculus
  - alcohol, licit and illicit drugs and substances and over the counter and herbal treatments
  - alcohol misuse
  - bacteria in dental plaque
  - client education
  - correct infant feeding practices
  - diet and nutrition, including fluids
  - fluoride
  - general health and wellbeing
  - immunosuppressant conditions
  - medical history
  - oral piercings
  - psychological issues, such as fear of being seen without dentures or persisting with ill

fitting dentures for satisfaction of others
- salivary function
- smoking
- social and cultural determinants of health
- susceptible tooth surfaces
- transmission of bacteria particularly from parent to child
- trauma, such as from seizures
- Guidelines for use of relevant technology, including information technology
- Healthy eating recommendations as identified in the National Health and Medical Research Council's (NHMRC) Australian Dietary Guidelines
- Impact of certain health conditions and related treatments on oral health e.g. immunosuppressant conditions, HIV, chemotherapy and radiation

continued....

Essential knowledge (contd):
- Modifications to oral health information related to special needs due to disability, aged care, child needs, language and culture
- Oral disease and broad treatment options available
- Oral hygiene aids and the associated use and advantages of each
- Oral side effects of medications, such as metallic taste in the mouth, dry mouth syndrome and ulcers
- Organisation policies and procedures and legislation relating to client confidentiality and infection control
- Own role in client health education
- Person-centred practice
- Relevant evaluation criteria for monitoring effectiveness of oral health care program
- Saliva and its role in the maintenance of oral health:
  - acting as a lubricant
  - delivering calcium, phosphate and fluoride to the tooth surface
  - protecting teeth by neutralising acid
- The interaction between oral health and general health
- The role of properly constructed and fitted mouth guards in preventing oral injuries

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:
- Adapt information, communication and delivery techniques as necessary to meet the needs of individuals and specific groups in the provision of oral health information and practical instruction and demonstration of oral hygiene practices and techniques
- Carry out effective oral health self-care practices
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- Reflect on and improve own level and application of skills and knowledge to achieve desirable outcomes and maintain own capabilities
- Use a person-centred framework to apply fundamental motivational and learning skills
- Use evaluation skills to review the effectiveness of oral health information and instruction provided
- Evaluate how well target audience has understood information and instruction provided
- Use initiative in finding opportunities to promote oral health care
- Use relevant technology, including information technology safely and effectively

continued....

Essential skills (contd):

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role

These include the ability to:

- Apply basic problem-solving skills to resolve problems within organisation protocols
- Apply literacy and numeracy skills required to fulfill work role in a safe manner and as specified by the organisation
- Consistently demonstrate interpersonal skills, including empathy when relating to people from a range of backgrounds and abilities
- Work effectively with clients, colleagues and supervisors

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is best assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace under the normal range of conditions
- Consistency in performance should consider the particular workplace context

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in health and community services environments should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be delivered and assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment include:
  - access to appropriate workplace where assessment can take place
  - simulation of realistic workplace setting
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios.
- Assessment of this unit of competency will include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes.
- Consistency of performance should be demonstrated over a range of relevant workplace conditions.

Related units:

- This unit may be assessed independently or in conjunction with other units with associated workplace application, such as:
  - CHCPROM401C Share health information
  - BSBCMM401A Make a presentation
  - Chronic disease self-management skill set
- Where this function involves working with groups, candidates may need to undertake a unit in working with groups, such as:
  - CHCGROUP403D Plan and conduct group activities

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.
RANGE STATEMENT

Target audience may include but is not limited to individuals and groups who are:

- Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples
- Children and adolescents
- Financially or socially disadvantaged
- Friends, families and/or carers of clients
- From culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds, including refugees and migrants
- Living in rural, remote or isolated areas
- Older people
- Palliative care clients
- People with chronic disease e.g. diabetes and osteoporosis
- People with disability and/or support needs
- People with immunosuppressed conditions
- People with mental health issues
- People with substance misuse issues
- Pregnant women
- Taking medications that affect oral health
- Young parents

Oral health information may include but is not limited to:

- Brochures, posters and information sheets
- Models and mirrors
- PowerPoint presentations
- Resources available for specific groups, such as children, people from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds and people with disabilities
- Videos/DVDs/CD-ROMs
- Web-based resources, such as those available on The National Oral Health Clearinghouse and government health department websites, including oral health messages

Planned outcomes may refer to:

- The intended change in oral health knowledge, attitude and behaviour specific to the needs of the individual or group

Person-centred refers to:

- Involving clients in discussions about service delivery options and issues
- Involving clients in informed decision-making relating to their care/service
- Listening to and addressing complaints
- Obtaining informed consent
- Providing effective service delivery
- Putting clients, carers and their preferences at the centre of service delivery

Oral health issues may include but are not limited to:

- Damage to teeth due to trauma
- Damage to soft tissues e.g. due to smoking or prescribed and non-prescribed drugs and over the counter and herbal treatments
- Dental caries
- Developmental abnormalities
- Non-caries tooth wear:
  - abrasion
  - attrition
  - erosion (acid)
- Oromotor impairment
- Periodontal disease
- Physical impairment
- Poor nutrition and eating and drinking habits
- Poor oral hygiene
- Poorly fitting or lack of dentures and other prosthesis
- Quality and quantity of saliva
- Soft tissue lesions
- Systemic conditions
RANGE STATEMENT

Importance of diet and nutrition on oral health may include:

- Ensuring dietary habits, including fluids are in line with current Australian Dietary Guidelines and taking into consideration:
  - composition
  - consistency
  - following
  - frequency of intake
  - quantity of intake
- Impact of cariogenic and acidic food and drinks

Risk factors for oral disease may include but not be limited to:

- Age-related deterioration
- Bleeding gums
- Chronic conditions, such as diabetes
- Cognitive, physical or psychological disability
- Diet and nutrition related factors in the development of dental caries, including:
  - consumption and frequency of foods with high sugar content and/or highly acidic drinks, such as carbonated drinks, fruit juices and sports drinks
  - incorrect use of infant feeding and dummies in babies/children
- Eating disorders
- Exposure to radiation and chemotherapy
- High levels of plaque
- Impact of chewing tobacco
- Impact of smoking on oral soft tissues
- Lack of fluoride
- Lack of regular dental visits
- Mental illness or disorder
- Metabolic disorders
- Oral piercing
- Poor oral hygiene
- Salivary function
- Use and misuse of alcohol, licit and illicit drugs and substances and over the counter and herbal treatments e.g. opioids and psychotropic drugs

Prevention of oral disease may include but is not limited to:

- Addressing alcohol, drug and substance misuse issues within a harm minimisation framework
- Appropriate timing of oral hygiene e.g. after food or medication
- Dietary change
- Effective oral health self-care practices
- Encouraging smoking cessation
- Increasing salivary flow and optimising its composition
- Increasing water intake to recommended amount
- Plaque control and removal
- Preventing oral trauma from sports and other injuries
- Promoting the use of fluorides
- Regular visits to oral health practitioners

Consequences of oral disease may include but are not limited to:

- Behavioural change
- Emotional and psychological issues
- Financial impact e.g. loss of employment
- Ill health
- Impaired social interaction
- Inability to concentrate related, for example, to pain
- Infection
- Missed school or work days
- Nausea
- Noticeable physical changes
- Nutritional deficiencies
- Pain which may vary from minor to extreme levels
- Possible systemic illness
- Reduced life span
- Reduced quality of life
- Reduced self-esteem
- Speech impairment

Oral hygiene techniques may include, but are not limited to:

- Appropriate use of oral health products, including fluoride toothpaste and alcohol-free mouthwash when recommended
- Cleaning and maintaining of full and partial dentures and all natural teeth
- Manual and electric tooth-brushing techniques
- Modifications to toothbrush handles for specific needs of client/carer e.g. as modified by an occupational therapist
- Techniques for clients with specific needs e.g. cognitive impairment, physical disability, aged clients and carers, young children and babies
- Techniques required for clients wearing oral appliances e.g. braces, crowns, implants and dentures
- Use of other specific oral hygiene aids when specified in client's oral health care plan

Appropriate aids may include:

- Alcohol-free mouthwash
- Face mirror for client
- Interdental brushes
- Range of manual and electric toothbrushes
- Range of oral hygiene aids e.g. mouth props
- Range of toothpastes

Standard precautions refer to infection control which includes:

- Wash hands before and after oral care
- Appropriate use of personal protective equipment (PPE):
  - eye/facial protection e.g. glasses/face shield
  - gloves
  - gown
  - mask
- Disposal of PPE

Toothbrushing may include: Using currently accepted methods to clean:

- natural teeth
- fixed and removable prostheses
- soft tissue

Knowledge, attitude and behavioural changes may include:

- Appropriate infant feeding, including:
  - breast and bottle feeding
  - introduction of solids
- Cessation of smoking
- Ensuring fluoride intake
- Improved diet and nutrition, including reduced frequency of drinks containing acid and sugars, such as carbonated drinks, fruit juices and sports drinks
- Improved oral hygiene techniques and practices, including increased salivary flow
- Increased sense of control over own oral health
- Increased use of oral health services
- Limiting foods or drinks that stay in the mouth for long periods of time
- Reduced frequency of snacking
- Use of strategies to minimise harm from licit and illicit drugs

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements define the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.

The Performance Criteria specify the level of performance required to demonstrate achievement of the Element. Terms in italics are elaborated in the Range Statement.

Elements and Performance Criteria

ELEMENT

1. Identify variations in client behaviour

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

1.1 Identify client behaviour and habits that may indicate oral health issues or associated pain or discomfort

1.2 Observe, listen for self-reports and question client and/or carer or other relevant people as required to determine whether the client is experiencing any pain or discomfort that may be associated with oral health issues

1.3 Take into account contributing factors that may produce variation from normal behaviour
ELEMENT

2. Undertake basic visual oral check and questioning

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

2.1 Obtain consent from the client or substitute decision maker to conduct basic visual oral check and questioning

2.2 Ensure comfort of client by developing trust and rapport and working in an appropriate environment and at an optimal time

2.3 Ensure client is in a position which provides access to the mouth seeking their assistance to open their own mouth limiting contact inside the mouth

2.4 Provide support for client's head or chin if necessary to enhance visual access without creating discomfort for the client

2.5 Perform basic visual oral check in line with legislative requirements, organisation guidelines, policies and procedures and within own work role

2.6 Ensure visual check is conducted in accordance with standard precautions

2.7 Identify signs and symptoms of potential oral health issues that may indicate variation from normal and actively listen to and be aware of self-reports
ELEMENT
3. Follow up and promote ongoing oral health care

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

3.1 Complete reporting processes, using information from client and/or carer or other relevant people as well as own observations in relation to potential oral health issues

3.2 Discuss potential oral health issues with client and/or relevant others in line with organisation policies and procedures and respecting client priorities and choices

3.3 Take appropriate action within work role, including discussing with supervisor in consultation with client

3.4 Provide client with information relevant to promoting and maintaining good oral health using appropriate communication strategies

3.5 Support clients to take a self-care approach to oral health in line with individual needs where possible

3.6 Identify and address key barriers to management or self-management of oral health
Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- Awareness of the National Oral Health Plan and other relevant state, territory and national government policy and programs
- Basic anatomy and physiology underpinning oral health, including what is considered healthy and unhealthy
- Causes and prevention of tooth wear, including erosion, abrasion and attrition
- Effective self-care practices for oral health
- Factors that impact on oral health, including:
  - abuse
  - access to services
  - accumulation of plaque and calculus
  - alcohol, licit and illicit drugs and substances and over the counter and herbal treatments
  - alcohol misuse
  - bacteria in dental plaque
  - client education
  - correct infant feeding practices
  - diet and nutrition, including fluids
  - fluoride
  - general health and wellbeing
  - immunosuppressant conditions
  - medical history
  - oral piercings
  - psychological issues, such as fear of being seen without dentures or persisting with ill fitting dentures for satisfaction of others
  - salivary function
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- smoking
- social and cultural determinants of health
- susceptible tooth surfaces
- transmission of bacteria particularly from parent to child
- trauma, such as from seizures
- Guidelines for use of relevant technology, including information technology
- Healthy eating recommendations as identified in the National Health and Medical Research Council's (NHMRC) Australian Dietary Guidelines
- Impact of certain health conditions and related treatments on oral health e.g. immunosuppressant conditions, HIV, chemotherapy and radiation
- Infection control standards and guidelines

continued ...

Essential knowledge (contd):

- Key elements of accurate reporting
- Oral disease and broad treatment options available
- Oral side effects of medications, such as metallic taste in the mouth, dry mouth syndrome and ulcers
- Organisation policies and procedures relating to:
  - client confidentiality and consent
  - limits to own role and authority/responsibility
  - referral, including various levels of urgency
- Own ability and role in relation to client oral health
- Range of behavioural changes that may be indicative of oral health issues
- Range of relevant oral health referral options
- Saliva and its role in the maintenance of oral health:
  - acting as a lubricant
  - delivering calcium, phosphate and fluoride to the tooth surface
  - protecting teeth by neutralising acid
- Systemic conditions which influence the development of oral disease
- The interaction between oral health and general health

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Accurately differentiate between healthy and unhealthy oral presentation
- Carry out effective oral health self-care practices
- Communicate effectively to provide information of processes and protocols to be undertaken
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- Consistently apply standard precautions where necessary
- Elicit relevant information from client or documents
- Identify situations when assistance is required
- Recognise changes in clients' behaviour, habits and physical condition that might indicate potential oral health issues
- Reflect on and improve own level and application of skills and knowledge to achieve desirable outcomes and maintain own capabilities
- Use active listening and questioning skills
- Use appropriate reporting and documentation practices
- Use communication skills to effectively establish a relationship of trust with clients, their family and/or carers and other relevant people
- Use initiative in finding opportunities to promote oral health care
- Use relevant technology, including information technology safely and effectively

continued ...

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:

- Apply basic problem-solving skills to resolve problems within organisation protocols
- Apply literacy and numeracy skills required to fulfill work role in a safe manner and as specified by the organisation
- Consistently demonstrate interpersonal skills, including empathy when relating to people from a range of backgrounds and abilities
- Work effectively with clients, colleagues and supervisors

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.
RANGE STATEMENT

Client refers to those living in the community and/or facilities and may include:

- Children receiving care, including in children's services
- Older people
- Palliative care clients
- People in care facilities
- People with dementia
- People with disabilities
- People with mental health issues

Client behaviour and habits may include:

- Anxiety around or avoidance of specific events
- Apparent pain or discomfort in or around the mouth
- Behaviours of concern
- Change in eating habits
- Change in mood or demeanour
- Changes in communication
- Crying
- Difficulty with eating, including spitting out food
- Hands in the mouth
- Inconsistent wearing of dentures
- Lethargy
- Physical aggression
- Refusal to open mouth
- Rubbing own teeth or gums
- Seemingly normal behaviours e.g. coughing could be indicator that food is in the lungs
- Self-harming behaviour
- Social isolation or withdrawal

Other relevant people may include but not be limited to:

- External health care providers
- Other service providers
- Personnel internal to the service provider
RANGE STATEMENT

Contributing factors may include but not be limited to:
- Abuse
- Ageing
- Disability
- Injury
- Medications
- Substance misuse
- Systemic illness

Substitute decision maker (in relation to consent) must be:
- The person appointed with the right to speak for the client, such as:
  - advocate
  - carers
  - guardians
  - health attorneys
  - medical power of attorney
  - members of family
  - other practitioners
  - parent of child
  - person responsible
  - public trustee

Legislative requirements refers to:
- Federal, state or territory legislation that may impact on workers' practices and responsibilities, noting that implementation of the unit of competency must reflect the legislative framework in which a worker operates

Organisation guidelines may include but are not limited to:
- Clinical protocols
- Position descriptions
- Workplace policies and procedures, including:
  - infection control
  - occupational health and safety
CHCOHC404A Recognise and respond to signs and symptoms that may indicate oral health issues

Range Statement

Standard precautions refer to infection control and may include:

- Wash hands before and after oral care
- Appropriate use of personal protective equipment (PPE):
  - eye/facial protection e.g. glasses/face shield
  - gloves
  - gown
  - mask
- Disposal of PPE
RANGE STATEMENT

Signs and symptoms of potential oral health issues may include but not be limited to:

- Observed and/or reported signs in or around the mouth, such as:
  - bad breath (halitosis)
  - bleeding
  - broken teeth
  - brown or discoloured teeth
  - calculus (mineralised plaque that will not brush off) on teeth particularly at gum line
  - change in colour or coating of tongue
  - dry mouth
  - eruption issues for children
  - evidence of build up of dental plaque on teeth, particularly at gum line
  - holes in teeth
  - lip blisters, sores or cracks
  - loose or mobile teeth
  - mouth debris/excessive food left in mouth
  - mouth ulcers
  - premature loss of baby teeth
  - receding or enlarged gums
  - soft tissue lesions e.g. red or white spots
  - swelling of face or localised swelling/inflammation
  - tooth sensitivity

- Issues reported by client and/or others, such as:
  - tooth sensitivity
  - refusal of oral care
  - sore mouth, gums, tongue or teeth

- Other observations, such as:
  - change in appetite
  - change in demeanour or mood
  - difficulty eating/speaking
  - inability to open mouth very wide
  - irritability
  - refusing to open mouth
  - weight loss

Date this document was generated: 31 March 2017

RANGE STATEMENT

- Observed and/or reported issues with dentures, such as:
  - broken metal wires/clips on partial denture
  - calculus on denture
  - chipped or missing teeth on denture or chipped or broken acrylic areas on denture
  - denture movement when client is speaking or eating
  - refusal or failure to wear denture
  - sore spots caused by wearing denture
  - unclean denture

Information from client may include but is not limited to:

- Basic dietary information on eating patterns and cariogenic food and drink intake
- Client concerns, beliefs and preferences regarding their signs and symptoms
- Clinical progress notes relevant to the presenting problem
- Current prescribed and other medications
- Current support mechanisms
- Family and community circumstances, including environmental factors that may contribute to client's health
- History of the presenting problem e.g. character, severity and duration of symptoms and past dental visits
- Medical history, e.g. chemotherapy
- Significant ongoing health conditions

Good oral health refers to but is not limited to:

- A person's mouth that has:
  - breath without offensive odour
  - inflammation and lesion-free soft tissue
  - intact and stable teeth without cavities
  - moist lips without chapping
  - no build up of food, calculus or plaque
  - no oral pain
  - pink, moist, uncoated tongue
  - watery plentiful saliva
- Looking after the whole mouth, including natural and artificial teeth, gums, tongue, lips and inside the cheeks
- Oral health related quality of life factors, such as appearance, social interaction and self-esteem

Unit Descriptor

Descriptor

This unit describes the skills and knowledge required by workers to provide or assist a client with their oral hygiene needs within the framework of an individualised care support plan and within their designated role and responsibilities.

Application of the Unit

Application

This unit is intended to address skills and knowledge appropriate for workers who provide direct client care in a range of health and community services environments and whose work role requires them to provide hands on provision of or assistance with a client's oral hygiene where the client is unable to do any or all of this task for themselves.

This work is carried out to achieve planned outcomes in the client's individual oral health care plan as part of their overall support plan.

| 1. Identify client's oral hygiene requirements and work within a person-centred approach to ensure good oral health | 1.1 Review individualised care support plan with client and/or supervisor to confirm support requirements to address client's oral hygiene needs
1.2 Work effectively with clients from a diverse range of backgrounds to meet individual preferences in relation to provision of support or assistance with oral hygiene
1.3 Discuss and confirm the client's level of participation in meeting their own oral hygiene preferences and provide information to the client and/or carer or substitute decision maker as required
1.4 Confirm oral hygiene requirements are within scope of own knowledge, skills and work role and seek appropriate assistance where client requirements are outside scope
1.5 Take into account and address potential impacts that provision of oral hygiene may have on the client and address any situations of risk or potential risk associated with the provision of support and confirm actions with supervisor
1.6 Identify oral hygiene products, processes and aids for providing assistance and promoting independence in line with client’s individualised care support plan
1.7 Ensure all actions are in line with legislative requirements, standards and organisation guidelines |
ELEMENT

2. Assist and support clients in their identified oral hygiene needs

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

2.1 Prepare and use in an appropriate, safe and client preferred manner:
   - oral hygiene products and aids for teeth and soft tissue
   - oral hygiene products and aids for dentures
   - other materials required for oral hygiene

2.2 Inform client of processes to take place

2.3 Provide support or assistance with oral hygiene tasks according to the individualised care support plan, organisation policies and procedures and with awareness of identified individual client preferences or risk, including:
   - toothbrushing
   - soft tissue care
   - care of dentures
   - use of alcohol-free mouthwash
   - interdental cleaning

2.4 Incorporate standard toothbrush care into procedures

2.5 Where appropriate encourage client to wear, insert and remove own dentures in line with care plan and, where necessary, support and assist clients with care of dentures to industry standards

2.6 Use techniques to improve oral hygiene practices and modified oral hygiene methods and aids where identified as needed

2.7 Use standard precautions and, where necessary, additional precautions to address infection control requirements in all oral hygiene practices
ELEMENT

3. Assist and support clients in an appropriate manner

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

3.1 Provide oral hygiene support or assistance in an appropriate environment

3.2 Use effective communication, appropriate body language and a caring attitude to facilitate client understanding of, and comfort with, oral hygiene processes taking place

3.3 Clarify and address difficulties in providing support, including client behavioural responses with client and supervisor within organisation protocols

3.4 Use recommended alternative techniques or arrangements in case of client refusal or inability to comply as recommended in the individualised care support plan

3.5 Recognise signs that indicate potential for an oral health problem, including distress or behaviours of concern, especially in clients unable to articulate their symptoms or concerns

3.6 Maintain confidentiality, privacy, dignity and respect of the client within organisation policies and procedures

4. Recognise and report changes in client oral hygiene requirements

4.1 Regularly review oral hygiene techniques being used to ensure oral health is maintained according to the oral health care plan

4.2 Identify variations in oral hygiene support requirements and/or report to supervisor and/or other appropriate personnel

4.3 Work with client and/or supervisor and/or other appropriate personnel to identify required changes to procedures and aids
ELEMENT

5. Identify variations in client behaviour and habits and if appropriate undertake visual oral check

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

5.1 Identify client behaviour and habits that may indicate oral health issues or associated pain or discomfort

5.2 Identify signs and symptoms of potential oral health issues that may indicate variation from normal or warrant attention by an oral health practitioner

5.3 Observe, listen for self-reports and question client and/or carer, and/or other relevant people as required to determine whether the client is experiencing any pain or discomfort that may be associated with oral health issues

5.4 Take into account contributing factors that may produce variation from normal behaviour

5.5 Obtain consent from the client or substitute decision maker to conduct a basic visual oral check and questioning if necessary in line with legislative requirements, organisation guidelines and within own work role

5.6 Ensure comfort of client by developing trust and rapport and working in an appropriate environment and at an optimal time

5.7 Ensure client is in a position which provides visual access to the mouth seeking their assistance to open their own mouth to minimise contact with the mouth using appropriate infection control procedures

5.8 Provide support for client's head or chin if necessary to enhance visual access without creating discomfort for the client

6. Complete reporting and documentation according to organisation policies and procedures

6.1 Document and report oral hygiene practices performed

6.2 Document and report any concerns arising during oral hygiene practices

6.3 Maintain and file documentation
Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- Awareness of the National Oral Health Plan and other relevant state, territory and national government policy and programs
- Basic anatomy and physiology underpinning oral health and hygiene, including what is considered healthy and unhealthy
- Basic understanding of variations in oral hygiene care support requirements
- Basics of oral health and hygiene
- Common and specialised equipment, products and aids utilised in provision of oral hygiene care support
- Factors that impact on oral health, including:
  - abuse
  - access to services
  - accumulation of plaque and calculus
  - alcohol, licit and illicit drugs and substances and over the counter and herbal treatments
  - alcohol misuse
  - bacteria in dental plaque
  - client education
  - correct infant feeding practices
  - diet and nutrition, including fluids
  - fluoride
  - general health and wellbeing
  - immunosuppressant conditions
  - medical history
  - oral piercings
  - psychological issues, such as fear of being seen without dentures or persisting with ill fitting dentures for satisfaction of others
  - salivary function
  - smoking
  - social and cultural determinants of health
  - susceptible tooth surfaces
  - transmission of bacteria particularly from parent to child
Essential knowledge (contd):

- Oral side effects of medications, such as metallic taste in the mouth, dry mouth syndrome and ulcers
- Organisation requirements for documentation and report writing
- Own work role and responsibilities in provision of oral hygiene
- Personal safety and security risks associated with provision of oral hygiene care support and strategies to minimise risks
- Principles and practices in undertaking technical skills associated with supporting or assisting people to meet oral hygiene care needs
- Principles and practices of confidentiality, privacy, respect and dignity
- Processes and strategies to support people with and provide oral hygiene care needs
- Role of carers and substitute decision makers in relation to oral hygiene decisions and support
- Roles of oral health practitioners
- Significance of service setting, including specific contexts of supporting oral hygiene care needs in a client care setting and in a client's private home
- Signs and symptoms of an allergic reaction
- The interaction between oral health and general health

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Accurately document activities and observations within organisation policies and procedures
- Adhere to own work role and responsibilities within organisation policies and procedures
- Carry out effective oral health self-care practices
- Communicate effectively with people requiring oral hygiene care support, including use of active listening and questioning skills
- Consistently apply standard precautions
Differentiate between healthy and unhealthy oral presentation
Identify and respond to risks associated with providing oral hygiene care support Identify variations to oral hygiene care support requirements
Liaise and report appropriately to supervisor and/or health practitioners
Obtain and follow relevant information from an individualised care support plan
Provide and/or assist with oral hygiene care support within the individual personal care context
Recognise changes of clients behaviour, habits and physical condition that might indicate potential oral health issues and report accordingly
Reflect on and improve own level and application of skills and knowledge to achieve desirable outcomes and maintain own capabilities
Support a person's direction and participation in provision of oral hygiene care support responding to personal preferences wherever appropriate
Use initiative in finding opportunities to promote oral health care and its interaction with general health
Use processes, aids and equipment appropriately in provision of oral hygiene care support, including tooth brushing, soft tissue cleaning, use of mouthwash, care of dentures, care of crowns, bridges, implants and braces
Use relevant technology, including information technology safely and effectively

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role

These include the ability to:

- Apply basic problem-solving skills to resolve problems within organisation protocols
- Apply literacy and numeracy skills required to fulfill work role in a safe manner and as specified by the organisation
- Consistently demonstrate interpersonal skills, including empathy when relating to people from a range of backgrounds and abilities
- Work effectively with clients, colleagues and supervisors

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is best assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace under the normal range of conditions
- Consistency in performance should consider the particular workplace context

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in health and community services environments should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be delivered and assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment include:
  - access to appropriate workplace where assessment can take place
  - simulation of realistic workplace setting
Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios.
- Assessment of this unit of competency will include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes.
- Consistency of performance should be demonstrated over a range of relevant workplace conditions.

Related units:

- This unit may be assessed independently or in conjunction with other units with associated workplace application.

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Oral hygiene requirements appropriate to the client include care of:

- Teeth
- Crowns, bridges, implants, braces and other orthodontic appliances
- Dentures
- Mouth
- Soft tissue
Person-centred refers to:

- Effective service delivery
- Involving clients in discussions about service delivery options and issues
- Involving clients in informed decision-making relating to their care/service
- Listening to and addressing complaints
- Obtaining informed consent
- Putting clients, carers and their preferences at the centre of service delivery

Good oral health refers to but may not be limited to:

- A person’s mouth that has:
  - breath without offensive odour
  - inflammation and lesion-free soft tissue
  - intact and stable teeth without cavities
  - moist lips without chapping
  - no build up of food, calculus or plaque
  - no oral pain
  - pink, moist, uncoated tongue
  - watery plentiful saliva
- Looking after the whole mouth, including natural and artificial teeth, gums, tongue, lips and inside the cheeks
- Oral health related quality of life factors, such as appearance, social interaction and self-esteem

Individualised care support plan may include:

- A stand-alone individualised oral health care support plan
- Care plan written by an appropriate health practitioner
- Oral hygiene care plan
- Personal care tasks embedded in a wider individualised plan
Client refers to those living in the community and/or facilities and may include:

- Children receiving care, including in children’s services
- Older persons
- Palliative care clients
- People in care or health facilities
- People with acquired brain injury
- People with dementia
- People with disabilities
- People with mental health issues

Substitute decision maker (in relation to consent) must be:

- The person appointed with the right to speak for the client, such as:
  - advocate
  - carers
  - guardians
  - health attorneys
  - medical power of attorney
  - members of family
  - other practitioners
  - parent of child
  - person responsible
  - public trustee
Potential impacts may include but not be limited to:

- Positive impacts, such as:
  - able to chew food
  - clean mouth
  - improved general health and wellbeing
  - improved social engagement or interaction
  - increased self-esteem
  - longevity
- Negative impacts, such as:
  - discomfort
  - disempowerment
  - embarrassment
  - fear
  - humiliation
  - pain
  - trauma particularly as a result of poor technique

Situations of risk or potential risk, may include but not be limited to:

- Complex care clients, such as those with dementia or Parkinson's disease
- Emotional reaction from client, such as those related to dementia or anxiety
- Infection control
- Manual handling
- Oral side effects of medication
- Physical reaction from client
- Pre-existing medical conditions
- Reaction to contact with sensitive teeth
- Resistance from client
- Triggers for seizures

Legislative requirements refers to:

- Federal, state or territory legislation that may impact on workers' practices and responsibilities, noting that implementation of the unit of competency must reflect the legislative framework in which a worker operates
Standards may include but not be limited to:

- Aged Care Standards
- Community Care Common Standards
- Disability Service Standards
- Home and Community Care (HACC) National Health Standards
- Infection Control Standards
- National Standards for Mental Health Services

Organisation guidelines may include but are not limited to:

- Clinical protocols
- Position descriptions
- Workplace policies and procedures, including:
  - infection control
  - WHS

Oral hygiene products and aids for teeth and soft tissue may include but not be limited to:

- Alcohol-free mouthwash directed by an oral health practitioner as part of an oral health care plan
- Fluoride toothpaste
- Interdental brushes
- Manual and electric toothbrushes
- Modified toothbrushes
- Mouth props (if trained in their use)
- Saliva substitutes
- Soft toothbrush suitable for bending
- Specialised aids
- Sprays
- Sugar-free gums
- Tongue scraper
- Tooth remineraliser

Oral hygiene products and aids for dentures may include:

- Denture adhesive
- Denture brush
- Denture disinfection product
- Denture labeling kit
- Denture soaking products
- Denture-friendly cleaner
- Named denture storage container (disposable or non-disposable)
Other materials required for oral hygiene may include:
- Bowl or hand basin
- Cup of fresh water
- Disposable gloves
- Hand towel to be placed across clients chest
- Lip balm
- Towel

Toothbrushing may include:
- Using currently accepted methods to clean:
  - natural teeth
  - fixed and removable prostheses
  - soft tissue

Soft tissue care refers to:
- Care of all soft tissue, including:
  - cheeks
  - gums
  - lips
  - palate
  - tongue

Care of dentures refers to:
- Cleaning, identifying and storing using currently accepted methods taking into account individual needs and preferences in line with the care plan

Use of alcohol-free mouthwash may refer to:
- That which is directed by a health practitioner as part of an oral health care plan to enhance oral hygiene

Interdental cleaning refers to:
- Cleaning between the teeth

Standard toothbrush care refers to:
- Cleaning, storage and replacement of toothbrush to currently accepted standards Techniques to improve oral hygiene practices may include but are not limited to:

- Bridging:
  - engages clients senses especially sight and touch
  - engage client first and describe and show toothbrush
  - mimic brushing of own teeth to provide physical prompt
  - place brightly coloured toothbrush in client's preferred hand and they may mirror behaviour

- Chaining:
  - if not initiated through bridging, gently bring clients hand and toothbrush to mouth, describing activity and then encourage the client to continue

- Hand over hand:
  - if chaining does not work, place hand over client's hand and start brushing client's teeth so you are doing it together

continued...

- Distraction:
  - if hand over hand method is not successful, place a familiar item, such as towel, cushion or activity board, in client's hand while brushing their teeth

- Rescuing:
  - if attempts at oral hygiene are not successful tell client you will leave it for now
  - ask for assistance and perhaps have someone else take over Modified oral hygiene methods and aids may include but are not limited to:

- Appropriate alcohol-free mouthwash and gel
- Backward bent toothbrush, or similar implement to retract cheek while brushing with another toothbrush
- Bite block
- End tufted brush
- Flossers
- Hand grip on toothbrush for clients with reduced grip strength
- High fluoride toothpaste wiped onto teeth instead of brushing as a short term alternative only
- Mouth props for clients who clench or bite or who have difficulty opening mouth (specific training required)
- Mouth spray
- Mouth swabs
- Saliva substitute
- Suction swabs
- Tongue scraper and/or brush

Standard precautions refer to infection control and may include:

- Wash hands before and after oral care
- Appropriate use of personal protective equipment (PPE):
  - eye/facial protection e.g. glasses/face shield
  - gloves
  - gown
  - mask
- Disposal of PPE

Additional precautions refer to:

- Those infection control precautions that should be used, in addition to standard precautions, when these alone might not contain transmission of infection Appropriate environment may include but is not limited to:

- Choosing location where client is most comfortable
- Ensuring good lighting
- Maintaining client's preferred routines
- Turning off competing background noise, such as television or radio
- Using aids that may ease client anxiety e.g. hand mirror
- Using brightly coloured toothbrush that can be easily seen e.g. for children or for clients with dementia or visual impairment

Effective communication includes but is not limited to:

- Active listening and questioning
- Always explaining actions and processes and reinforcing with gestures where appropriate
- Asking questions that require a yes or no response when oral hygiene practices are being carried out
- Giving one instruction or piece of information at a time
- Observing client closely as lack of response, signs of frustration, anger, disinterest or inappropriate responses may suggest communication is too complex or that client is uncomfortable
- Speaking at appropriate volume, clearly and at clients pace
- Using reassuring words and positive feedback
- Using words client can understand

Appropriate body language may include but is not limited to:

- Being aware of approaching client appropriately e.g. diagonally from the front and at eye level
- Gently touching the client on the hand or lower arm to get attention, if necessary
- Positioning self at eye level and maintaining eye contact, as appropriate
- Being aware that personal space of clients can vary
- Being consistent in approach with positive expression and caring language Caring attitude includes but is not limited to:

- Allowing plenty of time for client to respond to questions or instructions
- Focusing on building a good relationship before starting oral hygiene
- Using the client's name
- Using a calm, friendly and non-demanding manner
- Working with a person-centred approach

Client behavioural responses may include but are not limited to:

- Biting toothbrush
- Coughing
- Distress induced vomiting
- Fear response
- Gagging
- Grabbing or hitting out
- Leaving
- Not opening the mouth
- Not responding to directions
- Spitting
- Verbal aggression

Review may include but not be limited to the following questions and suggestions:

- Are the oral hygiene aids appropriate for the client?
- Do others e.g. family and/or carer have input?
- Has the observed behaviour improved?
- Is attitude and approach considerate of client needs?
- Is the approach and routine consistent for client?
- Is the client more receptive to oral hygiene support?
- Is the environment, timing, language and expression right for client?
Report may include:

- Non-verbal:
  - care plans
  - case notes
  - hazard and incident reports
  - photographs
  - progress reports
- Verbal:
  - face-to-face
  - telephone
  - recorded

Variations in client behaviour and habits may include:

- Anxiety around, or avoidance of, specific events
- Apparent pain or discomfort in or around the mouth
- Behaviours of concern
- Change in eating habits
- Change in mood or demeanour
- Changes in communication
- Crying
- Difficulty with eating, including spitting out food
- Hands in the mouth
- Inconsistent wearing of dentures
- Lethargy
- Physical aggression
- Refusal to open mouth
- Rubbing own teeth or gums
- Seemingly normal behaviours e.g. coughing could be indicator that food is in the lungs
- Self-harming behaviour
- Social isolation or withdrawal
Signs and symptoms of potential oral health issues may include but not be limited to:

- Observed and/or reported signs in or around the mouth, such as:
  - bad breath (halitosis)
  - bleeding
  - broken teeth
  - brown or discoloured teeth
  - calculus (mineralised plaque that will not brush off) on teeth particularly at gum line
  - change in colour or coating of tongue
  - dry mouth
  - eruption issues for children
  - evidence of build up of dental plaque on teeth, particularly at gum line
  - holes in teeth
  - lip blisters, sores or cracks
  - loose or mobile teeth
  - mouth debris/excessive food left in mouth
  - mouth ulcers
  - premature loss of baby teeth
  - receding or enlarged gums
  - soft tissue lesions e.g. red or white spots
  - swelling of face or localised swelling/inflammation

continued.....

Signs and symptoms of potential oral health issues may include but not be limited to (cont’d):

- Issues reported by client and/or others, such as:
  - tooth sensitivity
  - refusal of oral care
  - sore mouth, gums, tongue or teeth

- Other observations, such as:
  - change in appetite
  - change in demeanour or mood
  - difficulty eating/speaking
  - inability to open mouth very wide
  - irritability
  - refusing to open mouth
  - weight loss

- Observed and/or reported issues with dentures, such as:
  - broken metal wires/clips on partial denture
  - calculus on denture
• chipped or missing teeth on denture or chipped or broken acrylic (gum) areas on denture
• denture movement when client is speaking or eating
• refusal or failure to wear denture
• sore spots caused by wearing denture
• unclean denture

Other relevant people may include but is not limited to:
• External health care providers
• Other service providers
• Personnel internal to the service provider

Contributing factors may include but not be limited to:
• Abuse
• Ageing
• Disability
• Injury
• Medications
• Substance misuse
• Systemic illness

Unit Descriptor

Descriptor
This unit describes the skills and knowledge required by workers to apply and manage use of basic oral health products and provide assistance to clients in the use of those products for oral health care as identified in an individualised oral health care plan and where approved within their designated role.

Application of the Unit

Application
This unit is intended to address specialised skills and knowledge appropriate for a limited range of health and community services workers whose work roles specifically include the application of identified oral health products in line with legislative, regulatory and jurisdictional requirements, organisation guidelines and standard precautions and excluding the application of fluoride varnish.

The work involves implementation of oral or written individualised oral health care plans that have been prepared by or under advice from an appropriate registered health practitioner and ideally an oral health practitioner.

</table>
| 1. Prepare for and participate in the application of basic oral health care products | 1.1 Identify and comply with organisation guidelines relating to each product and its administration
1.2 Identify high risk products and comply with specific guidelines relating to their administration
1.3 Explain product application process and purpose to client and/or substitute decision maker in line with product guidelines, oral health care benefits and any potential risks
1.4 Obtain feedback from client to determine that procedure is understood and obtain consent from client or relevant substitute decision maker to undertake process
1.5 Ensure client is positioned as comfortably as possible according to their individual needs
1.6 Prepare products and equipment as required and ensure that product has not expired by checking the expiry date on product
1.7 Ensure all actions are in line with legislative requirements, organisation guidelines, standard precautions and within own work role |
| 2. Apply basic oral health care products | 2.1 Apply product in safe and effective manner in line with oral health care plan and product guidelines
2.2 Support client to apply own product where able 2.3 Where assistance is required position self to suit client or situation
2.4 Use appropriate amount of product and apply as recommended in line with oral health care plan
2.5 Ensure application is undertaken using correct applicator at correct location
2.6 Use recommended alternative techniques or arrangements outlined in the oral health care plan in case of client refusal or inability to comply |
ELEMENT

3. Support oral health and oral hygiene of clients with special care needs

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

3.1 Support client with special care needs in line with oral health care plan

3.2 Be aware of common oral health problems associated with clients with palliative care needs and take appropriate action in line with their needs

3.3 Be aware of common oral health problems associated with nil by mouth instructions and take appropriate action in line with client needs

3.4 Be aware of common difficulties associated with dementia that may result in oral health problems and take appropriate action in line with client needs

3.5 Be aware of common oral side effects of medication and take appropriate action in line with client needs

3.6 Ensure identified preventive measures are implemented in line with oral health care plan

4. Complete reporting and documentation according to organisation policies and procedures

4.1 Document and report processes undertaken and any concerns arising during oral health practices

4.2 Maintain and file documentation
Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- Awareness of the National Oral Health Plan and other relevant state, territory and national government policy and programs
- Basic anatomy and physiology underpinning oral health and hygiene
- Benefits and risks associated with basic oral health products
- Common equipment and aids utilised in the application of oral hygiene products e.g. mouth props
- Factors that impact on oral health, including:
  - abuse
  - access to services
  - accumulation of plaque and calculus
  - alcohol, licit and illicit drugs and substances, and over the counter and herbal treatments
  - alcohol misuse
  - bacteria in dental plaque
  - client education
  - correct infant feeding practices
  - diet and nutrition, including fluids
  - fluoride
  - general health and wellbeing
  - immunosuppressant conditions
  - medical history
  - oral piercings
  - psychological issues, such as fear of being seen without dentures or persisting with ill fitting dentures for satisfaction of others
  - salivary function
  - smoking
  - social and cultural determinants of health
  - susceptible tooth surfaces
  - transmission of bacteria particularly from parent to child
  - trauma, such as from seizures
- Healthy eating recommendations as identified in the National Health and Medical...
Research Council's (NHMRC) Australian Dietary Guidelines

- Impact of certain health conditions and related treatments on oral health e.g. immunosuppressant conditions, HIV, chemotherapy and radiation
- Individualised oral health care support plans, including terminology
- Work health and safety (WHS) issues and procedures, including those related to manual handling and infection control

continued...

Essential knowledge (contd):

- Oral disease and broad treatment options available
- Oral health issues for identified high risk sub-populations
- Oral side effects of medications, such as metallic taste in the mouth, dry mouth syndrome and ulcers
- Own work role and responsibilities in oral health care
- Personal safety and security risks associated with provision of oral hygiene care support
- Practical use of oral health products
- Principles and practices in undertaking technical skills associated with the application of oral health products
- Principles and practices of confidentiality, privacy, respect and consent
- Processes and strategies to support people with oral hygiene care needs
- Role of carers in relation to oral health care needs of clients
- Saliva and its role in the maintenance of oral health:
  - acting as a lubricant
  - delivering calcium, phosphate and fluoride to the tooth surface
  - protecting teeth by neutralising acid
- Significance of service setting, including specific contexts, such as providing oral hygiene in a client care setting or in a client's private home
- Signs and symptoms of an allergic reaction
- Specialist oral care and support for clients in circumstances, such as those who:
  - are aged
  - are on nil by mouth instructions
  - are receiving palliative care
  - are undergoing chemotherapy
  - who have enteral feeding, such as via a nasogastric tube or a percutaneous endoscopic gastrostomy (PEG) tube
  - have dementia
  - have epilepsy
  - have intellectual or physical disability
  - have loss of tooth through extraction
  - have loss of tooth through injury
  - have medical or psychiatric conditions
  - have post-surgery or trauma needs
• Strategies to minimise personal safety and security risks associated with provision of oral hygiene care support
• Symptoms and signs that suggest a need for further assessment and/or treatment
• The interaction between oral health and general health

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

• Adhere to own work role and responsibilities in line with organisation policies and procedures
• Apply identified oral health products (excluding fluoride varnish) safely and effectively in line with product guidelines and oral health care benefits
• Communicate effectively with people requiring application of oral health care products
• Identify and respond to risks associated with the application of oral health care products
• Liaise and report appropriately to supervisor and/or health practitioners
• Make informed observations and report appropriately, including the identification of variations to oral health care support requirements
• Obtain and follow relevant information from an individualised care support plan
• Provide physical and psychosocial support to the person when assisting with oral care needs including, meeting personal preferences, wherever appropriate
• Reflect on and improve own level and application of skills and knowledge to achieve desirable outcomes and maintain own capabilities
• Use processes, aids and equipment appropriately in application of products
• Use relevant technology, including information technology, safely and effectively

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role

These include the ability to:

• Apply basic problem solving skills to resolve problems within organisation protocols
• Apply literacy and numeracy skills required to fulfill work role in a safe manner and as specified by the organisation
• Consistently demonstrate interpersonal skills, including empathy, when relating to people from a range of backgrounds and abilities

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is best assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace under the normal range of conditions
- Consistency in performance should consider the particular workplace context

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in health and community services environments should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be delivered and assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment include:
  - access to appropriate workplace where assessment can take place
  - simulation of realistic workplace setting
Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios.
- Assessment of this unit of competency will include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes.
- Consistency of performance should be demonstrated over a range of relevant workplace conditions.

Related units:

- This unit may be assessed independently or in conjunction with other units with associated workplace application.

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.
Basic oral health care products include:

- Products specified in the client's individualised oral health care plan, such as:
  - alcohol-free mouthwash
  - antibacterial products
  - lip moisturiser
  - non-medically prescribed therapeutic agents and topical analgesic
  - remineralisation products
  - saliva substitutes/stimulants:
    - chewing gum
    - gels
    - liquids
    - lozenges
    - sprays

Organisation guidelines may include but are not limited to:

- Clinical protocols
- Position descriptions
- Workplace policies and procedures, including:
  - infection control
  - WHS

High risk products may include:

- Pharmacy only products, such as:
  - antifungal products
  - fluoride gel
  - high fluoride toothpaste
  - topical anaesthetic

Client refers to those living in the community and/or facilities and may include:

- Children receiving care, including in children's services
- Older persons
- Palliative care clients
- People in care or health facilities
- People with acquired brain injury
- People with dementia
- People with disabilities
- People with mental health issues
Substitute decision maker (in relation to consent) must be:

- The person appointed with the right to speak for the client, such as:
  - advocate
  - carers
  - guardians
  - health attorneys
  - medical power of attorney
  - members of family
  - other practitioners
  - parent of child
  - person responsible
  - public trustee

Legislative requirements refer to:

- Federal, state or territory legislation that may impact on workers’ practices and responsibilities, noting that implementation of the unit of competency must reflect the legislative framework in which a worker operates

Standard precautions refer to infection control and include:

- Washing hands before and after oral care
- Appropriate use of personal protective equipment (PPE):
  - gloves
  - mask
  - eye/facial protection e.g. glasses/face shield
  - gown
  - Disposal of PPE

Oral health care plan may include:

- A stand-alone individualised oral health care support plan
- Care plan written by an appropriate health practitioner
- Oral hygiene care plan
- Personal care tasks embedded in a wider individualised plan
Position self may include but is not limited to:

- Front position:
  - sit client in chair facing you
  - if in bed, support their head with pillow
  - support client's chin with index finger and thumb without placing pressure on throat
  - use thumb holding chin to roll down and hold lower lip for better vision and access
  - client mouth to be partly opened to comfortable level

- Stand behind position/head support position:
  - stand behind and to the side of client
  - rest client's head against side of your body and in the crook of your arm
  - support client's chin with your index finger and thumb without placing pressure on throat
  - use thumb holding chin to roll down and hold lower lip for better vision and access
  - client mouth to be partly opened to comfortable level

Oral health refers to but may not be limited to:

- A person's mouth that has:
  - breath without offensive odour
  - inflammation and lesion-free soft tissue

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions.
  This may include the use of languages other than English and alternative communication systems.
- Assessment may be conducted over one or more occasions.

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work.
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment.
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people.
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities.

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged.
- Resource requirements for assessment of this unit include access to:
  - an appropriate workplace where assessment can be conducted or simulation of realistic workplace setting for assessment.

Method of assessment:

- Assessment may include observations, questioning and evidence gathered from the workplace.
Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Team includes:
- Formal and informal arrangements
- Workgroups including members from outside the organisation

The context for creating, maintaining and enhancing productive working relationships includes with:
- Clients
- Peers
- Significant others
- Staff for whom worker is responsible
- Supervisors
- Unpaid workers

Guidelines and procedures include:
- Equal employment opportunity
- First aid
- Grievance management
- Harassment
- Infection control
- Work health and safety (WHS)
- Workplace behaviours

Creating, maintaining and enhancing productive working relationships will be carried out within requirements established by:
- Organisation policy, procedures and standards
- State and commonwealth legislation

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is most appropriately assessed in the workplace under the normal range of workplace conditions
- It is recommended that assessment take place on more than one occasion or evidence gathered that provides evidence of competence over a period of time
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resource requirements for assessment of this unit include access to an appropriate workplace where assessment can be conducted

Method of assessment:

- Assessment may include observations, questioning and evidence gathered from the workplace

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.
RANGE STATEMENT

Workplace change may relate to:

- Community expectations
- Levels and sources of funding
- Management decision-making processes
- Nature and focus of service, programs and activities
- Service users/funding providers
- Staff requirements
- Technological changes
- Use and availability of resources
- Workplace policies and approaches
- Workplace processes, practices and systems

Support may include:

- Emotional support
- Organisation resources
- Professional guidance
- Training or related skills and knowledge development performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role

These include the ability to:

- Communicate instructions and directions
- Represent issues to management
- Complete a range of documentation
- Encourage team members
- Undertake informal performance counselling
- Apply team building skills

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit will be most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions
- Assessment of performance should be over a period of time covering all categories of the range of variable statements that are applicable in the learners environment
Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment include access to:
  - an appropriate workplace and/or simulation of realistic workplace setting where assessment can take place
  - human resources consistent with the range of workplace variables

Method of assessment:

- Observation in the workplace
- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all categories of the range of variables statements in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on underpinning knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons
Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Activities may include:

- Non operational activities (tasks, projects, preparing documentation)
- Operational activities (responding to emergencies and non-emergency operations including sport and recreation events, public relations activities, special events and activities)

Appropriate personnel may include:

- Manager
- Human resource personnel
- Team leader
- Supervisor

Colleagues may include:

- Experienced colleagues
- New or inexperienced colleagues
- Work experience students/trainees

Conflict may be:

- Between the learner and a colleague or colleagues
- Between two or more colleagues

Meetings may include:

- Regular full meetings of the team
- Special meetings related to specific tasks
- Meetings of part of the team only

Performance issues may include:

- WHS
- Hours of work details
- Concerns about ability to complete work
- Inadequate resources
Performance requirements include:

- Goals
- Objectives
- Plans
- Standards

Required documentation may include:

- Forms
- Proformas
- Incident reports
- Rosters
- Timesheets
- Written reports
- Logs

Work requirements may include:

- Tasks
- Projects
- Activities
- Timelines
- Other personnel involved
- Equipment to be used

  - effective use of questioning techniques
  - clarity in oral communication

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- Assessment must ensure:
  - project or work activities that allow the candidate to demonstrate coaching skills under normal workplace conditions including real work tasks to coach others in, use of suitable equipment and materials
  - for generic pre-employment training and assessment, a range of industry contexts must be addressed
  - where the focus is sector or workplace specific, training and assessment must be tailored to meet particular needs
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged

Method of assessment:

- Assessment methods must be chosen to ensure that communication skills can be practically demonstrated on more than one occasion, over time to demonstrate the full range of skills and contexts
- Methods must include assessment of knowledge as well as assessment of practical skills
- The following examples are appropriate for this unit:
  - direct observation of the candidate coaching a colleague in a required work skill
  - role plays in which the candidate demonstrates training and coaching techniques, or communication skills such as questioning and providing feedback
  - questions about training principles
  - review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate
Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Factors which could influence the decision whether or not to conduct coaching may include:

- Request for coaching from client, colleague or workplace personnel
- Own observation and workplace experience
- Direction from other colleagues
- Consent for coaching gained from client/colleague

Coaching sessions could be conducted in a range of contexts including:

- On-the-job during work hours
- Before or after work
- In a simulated location away from the actual workplace

Skills to be coached are generally those which do not require formal or extended training sessions but which are short, commonly-used tasks such as:

- Client/customer service skills
- Technical or practical skills such as operating equipment or completing documentation
- Selling or promoting products and services
- Job seeking and interview skills
- Project management skills

Essential knowledge required to carry out tasks or undertake skills effectively such as:

- Knowledge of products or services
- Principles underpinning skills such as communication
- Reasons for undertaking various tasks
- Legislative or occupational health and safety requirements
RANGE STATEMENT

Performance problems or difficulties may be due to

- Shyness or lack of confidence
- Breakdown in communication
- Language or cultural barriers
- Insufficient opportunity to practise
- Inappropriate circumstances for coaching
- Inadequate modification to match client's learning style or needs

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions. This may include the use of languages other than English and alternative communication systems.
- Assessment is recommended to be conducted on more than one occasion and should include each phase of managing a project i.e. scoping, preparation, promotion, management and evaluation.

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work.
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment.
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people.
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities.

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged.
- Resource requirements for assessment of this unit include access to:
  - an appropriate workplace where assessment can be conducted or simulation of realistic workplace setting for assessment.

Method of assessment:

- Assessment may include observations, questioning and evidence gathered from the workplace setting e.g. portfolios, completed reports on projects etc.
Range Statement
RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

• The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
• This unit is most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions
  This may include the use of languages other than English and alternative communication systems
• It is recommended that assessment take place on more than one occasion to enable all aspects of managing a service organisation to be assessed
Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resource requirements for assessment of this unit include access to:
  - an appropriate workplace where assessment can be conducted or simulation of realistic workplace setting for assessment

Method of assessment:

- Assessment may include observations, questioning and evidence gathered from the workplace

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:
- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit can be assessed in the workplace, in the community or in a relevant simulated environment e.g. use of case studies, use of role plays
- Consistency in performance should relate to outcomes required by leadership in area of practice
Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resource requirements for assessment of this unit include access to:
  - an appropriate workplace or community
  - an environment capable of accurately simulating these
  - assessor with a relevant professional background and experience as a practitioner
  - self assessment exercises

Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons
Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Factors that may impact on practice will include:
- Attitudes, values, beliefs of stakeholders
- Composition and nature of the service system
- Government role and policies
- Organisation policy and principles
- Other organisations, networks, services
- Resources
- Roles, relationships, obligations, accountability and protocol

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:

- Analyse information, data and relationships of children in care
- Implement procedures relating to services offered by outside school hours care including, experiences, programs, inclusive practices, behaviour support
- Reflect upon own practice
- Respond appropriately to behaviours of risk
- Seek feedback from supervisor about performance
- Take into account and use opportunities to address waste minimisation, environmental responsibility and sustainable practice issues

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace setting under the normal range of workplace conditions
- Assessment must demonstrate consistency of application of skills and knowledge described in this unit of competency
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Access and equity considerations:
- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:
- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment include access to relevant workplace or simulated realistic workplace setting where assessment may take place

Method of assessment:
- Assessment may include observation, questioning and evidence gathered from a workplace environment

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.
RANGE STATEMENT

Appropriate communication techniques may include:

- Checking understanding through restating using own words, summarising or asking questions
- Demonstrating interest in the topic using body language (e.g. make eye contact, lean forward, nod)
- Focusing attention on the child speaking
- Ignoring distractions
- Listening with the senses
- Responding to questions
- Suspending own opinions and emotions
- Taking a position close to the child speaking

Information that the child provides may include about:

- Activities/programs
- Dislikes
- Emotions
- Family
- Holidays
- Needs
- Preferences
- Relationships
- School
- Self

Adjust communication to ensure the inclusion of children with additional needs may require the use of:

- Assistive technologies
- Interpreters professional or family or siblings
- Pictures and drawings

Child's development includes:

- Cognitive
- Emotional
- Language
- Physical
- Psychological
- Social

Activities may include:

- Cultural needs/activities
- Developmental
- Homework assistance
- Life/social skills
- Recreational

Industry standards and best practice approaches refer to:

- Any legislated standards and/or regulations of care in out of school hours programs
- Standards set down by national and/or state/territory bodies responsible for ensuring the standards of care in out of school hours programs

- Provide care that reduces client's discomfort
- Contribute to a supportive environment that enables clients and their families and other staff members to provide a palliative approach to palliative care
- Use literacy and numeracy skills as required to fulfil work role in a safe manner and as specified by the organisation/service
- Seek clarification and feedback from supervisors, clients and colleagues if unsure of work role
- Use basic problem solving skills to resolve problems of limited difficulty within organisation protocols

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit of competency will be most appropriately assessed in a simulated workplace and/or in the workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions
- Assessment will be conducted or evidence gathered over a period of time and cover the normal range of workplace situations and settings
- Consistency of performance should be demonstrated over the required range of situations relevant to the workrole
- Evidence of competence must be demonstrated through a minimum of three (3) different assessment methods, which may include:
  - observation in the workplace
  - written assignments/projects
  - case study and scenario as a basis for discussion of issues and strategies to contribute to best practice.
  - questioning
  - role play/simulation

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resource requirements for assessment of this unit include access to:
  - an appropriate workplace where assessment can take place
  - equipment and resources normally used in the workplace

Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.
RANGE STATEMENT

Aims of a palliative approach adapted from Guidelines for a Palliative Approach in Residential Aged Care (2004) is:

- An approach linked to palliative care that is used by primary care services and practitioners to improve the quality of life for individuals with a life limiting illness, their caregivers and family
- The palliative approach incorporates a concern for the holistic needs of patients and carers that is reflected in assessment and in the primary treatment of pain and physical, psychological, social and spiritual problems
- Application of the palliative approach to the care of an individual patient is not delayed until the end stages of their illness
  Instead, it provides a focus on active comfort-focused care and a positive approach to reducing suffering and promoting understanding of loss and bereavement in the wider community
- Underlying the philosophy of a palliative approach is a positive and open attitude towards dying and death

Using a palliative approach includes:

- Identifying the client, family and carer as the unit of care
- Participating in a team approach to address the needs of client, families and carers ensuring a palliative approach
- Seeking advice from appropriate person e.g. supervisor or team leader or palliative care team
- Maximising self care and self-determination for the client
- Assisting in the psychological and spiritual aspects of care for the client
- Providing support for clients, family and carer using a palliative approach
- Recognising symptoms of pain, discomfort and other symptoms
- Recognising the signs that death may be imminent
- Practice that reflects an understanding of the impact of a palliative approach in an organisation
- Maintaining the client's dignity
- Understanding the needs of clients approaching end-of-life
RANGE STATEMENT

Sources of loss and grief may include:

- Worker may have experienced a loss of their own and be grieving
- Frequency and number of deaths experienced
- Need to resolve some issues when a client dies
- Different responses to loss and grief of co-workers

Own emotional responses may include:

- A range of emotions that may be demonstrated or displayed as a response to the process of loss and grief, for example:
  - crying and feelings of sadness
  - poor concentration
  - fear, anger, silence which may appear singularly or together and prolong the worker's own grief

Misconceptions relating to use of pain relieving medication may include:

- All members of staff should feel confident to ask questions and seek clarification about analgesia, addition and drowsiness as well as when hearing any of the following statements:
  - 'pain relief should only be given for pain that is currently present'
  - 'doctors and nurses are the best judge of a client's pain'
  - 'clients should not receive pain relief until cause is determined'
  - 'clients may become addicted'
  - 'strong analgesics may shorten life'
  - 'pain management alone is not palliative care'
  - 'client may become too drowsy to communicate with family'

Advanced care directives are:

- Sometimes called a 'living will' and describes one's future preferences for medical treatment
- Contains instructions that consent to, or refuse, the future use of specified medical treatments
- Becomes effective in situations where the patient no longer has capacity to make legal decisions
RANGE STATEMENT

Advanced care directives may include:

- Medical treatment preference, including those influenced by religious or other values and beliefs
- Particular conditions or states that the person would find unacceptable should these be the likely result of applying life-sustaining treatment, for example severe brain injury with no capacity to communicate or self care
- How far treatment should go when the patient's condition is 'terminal', 'incurable' or 'irreversible' (depending on terminology used in specific forms)
- The wishes of someone without relatives to act as their 'person responsible' in the event they became incompetent or where there is no one that person would want to make such decisions on their behalf
- A nominated substitute decision-maker that the treating clinician may seek out to discuss treatment decisions
- Other non-medical aspects of care that are important to the person during their dying phase
- Relevant state and territory legislation or guidelines on advanced care directives

Legal implications of advanced care directives:

- As per state and territory legislation or guidelines on advanced care directives

End-of-life ethical decisions may include:

- Ongoing discussion with the client, family, doctor, guardian and organisation to ensure that the client's and/or family's wishes are up-to-date

Client's lifestyle choices may include:

- Personal supports and relationships
- Social activities
- Emotional supports
- Cultural and spiritual supports
- Sexuality and intimacy supports

Life limiting illness describes:

- Illnesses where it is expected that death will be a direct consequence of the specified illness. This definition is inclusive of both a malignant and non-malignant illness
- Life limiting illnesses might be expected to shorten an individual's life expectancy (Standards for Providing Quality Palliative Care to all Australians, Palliative Care Australia, November 2005)

Strategies to promote comfort may include:

- Regular observation, reporting and documentation of client's comfort
- Provision of pain relieving measures by appropriate member of staff (see state/territory legislation regarding pain-relieving medications and organisation protocols)
- Other measures to promote comfort and relieve pain - massage, relaxation, distraction, aromatherapy

Carers include:

- Carers are usually family members who provide support to children or adults who have a disability, mental illness, chronic condition or who are frail aged
- Carers can be parents, partners, brothers, sisters, friends or children. Some carers are eligible for government benefits while others are employed or have a private income (Carers Australia, 2004)

Impact on carers may include:

- Changing nature of carer's role
- Grief due to multiple losses

Guardian refers to:

- A person appointed to make personal and lifestyle decisions for an adult with an impaired capacity
- A guardian can make decisions about an adult's lifestyle and/or health care
- Role to be interpreted in line with individual state and territory legislation or guidelines on definition of guardian
RANGE STATEMENT

Client:
- May also refer to resident or patient throughout this document

Ethical issues may include:
- Decisions regarding medical treatment
- Conflict that may occur in relation to personal values and decisions made by or for the client

- Ethical and legal issues related to a palliative care approach
- Basic information about the use of pain relieving medication for staff, client and their family and within level of responsibility
- Awareness of hydration and nutrition requirements during a palliative approach and at end-of-life
- Awareness of the various signs of imminent death/deterioration

Essential skills:
The candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role. These include the ability to:

- Communicate effectively with clients, their families, carers and other team members using effective listening, sensitive clarification and questioning, recognition of non-verbal cues, and provision of information within level of responsibility

- Share knowledge and information with other team members regarding the palliative approach
- Contribute to the provision of an environment that supports clients and their families and ensures other staff members are able to provide a palliative approach to palliative care
- Understand and adhere to own responsibilities and ensure other staff are aware of their roles and responsibilities
- Document clearly advanced care directive and end-of-life needs on care plan and report to appropriate person
- Intervene appropriately in accordance with care plan in the care of clients with pain relief and other symptom and comfort promotion
- Assess effectiveness of pain relief and comfort strategies
- Identify and reflect on own performance and attitudes regarding a palliative approach and end-of-life care
- Identify and document cultural and spiritual issues that may impact on a palliative approach
- Be supportive of team members to undertake informal and formal debriefing as necessary
- Contribute to and initiate problem solving processes to resolve issues as necessary
- Use literacy and numeracy skills as required to fulfil work role in a safe manner and as specified by the organisation

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit of competency will be most appropriately assessed in a simulated workplace and/or in the workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions
- Assessment will be conducted or evidence gathered over a period of time and cover the normal range of workplace situations and settings
- Consistency of performance should be demonstrated over the required range of situations relevant to the workrole
- Evidence of competence must be demonstrated through a minimum of three (3) different assessment methods, which may include:
  - observation in the workplace
  - written assignments/projects
  - case study and scenario as a basis for discussion of issues and strategies to contribute to best practice.
  - questioning
  - role play/simulation

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Context of and specific resources for assessment:
- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resource requirements for assessment of this unit include access to:
  - an appropriate workplace where assessment can take place
  - equipment and resources normally used in the workplace

Method of assessment:
- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons

- Recognising the signs that death may be imminent
- Practice that reflects an understanding of the impact of a palliative approach in an organisation
- Maintaining the client's dignity
- Understanding the needs of clients approaching end-of-life
RANGE STATEMENT

Issues of loss and grief may include:

- Experiences of the worker of their own loss and grief
- Ability of worker to address loss and grief when a client dies
- Frequency and number of deaths experienced
- Acknowledge the need to resolve some issues when a client dies
- Support of co-workers in their response to loss and grief

Emotional responses in self and others may include:

- A range of emotions that may be demonstrated or displayed as a response to the process of loss and grief, for example:
  - crying and feelings of sadness
  - poor concentration
  - fear, anger, silence which may appear singularly or together and prolong the worker's own grief

Advanced care planning refers to:

- The process of preparing for likely scenarios near end of life and usually includes assessment of, and dialogue about a person's understanding of their medical history and condition, values, preferences and personal and family resources
- Advanced care planning elements are the written directive and an appointment of a substitute decision-maker
- As per state and territory legislation or guidelines on advanced care planning

Advanced care directives are:

- Sometimes called a 'living will' and describe one's future preferences for medical treatment
- Contain instructions that consent to, or refuse, the future use of specified medical treatments
- Become effective in situations where the patient no longer has capacity to make legal decisions
- Are to be in alignment with state and territory legislation or guidelines on advanced care planning
- Are to be completed as one component of the broader advanced care planning process. Documenting advanced care directives is not compulsory as the person may choose to verbally communicate their wishes to the doctor or family, or appoint a substitute decision-maker to make decisions on their behalf.

Examples of advanced care directives are:

- medical treatment preference, including those influenced by religious or other values and beliefs
- particular conditions or states that the person would find unacceptable should these be the likely result of applying life-sustaining treatment, for example severe brain injury with no capacity to communicate or self care
- how far treatment should go when the patient’s condition is 'terminal', 'incurable' or 'irreversible' (depending on terminology used in specific forms)
- the wishes of someone without relatives to act as their 'person responsible' in the event they became incompetent or where there is no one that person would want to make such decisions on their behalf
- a nominated substitute decision-maker that the treating clinician may seek out to discuss treatment decisions
- other non-medical aspects of care that are important to the person during their dying phase

Legal implications of advanced care directives:

- As per state and territory legislation or guidelines on advanced care directives
RANGE STATEMENT

End-of-life ethical decisions may include:
- Ongoing discussion with the client, family, doctor, guardian and organisation to ensure that the client's and/or family's wishes are up-to-date

Client's lifestyle choices may include:
- Personal supports and relationships
- Social activities
- Emotional supports
- Cultural and spiritual supports
- Sexuality and intimacy supports

Life limiting illness describes:
- Illnesses where it is expected that death will be a direct consequence of the specified illness
- This definition is inclusive of both a malignant and non-malignant illness
- Life limiting illnesses might be expected to shorten an individual's life expectancy (Standards for Providing Quality Palliative Care to all Australians, Palliative Care Australia, November 2005)

Strategies to relieve pain may include:
- Regular assessment and effectiveness of strategies are documented
- Comfort measures using a range of therapies as requested by the client, carer and/or family
- Environmental aspects such as room heating and cooling
- Pain relieving medication to be administered by a Registered Nurse or endorsed Enrolled Nurse in line with state/territory legislation
- Pain relieving therapies other than medication to be administered by appropriate staff member
- Psychological, cultural and spiritual activities
- Other measures to promote comfort and relieve pain - massage, relaxation, distraction, aromatherapy

Carers include:
- Carers are usually family members who provide support to children or adults who have a disability, mental illness, chronic condition or who are frail aged
- Carers can be parents, partners, brothers, sisters, friends or children. Some carers are eligible for government benefits while others are employed or have a private income (Carers Australia, 2004)

Impact on carers may include:
- Changing nature of carer's role
- Grief due to multiple losses

Guardian refers to:
- A person appointed to make personal and lifestyle decisions for an adult with an impaired capacity. A guardian can make decisions about an adult's lifestyle and/or health care
- Role to be interpreted in line with individual state and territory legislation or guidelines on definition of guardian

Client:
- May also refer to resident or patient throughout this document

Ethical issues may include:
- Decisions regarding medical treatment
- Conflict that may occur in relation to personal values and decisions made by or for the client

• Apply numeracy skills required to fulfil work role in a safe manner and as specified by the organisation
• Apply basic problem solving skills to resolve problems of limited difficulty within organisation protocols
• Work effectively with clients, colleagues and supervisors
• Demonstrate safe and effective use of workplace technology in line with work health and safety (WHS) guidelines

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- It is recommended that assessment or information for assessment will be conducted or gathered over a period of time and cover the normal range of workplace situations and settings
- This unit will be most appropriately assessed in the workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions
- Where, for reasons of safety, space, or access to equipment and resources, assessment takes place away from the workplace, the assessment environment should represent workplace conditions as closely as possible

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment include access to:
  - appropriate workplace where assessment can take place
  - relevant organisation policy, protocols and procedures
  - equipment and resources normally used in the workplace
Method of assessment may include:

- Observation in the workplace
- Written assignments/projects
- Case study and scenario analysis
- Questioning
- Role play simulation

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Pastoral care may include:

- Support or advice in relation to personal, vocational, religious, spiritual, morale, moral, ethical or physical circumstances
- Spiritual support or advice
- Formal or informal support
- Marriage and relationship counselling

Communication skills include:

- A variety of non-aggressive interrogative techniques and questioning styles

Ethical and moral guidelines may include:

- Professional codes of practice
- Ethical standards
- Denominational or multi-faith guidelines

Appropriate personnel or agencies may include:

- Other community services or health agencies
- Other denominations or religious groups
- Careers advisers
- Life coaches
Community based religious and spiritual care providers may include:
- Faith based groups
- Faith based care organisations and charities
- Faith based welfare groups
- Faith based NGO's
- Local churches
- Christian care organisations and charities

Role of pastoral care workers includes:
- Human resources management
- Pastoral care of co-workers
- Pastoral care of clients

Appropriate communication and relationship building processes may include:
- Courtesy
- Empathy
- Non-judgemental care
- Observing and listening
- Respect of individual differences

ELEMENT

2. Provide briefing materials or report on policy issues

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

2.1 Collate and analyse findings of the research and consultation processes

2.2 Identify factors impacting on research or consultation processes and incorporate into briefing material

2.3 Incorporate reasoned argument, evidence and recommendations into report

2.4 Prepare report in a format appropriate to audience, purpose and context

2.5 Provide report to stakeholders and decision-makers for consideration
Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:
It is critical that the candidate demonstrate knowledge of:

- Policies impacting on the issue under consideration
- The contexts for policies, people and the organisation
- Basic research and consultation techniques

The candidate must also be able to demonstrate relevant knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role, such as knowledge of:

- The limits of the worker's own role and competence and the organisation's role

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Review and analyse relevant organisation, government or other applicable policy
- Consult with relevant stakeholders
- Develop appropriate documentation to support review process

In addition the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role

These include the ability to:

- Demonstrate involvement with stakeholders relevant to the organisation and the policy issue under consideration
- Demonstrate reasoning, including identification of implications and consequences of particular courses of action
- Demonstrate application of skills in:
  - report writing, including translation of complex concepts into simple language or images
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- effective use of relevant information technology

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions
  This may include the use of languages other than English and alternative communication systems
- It is recommended that assessment take place on one or more than occasions to enable assessment of all aspects of policy review to take place

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resource requirements for assessment of this unit include access to:
  - an appropriate workplace where assessment can take place, or simulation of realistic workplace setting for assessment

Method of assessment:

- Assessment may include observations, questioning and evidence gathered from the workplace

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

Undertake relevant research may include:

- Survey
- Qualitative
- Quantitative
RANGE STATEMENT

Information gathering and consultation techniques may include:
- Interview structured, semi-structured and unstructured, group and individual
- Conversation by phone or face-to-face
- Observation and listening
- Collection of materials e.g. Printed material and videos
- Attendance at workshops, meetings and forums
- Questionnaires and other basic survey instruments

Decision-makers may include:
- Managers
- Coordinators
- Boards of management
- Auspice bodies
- Policy officers
- Other relevant parties

Documentation may include:
- New or amended policies
- New or amended procedures
- Fliers or fact sheets about the changes
- New or amended brochures, pamphlets
- Articles for newsletters or staff bulletins
- Memos
- Staff meeting presentation materials
- Internet notices (WebPages, bulletin boards etc)
- Emails
- Reports

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

\textit{Essential knowledge:}

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- Principles of evidence-based practice
- Models of evidence-based practice
- Difference between evidence-based practice, continuous quality improvement and research
- Outcome based practice
- Requirements of systematic review
- Rules of evidence
- Organisation policy and procedures
- Duty of care requirements associated with evidence-based practice

\textit{Essential skills:}

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Identify practices requiring change
- Communicate with stakeholders
- Gather and analyse evidence
- Identify possible practice changes based on evidence

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:

- Demonstrate application of skills in:
  - problem solving
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- research
- benchmarking
- continuous quality improvement projects and reviews

Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

The need for change in current practices may include:
- Individual client needs
- Systems needs
- Barriers that prevent the delivering of quality services, including client outcomes
- Problems or systems not allowing growth

Strategies to define the problem and/or the desired outcome may include:
- Including stakeholders
- Collecting internal data about current practice
- Comparing internal/external data (benchmark)

Level of evidence may include:
- Systematic review
- Randomised controlled trial/s
- Pseudo-randomised control trail/s
- Comparative studies of concurrent controls
- Case control studies
- Interrupted time series with control group
- Comparative studies with historical control
- Single-arm studies
- Interrupted time series without parallel group
- Case series

Quality refers to:
- The quality of methods used to minimise bias

Relevance refers to:
- The relevance of the outcome measures used and applicability of the study results to other interventions, clients and settings
RANGE STATEMENT

Strength refers to:

- The magnitude, precision and reproducibility of the intervention effect

Range of sources of evidence may include:

- Literature
- Practice expertise
- Client preferences

Outcome indicators may include:

- Data collected re effectiveness of an intervention
- Client feedback
- Anecdotal reports from staff, family and carers

Relevant others may include:

- Clients
- Family and carers
- Staff
- Other workers in the field

Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

The contexts for initiating and coordinating research include:

- Preparation of a range of data:
  - policy making
  - strategic planning
  - marketing
  - service development and delivery

Initiate research will be carried out and coordinated within requirements established by:

- Research codes of ethics and protocols
- Organisation mission, outcomes and objectives
- Organisation's program standards
- State and commonwealth legislation
- Key stakeholders

Criteria to assess the research proposal will include:

- The size and nature of the research sample i.e. Who and how many will be researched
- Research methods
- Purpose of research and for whom
- The human, financial and physical resources required
- The nature and scope of the information to be gathered
- The timetable

Evaluate research will be based on:

- The value of its usefulness
- The feasibility of implementing the recommendations
- The findings of previous and current research
- Available time and resources
- The value of the information and data
- The quality and credibility of the methodology
RANGE STATEMENT

Resources will include:
- Specialist researchers
- Funding
- Previous research data written, oral and audio-visual sources
- Equipment e.g. computer, electronic recording equipment etc

Funding proposals will include:
- Submissions
- Tenders
- Expressions of interest
- Sponsorship
- Fee for service
- Contracting

Funding sources can include:
- Government state and federal
- Philanthropic agencies
- Private business and sponsorship
- Bequests, donations and other private grants
- Money raised by fundraising events
- Sale of resources

Support and promotion will include:
- The promotion and dissemination of information about the benefits of the research
- Organisation of meetings/forums for broader involvement and interaction with stakeholders
- Recruitment of people with research skills and experience
- Recruitment of resources and funding

- Concepts of culture and sub-cultures
- Theories of work practice
- The decision-making structure, processes and delegated authorities of the organisation, network or group of organisations
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- Existing policies within the organisation or group of organisations, and of other stakeholders, and legislation impacting on the policy issue under consideration

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Manage organisation or network responses to policy initiatives by other stakeholders
- Respond to initiatives by stakeholders
- Use a variety of research and consultation strategies
- Work as part of a team or as a sole worker
- Distinguish between facts, hypotheses and opinions
- Present and support a judgement, position of argument
- Maintain direction and purpose within the context of competing or conflicting demands
- Determine processes that are consistent with, and contribute to, objectives
- Apply management competencies to policy tasks
- Undertake sophisticated analysis of a range of information and conflicting or competing perspectives and objectives
- Apply strategic decision-making skills that integrate purpose and effectiveness, and take account of resource constraints

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role

These include the ability to:

- Judge and use the most appropriate communication medium for a particular situation
- Plan and coordinate complex activities and processes
- Demonstrate application of skills in:
  - interpersonal communication, in particular listening, clarifying, questioning, confronting, providing information, interpreting non-verbal communication, demonstrating understanding
  - conflict resolution and mediation
  - communicating with people with diverse cultural, linguistic and educational backgrounds
  - a high level of literacy and the ability to write for a range of purposes and audiences
  - advanced communication skills, including liaison, negotiation and advocacy
- public speaking

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resource requirements for assessment of this unit include access to:
  - An appropriate workplace where assessment can take place, or simulation of realistic workplace setting for assessment

Method of assessment:

- Assessment may include observations, questioning and evidence gathered from the workplace

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Management implementation requirements may include:

- Analysis of social, political and economic factors and trends
- Strategies to avoid discrimination
- Balanced assessment of actual and potential impacts for the organisation
- Analysis of linkages with other policies and legislation
- Media, language and presentation styles appropriate to the audience
RANGE STATEMENT

Strategies to promote informed debate may involve employing:

- A range of communication styles, modes and media
- Lobbying strategies
- Consultation strategies
- Networking strategies

Policy development parameters may be related to:

- Specialist work with particular target e.g. People with disabilities, Aboriginal people
- Application of specialist occupations e.g. Physiotherapy, law, psychology to work with or to the benefit of client groups
- Advanced work in particular issue areas e.g. Law, income, security
- Work which integrates particular issues and particular target groups e.g. housing people of NESB, legal issues for Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander people

Policy development processes are managed for:

- An organisation or service
- Peak bodies, networks or associations
- A range of government departments or organisations
- And with reference to all target groups of relevance to the organisation or network

   3.5 Incorporate a communication plan and risk management plan into proposed implementation plan
   3.6 Ensure the plan includes key indicators to determine effectiveness of proposed strategy and allow for timely adjustments as required to maintain good practice
ELEMENT

4. Implement and evaluate strategic changes in policy and practice

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

4.1 Identify key stakeholders and determine their role in implementation of the change strategy

4.2 Maintain strong and targeted communication with stakeholders before and during implementation to ensure their understanding and support

4.3 Conduct ongoing monitoring and evaluation of changes to practice to ensure implementation continues to achieve appropriate outcomes

4.4 Manage contingencies during the implementation in a manner than supports best practice and considers needs of impacts on identified stakeholders

4.5 Maintain documentation of the process, outcomes and issues during implementation of the change strategy as a basis for ongoing learning and practice evaluation
Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- Difference between evidence-based practice, continuous quality improvement and research
- Duty of care requirements associated with evidence-based practice
- High level knowledge of organisation policies and procedures, particularly in relation to specific area of practice
- High level knowledge of specific area of practice
- Models and techniques of quantitative and qualitative research
- Models of evidence-based practice
- Models of stakeholder management applicable to the community sector and specific area of practice
- Outcome based practice
- Principles of evidence-based practice
- Requirements of systematic review
- Rules of evidence

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Analyse and evaluate current trends in own area of practice
- Apply high level knowledge and skills in own area of practice
- Evaluate own and organisation’s practices at a detailed level
- Identify and communicate effectively with key stakeholders to explain strategies, engender support for and feedback about their implementation and maintain strong relationships
- Lead implementation of change strategies in own area of practice
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- Undertake detailed research and analysis in own area of practice
- Use research evidence to enhance organisation policies and practices

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:

- Demonstrate application of skills in:
  - strategic thinking/decision-making
  - high level of written/oral work
  - networking
  - analysis
  - critical thinking
  - problem solving

- Develop and promote strategies to address environmental responsibility and sustainable practice issues

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit of competence will be most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions
- Assessment may be conducted over one or more occasions
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment include access to relevant workplace or simulated realistic workplace setting where assessment may take place

Method of assessment:

- Assessment may include observation, questioning and evidence gathered from a workplace environment

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.
RANGE STATEMENT

Current trends and practices may refer to:
- Specific areas of client need
- Systems requirements
- Funding issues
- Technological advances
- Advances or changes in service delivery in particular areas of practice
- Barriers that prevent the delivering of quality services, including client outcomes
- Emerging problems, systems or practices

Strategies to define the problem and/or the desired outcome may include:
- Including stakeholders
- Collecting internal data about current practice
- Comparing internal/external data (benchmark)

Level of evidence may include:
- Systematic review
- Randomised controlled trials
- Pseudo-randomised control trials
- Comparative studies of concurrent controls
- Case control studies
- Interrupted time series with control group
- Comparative studies with historical control
- Single-arm studies
- Interrupted time series without parallel group
- Case series

Quality refers to:
- The quality of methods used to minimise bias

Relevance refers to:
- The relevance of outcome measures used and applicability of research results to other interventions, clients and settings

Strength refers to:
- The magnitude, precision and reproducibility of the intervention effect
RANGE STATEMENT

Evidence may be sourced from:

- Professional journals and related publications
- Range of media
- Practice expertise and documentation
- Client preferences and feedback
- Networking with other professionals

Outcome indicators may include:

- Data collected re effectiveness of an intervention or practice
- Observable changes in factors such as client health status, level of engagement, behaviour or living patterns
- Client feedback
- Anecdotal reports from staff, family and carers

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements define the essential outcomes of a unit of competency. The Performance Criteria specify the level of performance required to demonstrate achievement of the Element. Terms in italics are elaborated in the Range Statement.

Elements and Performance Criteria

ELEMENT

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

1. Create a stimulating, positive and developmentally appropriate environment to foster development, play and learning

1.1 Provide areas, resources and materials for different kinds of play and physical activity

1.2 Change the resources regularly to provide variety of activity

1.3 Ensure play and physical activity reflect the cultural diversity, gender and abilities of children

1.4 Set up environment in a way that is safe, non threatening, challenging and stimulating

1.5 Allow sufficient time for play to develop and be completed when possible

1.6 Identify children's individual interests and needs and support by provision of activities or materials

1.7 Provide a range of physical activities to allow children choice in their play whenever possible

1.8 Provide opportunities for both group and individual play activities and experiences indoors and outdoors
ELEMENT

2. Actively guide and encourage children to undertake a variety of developmentally appropriate activities

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

2.1 Encourage and acknowledge children's efforts

2.2 Use activities, resources and materials flexibly to meet children's individual preferences and prompt extensions of play

2.3 Encourage children to participate in a variety of experiences and to choose activities which support their development and fundamental movement skills competency and confidence

2.4 Demonstrate respect for children's choice not to participate and encourage where experience is new or unknown

3. Facilitate children's play, learning and physical activity

3.1 Follow child's lead in play and physical activity and participate when invited

3.2 Initiate play and physical activities and invite child to participate

3.3 Interact with children showing enthusiasm, playfulness and enjoyment

3.4 Monitor children's reactions to play environment to ensure each child remains interested, challenged but not frustrated

3.5 Encourage children to include other children in their play

3.6 Monitor interaction between children to ensure children remain safe and are interacting appropriately

3.7 Redirect children's inappropriate play

3.8 Provide interesting and varied natural outdoor space to encourage active play

3.9 Prepare and provide suitable materials for activities

Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.
Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- Basic knowledge of age and cultural appropriate physical activity recommendations and fundamental movement skills milestones
- Children's developmental stages applicable to the specific age group and what this means for appropriate resources/materials selection
- Cultural beliefs about leisure for children of different ages and adults
- Different cultural beliefs about play; areas of play regarded as important and appropriate
- Importance of childhood
- Importance of play and leisure to human development and health including:
  - role in promoting healthy weight
  - that it is a lifelong concept
- Inclusion and acceptance of all children regardless of their race, gender or ability is understood
- Interest in and enjoyment of children
- Introductory knowledge of child development for children aged 0 to 5 years or 6 to 12 years
- Knowledge and understanding of the Australian Government Department of Health and Ageing 2004, National Physical Activity Recommendations for Children and Youth
- Occupational health and safety
- Organisation standards, policies and procedures
- Play materials and spaces available
- Range of leisure interests of children
- Relevance of the work role and functions to maintaining sustainability of the workplace, including environmental, economic, workforce and social sustainability
- Relevant Quality Improvement and Accreditation Principles
- Safety measures available to minimise safety risks for children and others including sun safety, equipment use and maintenance, standards of safety for equipment provisions e.g soft falls area under equipment
- Stages of play
- Types and complexities of play and leisure

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Guide individual children's play and leisure, giving due regard to child's age, abilities, interests, culture and development
- Provide a range of experiences to stimulate children and aid their development
- Vary experience depending on child's age, abilities, development, culture and need
• Work effectively with young children within a historical and philosophical framework of child care delivery

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role

These include the ability to:
• Adapt environment to encourage different types of play and stages of play
• Adapt play or leisure experiences for different children according to needs, interests
• Assess fundamental movement skills development
• Demonstrate application of skills in:
  • time management
  • acceptance of different attitudes of families about play
  • contingency management
  • planning
  • interpersonal
  • active listening
  • communicate with children
  • reflect on own practices
• Demonstrate effective placement of equipment, considering safety, movement of children, different ages/ stages of development of children
• Take into account opportunities to address waste minimisation, environmental responsibility and sustainable practice issues

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit must be assessed on the job under the normal workplace conditions for a range of age groups, a range of conditions over a number of assessment situations
- Assessment of competency may be conducted on one or more occasions
- Assessment should consider the range of differences among children identified in the Range Statement

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities
Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Assessment requires access to a range of opportunities defined in the Range Statement, including:
  - a childcare workplace
  - children's services, resources and equipment
  - the local environment
  - materials and equipment to facilitate play and leisure
- And access to children of different:
  - gender
  - race and culture
  - age
  - interests and preferences
  - social context and lifestyle
  - communication style
  - personality
  - length of time attending service/child care
  - abilities

Method of assessment:

- Assessment may include observations, questioning and evidence gathered from the workplace

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.
Leisure is understood to be:

- A special way of doing and feeling
- It balances those things in life that may be boring, onerous, time consuming busy work, expectations, tiring, repetitive, hurried or dutiful
- It mixes stimulating, creative, relaxing, playful, refreshing challenging and pleasant
- Leisure describes pursuits that are freely chosen and deeply satisfying

Physical activity includes:

- Any bodily movement produced by skeletal muscle that results in a substantial increase over the resting energy expenditure

Environment may include:

- The building and grounds where the service is located e.g. Home, centre
- The local area around the service and its resources and characteristics

An environment set up to 'invite' children to play and foster play and leisure may:

- Be safe, physically and psychologically
- Look interesting to the child
- Provide challenge appropriate to the children's stage of development
- Provide choices indoors and outdoors

Creating an environment to foster play and leisure may depend on:

- Age of children
- Community background and expectations
- Environment - indoors and outdoors
- Location
- Materials available (natural and processed)
- Number of children
- Resources available
- Staff
- Type of service
- Whether the service has to set up and pack up for each play session
- Whether the space is shared with other services
Different kinds of play and physical activity may include:

- Cooperative play
- Functional, constructive, dramatic play
- Fundamental movement skills games and activities
- Games and free flowing play
- Imaginative play
- Outdoors and active
- Painting, crafts, board games
- Play with words/music
- Quiet and energetic, boisterous
- Solitary, parallel and interactive or a mix of these
- Story reading and telling
- Use of music, movement and visual arts

For older children, play, leisure and physical activity may include:

- Fundamental movement skills games and activities
- Games
- Going for a walk
- Hobbies and interests
- Interactions with people from community
- Listening to music
- Observing
- Organised games e.g. Races, soccer
- Solitary activities
- Sports
- Talking with friends

Areas for different kinds of play, leisure and physical activity may include areas for:

- Constructive play
- Conversations
- Creative play
- Dramatic play
- Music
- Nature based outdoor play
- Noisy play
- Physical play and activity
- Quiet play
- Sand play, water play
- Solitary activities
- Sports including fundamental movement skills games and activities
Ways of facilitating play will be affected by a child's age/stage of development and must include:

For babies and infants:
- Flexible routines to allow for the needs of individuals to be met
- Gentle handling, eye contact and appropriate sensory experiences to develop security and trust
- Safe environment to explore

For toddlers:
- The day is structured and routines are established
- Blocks of time are available for exploring and experimenting with the materials
- Caregivers introduce new and different experiences to children
- Play is extended by introducing new materials or resources or suggesting alternative ways to use the materials
- Caregivers give children time to develop their ideas
- Transition from one activity to another is smooth
- Worker modelling play and use of equipment

For 3 to 5 year old children:
- Caregiver's interactions provide a positive role model for children
- An environment is maintained that respects individual and group needs
- Children are aware of the limits which are applied consistently
- Children's feelings are acknowledged and respected by caregivers and children

For 6 to 12 year old children:
- Participation with children
- Materials are suggested or alternatives uses of equipment/materials are suggested
- Cycling
- A variety of indoor and outdoor activities for all ages
Experiences will vary according to the age of the child and creative and challenging experiences may include:

For babies and infants:

- Toys are large (cannot be swallowed) and have no sharp edges, and easily washed/cleaned
- Different types of experiences are used e.g. Water play, sand play, outdoors time

For toddlers:

- Experiences can include indoor and outdoor experiences
- Experiences reflect a toddler's interest in the world around them, and the desire to explore it, feel it, see it and touch it e.g. Nature walk to look at leaves, collect them
- Experiences reflect a toddler's growing mastery of their own body e.g. Small slippery dips are used, outdoor area can be a little more involved

For 3 to 5 year olds:

- Experiences can include cooking, sewing, carpentry, washing
- Experiences can be more varied and complicated, which reflects a child's developing cognitive and physical abilities
- Choice not to participate is respected and alternative activity is negotiated

For 6 to 12 year olds:

- Experience planned may include specific suggestions of children themselves
- Development of hobbies
- Self selected peer groups
- Individual, small group and larger group experiences
- Choice not to participate is respected and alternative activity is negotiated
Aspects of child development include:

- Physical fitness and fundamental movement skills ability
- Cognitive development
- Social development
- Emotional development
- Creative and aesthetic development
- Language development
- Moral development
- Spiritual development

Resources required to be organised for excursions may include:

- Records that need to be taken
- First aid supplies
- Relevant equipment
- Location of toilets
- Keys
- Mobile phone
- Tickets
- Equipment required for activities
- Petty cash

Records that may need to be taken on excursions may include:

- List of children attending
- Emergency contact details
- Medical needs for children

Responsibilities of children on excursions may include:

- For belongings
- For payments
- For time keeping
- For travelling together
Opportunities that can be provided to support children's development will vary according to a number of factors in the service, such as:

- Child/worker ratios
- Physical environment - constraints and potential
- Purpose of the service
- The amount and type of support from parents and participation by parents
- The level of support available to the service from external bodies e.g. Advice specialist services, resource workers
- The frequency and regularity of use of the service by the child

Skills related to physical development may include:

- Eye-hand coordination
- Dexterity
- Fine and gross motor skills
- Balance/static
- Locomotion
- Motor skills

Opportunities for social interaction may include:

- Formally organised activities
- A time and place for unplanned interaction
- Meetings
- Travelling
- Walks
- Setting up environment/venue

Special occasions may include:

- Birthdays of children
- Festivals
- Celebration of achievements
- Community events
- Birthdays of animals
- Beginning and end of school term or holidays
- Cultural events
- 'Graduation' from child care service
Differences among children may include:

- Gender
- Race and culture
- Age
- Interests and preferences
- Social context and lifestyle
- Communication style
- Personality
- Length of time attending service/child care
- Abilities

Opportunities provided for social interaction will vary according to the age of the children

For babies and infants:

- Trusting relationships are developed with familiar adults
- Adults work at eye level with infants
- Care routines are used for social interaction
- Adults talk, sing and recite poems with infants
- Adults listen to infants and respond

Language forms may include:

- Verbal and written
- Formal and colloquial, informal
- Fun and serious styles

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- Context of sustainable development and sustainability, including definitions of sustainability
- Impact of key global issues, such as climate change, ozone layer effects, greenhouse effect, earth resources, and biodiversity
- Sustainable practices in:
  - waste management
  - water use
- Cleaning and maintenance and building, equipment and associated resources

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Identify and apply environmental sustainability practices in the child care workplace

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:

- Identify and support potential workplace changes to enhance environmental sustainability, including:
  - practices and systems
  - behavioural change

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace setting under the normal range of workplace conditions
- Assessment must demonstrate consistency of application of skills and knowledge described in this unit of competency

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work

RANGE STATEMENT

Aspects of the organisation environment may include:
- Building and associated structural aspects
- Waste disposal practices
- Water conservation practices
- Maintenance and cleaning practices
- Use of waste, natural and/or recycled materials in programs
- Expressed values and role modelling behaviours

Natural world in outdoor spaces may include:
- Indigenous plants that attract native fauna and reflect changes seasons and climate
- Vegetable, herb or flower gardens and natural ground surfaces such as grass, rocks, and tanbark are provided
- Contact with animals on a regular basis with a focus on knowledge as well as fostering care and respect for all living creatures

Waste management strategies may include:
- Paper, plastic and metal recycling
- Composting
- Worm farming

Water conservation strategies may include:
- Installing water saving devices
- Water tanks
- Monitored and/or timed water use

Sustainable cleaning practices may include:
- Using biodegradable products
- Products labelled environment friendly
- Disposing of rubbish using recycling practices
- Limiting the amount of water used

4.1 Use information gathered about child to provide suggestions for ways to enhance that child’s play and physical activity to contribute to development of fundamental movement skills and leisure

4.2 Use information gathered about child to ensure interactions with the child meet their individual requirements
Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:
The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- Relevant child development stage knowledge to a basic level including the fundamentals of physical development and movement milestones
- Organisation standards, policies and procedures

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Observe and interpret children's behaviour and contribute to program planning

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:

- Observe children at an introductory level
- Demonstrate application of skills in:
  - report writing
  - interpersonal interaction

Evidence Guide
The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit could be assessed either on the job, or off the job through an appropriate workplace simulation for a range of age groups and a range of conditions over a number of assessment situations

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Assessment requires access to a range of opportunities defined in the Range Statement, including:
  - a childcare workplace
  - children's services, resources and equipment
  - the local environment
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios.

- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes.

- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.
RANGE STATEMENT

Observation to identify children's interests and plan future experiences, vary according to children's ages and must include:

For babies, infants and toddlers:
- All aspects of the child's development
- Fine and gross motor skills
- Interests, strengths and needs
- Child's knowledge, skills and understanding

For 3 to 5 year olds:
- All aspects of child's development
- Fundamental movement skills
- Child's interests
- Child's strengths and needs
- Social interactions
- Child's knowledge, skills and understanding

For 6 to 12 year olds:
- All aspects of child's development and fundamental movement skills
- Child's interests
- Child's strengths and needs
- Their interests and leisure requirements
- Peer groupings, and social interactions
- Socially isolated children
- Interests, strengths and needs

Information may be gathered by:
- Observations of the child
- Questioning
- Reports
- Conversations with child's peers
- Anecdotal information e.g. Remembrances of other workers, parents
RANGE STATEMENT

Record observations is to meet specifications which may include:

• Organisation requirements
• Service accreditation requirements
• Confidentiality policies and procedures

Contributions to observation recording can be in the form of:

• Writing
• Discussions
• Conversations

Play may be recorded by:

• Writing
• Video
• Photography

Contribute to program planning may involve observations that:

• Play environment is too challenging, leading to children becoming frustrated
• Play environment is not stimulating enough, leading to children becoming bored
• Play environment does not provide opportunity for child's interests/needs
• Child's reactions to play environment
• Child's play interests

| 1. Establish an environment that can foster children's development | 1.1 Provide opportunities for children to plan and/or modify their environment
1.2 Design environment to accommodate all aspects of children's development and curiosity
1.3 Design environment to provide children with a choice of experiences
1.4 Implement strategies to engage children in activities, especially those who have difficulty entering or exiting situations
1.5 Provide materials that capture attention, stimulate response and engage children |
ELEMENT

2. Provide creative and challenging opportunities which stimulate learning and development of the child

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

2.1 Encourage the child to gain skill and competence by persevering with a developmentally significant activity

2.2 Provide a range of creative experiences, play areas and materials, including natural and recycled materials to encourage children to explore and make choices

2.3 Make opportunities for active free play and independent play

2.4 Provide opportunities for children to practice developing skills

2.5 Provide experiences and activities for all principal areas of development

2.6 Arrange and implement appropriate experiences according to organisation guidelines
ELEMENT

3. Plan, implement and evaluate developmentally appropriate experiences for children

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

3.1 Use observations of the children and their views to guide the program
3.2 Develop program in consultation with others
3.3 Use stories, visual materials and activities that show diversity among children and adults
3.4 Plan program to reflect the range of children’s needs, abilities and interests 3.5 Assist children to participate in a wide range of leisure activities
3.6 Ensure program responds to children’s interests that arise spontaneously as they participate
3.7 Use program to introduce children to new ideas and experiences as well as to provide familiar experiences 3.8 Ensure program provides opportunity for children to follow up activities of high interest
3.9 Ensure program is inclusive and allows for full participation of all children
3.10 Implement strategies to deal with contingencies that may arise
3.11 Review program according to organisation procedures to ensure ongoing relevance and quality

4. Encourage children’s involvement in experiences

4.1 Consult children about activities to be made available
4.2 Acknowledge and value children’s work
4.3 Encourage child to choose activities to support aspects of their development 4.4 Encourage child to participate in a variety of experiences
4.5 Adapt activity to cater to a child’s response to the activity
4.6 Demonstrate respect for child’s choice not to participate

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- Children's developmental stages applicable to the specific age group and what this means for appropriate resources/materials selection
- Organisation standards, policies and procedures
- Relevance of the work role and functions to maintaining sustainability of the workplace, including environmental, economic, workforce and social sustainability

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Observe and interpret children's behaviour and contribute to program planning
- Plan for, provide and review a range of activities and opportunities which stimulate children's individual development
- Provide a range of experiences to stimulate children and aid their development
- Vary experience depending on child's age, abilities, development, culture and need

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:

- Demonstrate application of skills in:
  - contingency management
  - interpersonal
  - active listening
- Take into account, use and promote opportunities to address waste minimisation,

Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.
RANGE STATEMENT

Experiences will vary according to the age of the child and creative and challenging experiences must include:

For babies and infants:
- Selection of toys, different textures, colours and size are selected
- Toys are large (cannot be swallowed) and have no sharp edges, and easily washed/cleaned
- Different types of experiences are used e.g. water play, sand play, outdoors time

For toddlers:
- Experiences can include indoor and outdoor experiences
- Experiences reflect a toddler's interest in the world around them, and the desire to explore it, feel it, see it and touch it e.g. nature walk to look at leaves, collect them
- Experiences reflect a toddler's growing mastery of their own body e.g. small slippery dips are used, outdoor area can be a little more involved

For 3 to 5 year olds:
- Experiences can include cooking, sewing, carpentry, washing
- Experiences can be more varied and complicated, which reflects a child's developing cognitive and physical abilities
- Choice not to participate is respected and alternative activity is negotiated

For 6 to 12 year olds:
- Experience planned may include specific suggestions of children themselves
- Development of hobbies
- Self selected peer groups
- Individual, small group and larger group experiences
- Choice not to participate is respected and alternative activity is negotiated
RANGE STATEMENT

Aspects of children's development include:

- Cognitive development
- Creative and aesthetic development
- Emotional development
- Language development
- Moral development
- Physical fitness and fundamental movement skills
- Social development
- Spiritual development

Resources required to be organised for excursions may include:

- Equipment required for activities
- First aid supplies
- Keys
- Location of toilets
- Mobile phone
- Petty cash
- Records that need to be taken
- Relevant equipment
- Tickets

Records that may need to be taken on excursions may include:

- Emergency contact details
- List of children attending
- Medical needs for children

Responsibilities of children on excursions may include:

- For belongings
- For payments
- For time keeping
- For travelling together

2. Monitor children's developmental progress and develop understanding of individual children

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

2.1 Use observations and information to assess and monitor child's play preferences, social interactions, communication and language, thinking styles, physical abilities and emotional status

2.2 Interpret information and observations to identify individual emerging skills, capabilities, potential, interests, preferences of child to guide program strategies to foster development

2.3 Monitor and interpret behaviour that is out of character for an individual child and respond appropriately

2.4 Demonstrate understanding and application of inclusive principles in interpreting observations

3. Use information from observations with others

3.1 Demonstrate quality observation practices to other workers

3.2 Provide information to others to inform program planning, support children's play and evaluate programs

3.3 Use records of observations to provide feedback to children about their skills and competence and promote remembering

3.4 Make time available to share information with parents

3.5 Follow up any concerns regarding child's development with appropriate persons/services

4. Use information to plan the program

4.1 Use information to consider all aspects of child's development and cater appropriately within the program

4.2 Use the information to plan opportunities and experiences to foster development of the child
5. Design observation systems with others

5.1 Develop systematic ways of observing children to ensure all children are included

5.2 Develop systematic ways of observing children to ensure that all interpretations of behaviour can be clearly linked to evidence

5.3 Clearly link observation systems developed to program planning and evaluation processes

5.4 Implement processes to ensure appropriate access by others to observation information

These include knowledge of:

- How the observer influences interaction and behaviour
- Styles of thinking
- Developmental knowledge
- Understanding different cultures
- Developmental norms at different ages/stages
- Organisation standards, policies and procedures
- Regulatory and legislative requirements

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Gather information from a variety of sources and observe and interpret children's behaviour
- Monitor and assess children's development and learning and use information to inform program planning
- Use relevant technology safely and effectively

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:

- Demonstrate application of skills in:

Specific purposes or needs for observation include:
- Planning experiences for the child
- To identify the child's capabilities
- To identify the child's interests and needs
- To monitor uncharacteristic or atypical aspects of development

Capabilities of a child will include:
- Physical capabilities
- Emotional capabilities
- Cognitive capabilities
- Social capabilities
- Creative capabilities
- Language capabilities
- Spiritual and moral aspects

Methods of documenting information may include:
- Written
- Photography
- Audio and video recordings

Methods of gathering may include:
- Observing while participating with children in an experience
- Narrative methods
- Sampling methods
- Chart methods
- Gathering information about the child from other workers
- Asking family members
- Discussions with other children

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role

These include knowledge of:

- Assessment tools to guide decision-making about programming
- Criteria for selecting a specific programming approach
- Criteria to review setting and environment
- Detailed knowledge of facilitating a variety of learning and play experiences e.g. art, music, sport
- Different approaches to program planning and development
- Evaluation methods and reflective practice
- Identification of range of resources required
- Location of resources and materials
- Organisation standards, policies and procedures
- Regulatory and legislative requirements
- Relevance of the work role and functions to maintaining sustainability of the workplace, including environmental, economic, workforce and social sustainability
- Relevant quality improvement and accreditation system principles
- Respect for different family expectations
- Stakeholders who need to be involved in evaluation
- Theories of child development
- Up to date information and a range of sources of information is accessed as resources for program development

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Apply a defined philosophical approach to delivery of services to children and to continuously improve services through reflecting on effectiveness of practices
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- Apply criteria to evaluate programs in relation to:
  - short term and long term goals of the program
  - progress of individual children
  - progress of the group of children
  - philosophy and goals of the service
  - cost effectiveness
  - appropriate practice
  - daily programs, weekly programs
- Gather information and use as a basis for designing and planning programs to address identified needs
- Organise and coordinate a range of experiences at one time and undertake appropriate evaluation of effectiveness of programs
- Plan, implement, monitor and evaluate developmentally appropriate routines and programs to foster and enhance children's development
- State and outline a personal philosophy about children's development through programming which considers theories of child development and learning and social justice and equity

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role

These include the ability to:

- Demonstrate application of skills in:
  - planning
  - contingency management
  - effective communication with target groups
  - analysis and reflective thinking
  - selecting and administering appropriate assessment and evaluation tools
- Take into account, use and promote opportunities to address waste minimisation, environmental responsibility and sustainable practice issues

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is best assessed in the workplace or in a realistic simulated workplace setting under the normal range of workplace conditions

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Assessment requires access to a range of opportunities defined in the Range Statement, including:
  - a childcare workplace
  - children's services, resources and equipment
  - the local environment
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios.
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes.
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons.

Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Programs may be designed and implemented for:

- A group of children
- A playgroup
- A service
- Individuals

Programs include:
- Experiences
- Interactions
- Organisation of time and space
- Routines
- Transitions

All those involved with program design may include:
- Children
- Management
- Parents
- Staff/care providers

Ideas and suggestions for programming and may be gathered from:
- Colleagues
- Networks
- Newsletters, magazines, articles
- Publications
- Resource workers
- Teachers in schools when service is co located

Information may be communicated by:
- In fun and creative ways
- Other staff
- Parents
- Verbal means and written formats
- Volunteers

Experiences addressed by programs may include:
- Busy/quiet experiences
- Challenging/confirming
- Excursions/at usual location
- Familiar experiences/special events
- Indoor/outdoor
- Surprising/predictable and planned
- Unstructured/structured

Philosophy of the service may include:

- Culturally specific services philosophies
- Philosophies about children, their development and learning
- Philosophies and values about society and communities

Goals of the service may be oriented to an emphasis on:

- Confidence with technology
- Creativity
- Cultural identity and knowledge
- Emotional well being
- Environmental understanding
- Holistic care and development
- Language development
- Learning and education
- Multicultural understanding
- Personal attention and flexibility
- Psychomotor development
- Recreation
- Social interaction and development
- Spiritual and moral development

Resources required may include:

- Curriculum/learning materials
- Equipment
- Equipment and materials
- Food and drink
- Skills of staff
- Staffing
- Support staff and resource staff
- Transport
- Venue

Organising resources may include:

- Booking
- Borrowing
- Employing staff
- Other staff
- Parents
- Purchasing
- Volunteers

Timetable considerations may include:

- Booking details
- Costs
- Expectations
- Time

The context of the children's lives may include:

- Community groupings, alliances and conflicts
- Cultural context
- Geographic context, e.g. Remoteness, high rise buildings, lack of open space
- Historical context of community, e.g. Significant events, future plans
- Social context, e.g. Social isolation, crowding and noise

Information about each child's development and social/cultural context may be gained by:

- Consulting family/community representatives
- Consulting parents
- Conversation with child
- Recorded observations
- Work samples and other documentation
- Written reports/records

Children's identities may include:

- Cultural
- Gender
- Peer group
- Racial
- Social

Information about a child's progress may be gathered by:

- Comments from other children
- Directly involving the child in the process
- Observation
- Observations and comments from other staff, parents and family/community members
- Questioning
- Work samples and other documentation

Mobile services may need to design programs particularly targeted to children who are isolated:

- Geographically
- Socially

| 1. Analyse environmental sustainability of child care workplace | 1.1 Identify aspects of sustainability to analyse the workplace
1.2 Review potential for change in aspects of the child care environment
1.3 Identify key areas where change could be instigated to enhance environmental sustainability |
| 2. Support behavioural change processes and the role they play in sustainability | 2.1 Encourage children to exchange thoughts and ideas about sustainable issues through guided discussion, projects and experiences
2.2 Explore ethical dilemmas of waste disposal and water conservation with all stakeholders
2.3 Encourage adults and children to participate in sustainable practices that integrate the service delivery systems |
ELEMENT

3. Design and implement a program to support behavioural change for sustainability

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

3.1 Explore strategies and opportunities to implement sustainable building design where possible

3.2 Apply strategies for children to connect with the natural world in outdoor spaces

3.3 Use waste, natural or recycled materials for improvised play experiences

3.4 Apply waste management strategies where possible

3.5 Apply water conservation strategies where possible

3.6 Use safe and sustainable cleaning practices

3.7 Guide children to understand the link between plants, animals and humans

4. Review the sustainability program

4.1 Evaluate the program outcomes on a regular basis

4.2 Involve the community, children and adults in evaluating the program

4.3 Document outcomes of the program and implement changes based on evaluation evidence
Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- Historical context of sustainable development and sustainability, including definitions of sustainability and the impacts of historical world events
- Impact of key global issues, such as climate change, ozone layer effects, greenhouse effect, earth resources, and biodiversity
- Intergenerational equity and equitable sharing of resources
- Barriers and drivers for behavioural change
- Awareness of the importance of community as a source of knowledge, skills and values
- Sustainable practices in:
  - waste management
  - water use
  - cleaning and maintenance and building, equipment and associated resources
- Awareness of sustainable building design to maximise the use of natural light/heating and cooling
- Human biology and the link between plants, animals and humans
- Awareness of strategies to increase children's experiences and understanding of animals and the natural environment
- Qualitative and quantitative evaluation processes for sustainability program

Essential skills:

The candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:

- Undertake an analysis of the environmental sustainability of the child care workplace
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- Identify and support potential for workplace change to enhance environmental sustainability, including:
  - design (e.g. of building and resources)
  - practices and systems
  - behavioural change
- Design, implement and review a program to enhance environmental sustainability in the child care workplace
- Involve staff, children and the broader community in participating in and evaluating a program to enhance environmental sustainability

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit could be assessed either on the job or off the job through an appropriate workplace simulation for a range of age groups and a range of conditions over a number of assessment situations
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Assessment requires access to a range of opportunities defined in the Range Statement, including:
  - a childcare workplace
  - children's services, resources and equipment
  - the local environment and community

Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Aspects of sustainability may include:
- Environmental
- Social and
- Economic aspects

Aspects of the child care environment may include:
- Building and associated structural aspects
- Waste disposal practices
- Water conservation practices
- Maintenance and cleaning practices
- Use of waste, natural and/or recycled materials in programs
- Expressed values and role modelling behaviours

Ethical dilemmas in sustainability programs may include:
- Budget constraints
- Decision-making responsibility
- Health concerns related to reuse of some materials
- Parent/carer expectations may conflict with sustainable practices

Sustainable practices may include:
- Recycling materials
- Using environment friendly products in activities and cleaning
- Limiting the use of power and water
- Regeneration of natural environments where possible

Sustainable building design may include:
- Use of recycled materials
- Integration of environment saving features, e.g. solar power
- Use of natural light and existing natural surrounds for shade and exploratory activities

Natural world in outdoor spaces may include:
- Indigenous plants that attract native fauna and reflect changes seasons and climate
- Vegetable, herb or flower gardens and natural ground surfaces such as grass, rocks, and tanbark are provided
- Contact with animals on a regular basis with a focus on knowledge as well as fostering care and respect for all living creatures

Waste management strategies may include:
- Paper, plastic and metal recycling
- Composting
- Worm farming

Water conservation strategies may include:
- Installing water saving devices
- Water tanks
- Monitored and/or timed water use

Sustainable cleaning practices may include:
- Limiting water wast
- Using environment friendly products
- Disposing of waste with first consideration being to potential for recycling

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:
The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:
- Inclusion, non-discriminatory practices and associated legislation
- Knowledge of child development - build on strengths of child
- Organisation standards, policies and procedures

Essential skills:
It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:
- Develop programs to meet additional needs of children

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:
- Demonstrate respect for family expectations and desired outcomes for child
- Demonstrate application of skills in:
  - observation

Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Children having additional needs may include needs due to:

- Language difficulties
- Physical, sensory or developmental disability
- Health problems
- Behavioural or psychological disorders
- Family circumstances and needs
- A child recently arrived in Australia from a very different culture
- A child whose culture is different from the culture of the centre
- Child at risk
- Unknown diagnosis
- Known diagnosis
- Cultural / religious practices
- Communication difficulties
- Giftedness

Communication difficulties of a child may be due to:

- Trauma, violence and crises
- Disabilities e.g. hearing, visual, speaking
- Health problems and disorders
- Learning problems
- Deprivation of sensory stimulation

Specialist resources may include:
- Professionals with expertise about particular needs of children
- Written information
- Special equipment
- Information and education videos
- Resource networks
- Family members
- Bilingual workers
- Interpreter services
- Resource units
- Extra staffing

Additional resources may include:
- Worker training
- Toy libraries

Review of current program could include:
- Review for child with additional needs
- Review of strategies for meeting needs of child within context of whole group

4.4 Discuss programs and children’s needs based on the information gained

4.5 Work with others to design and develop systematic ways of observing children that ensure inclusion of all children
Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- How the observer influences interaction and behaviour
- Styles of thinking
- Developmental knowledge
- Understanding different cultures
- Developmental norms at different ages/stages
- Organisation standards, policies and procedures

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Observe and interpret children's behaviour to contribute to program planning
  Specific purposes or needs for observation include:
  - planning experiences for the child
  - to identify the child's abilities, needs and interests

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:

- Demonstrate application of skills in:

Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- Local community health plans
- Organisation policies and guidelines
- Community/sector networks
- Collection and interpretation of health data
- Processes related to health promotion
- Factors underlying community development processes
- Evaluation models

Essential skills:

The candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include the ability to:

- Undertake community research
- Record health data
- Demonstrate application of skills including:
  - cross cultural communication skills
  - interpersonal communication skills
  - interpreting data
  - decision-making
  - using community profiles
  - effective use of relevant information technology in line with work health and safety (WHS) guidelines

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit will be most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

The candidate must be able to demonstrate essential knowledge required to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role.

These include knowledge of:

- A philosophical and historical understanding of preventative health care
- Social research and date relating to health issues
- Primary health care principles
- Funding and policy environment

Essential skills:

It is critical that the candidate demonstrate the ability to:

- Apply and conduct social research
- Use and interpret data base information
REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- Apply numerical skills to enable statistical interpretation

In addition, the candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role. These include the ability to:

- Apply oral communication skills required to fulfil job roles as specified by the organisation/service including:
  - asking questions
  - active listening
  - asking for clarification
  - negotiating solutions
  - acknowledging and responding to a range of views
- Apply written communication skills required to fulfil job roles as specified by organisation/service
- Apply problem solving skills required include an ability to use available resources, analyse information and make decisions
- Demonstrate application of skills including:
  - project planning
  - work with diversity
  - advocacy skills
  - work in groups

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit of competence must be assessed in the workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions
- Consistency in performance should consider the complexity of processes required for the facilitation of court orders
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Access and equity considerations:
- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:
- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resource requirements for assessment include access to:
  - an appropriate workplace or an environment capable of accurately simulating the workplace for assessment purposes

Method of assessment:
- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

The contexts for facilitation of court orders include:
- Within a detention facility
- Within an order to be undertaken in the community involving varying degrees of supervision

Facilitation of court orders will be carried out within requirements established by:

  - effects of colonisation as experienced by Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander people
  - historical dilemmas faced by Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander people (acknowledge or deny Aboriginality)
  - impacts of government policies and legislation and their impact on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander communities, families and individuals.

- Social, cultural and environmental determinants and strategies to address Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander well being, including:
  - traditional Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander cultural practices and lifestyle and their impact on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander health
  - importance of land, tradition and cultural practice to Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander health
  - impact of socioeconomic factors on child protection
  - social and political factors that perpetuate disadvantage
  - importance of personal achievement, education and supportive family / social networks
  - strategies Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander families may employ to maintain strong culture and supportive social networks and maximise educational, employment and social opportunities for their children
  - impact of environmental factors on health

- Barriers to improving environmental determinants.

- Knowledge of key decision-making areas relevant to recognised agencies and the legislative background for these areas including the current situation in relation to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people and Child Protection and the CMC.

Essential skills:

The candidate must be able to effectively do the task outlined in elements and performance criteria of this unit, manage the task and manage contingencies in the context of the identified work role

These include the ability to:

- Communicate effectively and sensitively to establish a relationship of trust with clients
- Initiate appropriate actions in response to assessment and in accordance with organisation procedures and protocols for child protection
- Make appropriate referrals, providing accurate and relevant details to clients and referral agencies
- Reflect on and improve own level and application of skills and knowledge to achieve desirable outcomes and maintain own capabilities
- Recognise and articulate the best interest of the child and family

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit of competence must be assessed in the workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions
- Consistency in performance should consider the complexity of the environment in which workers are expected to participate
Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resource requirements for assessment include access to:
  - an appropriate workplace or an environment capable of accurately simulating the workplace for assessment purposes

Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons
Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

* Cultural respect:*
  - This unit of competency supports the recognition, protection and continued advancement of the inherent rights, cultures and traditions of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples
  - It recognises that the improvement of the health status of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people must include attention to physical, spiritual, cultural, emotional and social well being, community capacity and governance
  - Its application must be culturally sensitive and supportive of traditional healing and health, knowledge and practices

* Community control:*
  - Community participation and control in decision-making is essential to all aspects of work, and the role of the child protection worker is to support the child, family and the community in this process

* Supervision:*
  - Supervision must be conducted in accordance with prevailing State/territory and organisation legislative and regulatory requirements
  - References to supervision may include either direct or indirect supervision of work by more experienced workers, supervisors, managers or other health professionals
  - A person at this level should only be required to make decisions about clients within the organisation's guidelines and policies
Legislative requirements:

- Federal, state or territory legislation may impact on workers' practices and responsibilities.
- Implementation of the units of competency should reflect the legislative framework in which a worker operates.
- However, assessment in the workplace or through simulation should address all essential skills and knowledge across the Range of Variables.
- Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander workers may be required to operate in situations that do not constitute 'usual practice' due to lack of resources, remote locations and community needs.
- As a result, they may need to possess more competencies than described by 'usual circumstances'.
- Under all circumstances, the employer must enable the worker to function within the prevailing legislative framework, for example the Child Protection Act.

The history of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people includes:

- Post-colonial legacy of social and economic disadvantage.
- Survival and maintenance of culture, kinship and connection with the land.
- Evolution and scope of the role of the Aboriginal/Torres Strait Islander Child Protection Worker up to the contemporary context.

Cultural factors that produce stress may include:

- Community and/or own expectations that may involve, for example:
  - extended work hours,
  - functions outside work role,
  - unrealistic accountability/responsibility for resolving community problems.
- Multiple accountability to employer, community, family and child.
Social, political, economic and environmental factors which impact on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people include:

- Health outcomes
- Colonisation and invasion
- Land rights and native title
- Dispossession
- Acts of government including assimilation policies
- Stolen generations
- Racism

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- Competency must be demonstrated in a real work environment
- Competence in this unit must be assessed over a period of time in order to ensure consistency of performance over contexts applicable to the work environment
- Consistency in performance should consider the work environment, worker's role and responsibilities in the workplace
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons
Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Assessment of this competency will require human resources consistent with those outlined in the Assessment Guidelines

Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Knowledge testing and simulation exercises conducted in a training program
- Knowledge tested or inferred from explanations and performance in workplace applications
- Observation of performance in routine workplace activities
- Documentation and products produced as part of routine work activities
- Observation and documentation from specially conducted assignments based on routine work requirements
- Observations from supervisors, colleagues and clients
Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.
RANGE STATEMENT

Child development factors and an impact of abuse and neglect on the child may include:

- Stages of child development in relation to memory and particularly the narrative language ability which is related to the age and experiences of the child
- Experience of abuse and neglect is likely to have a negative impact on the social and cognitive development of a child - capacity of child to be able to tell their story

Appropriate person/agency/timing and environment may include:

- Determining the appropriate person/agency, timing and environment of interview requires the consideration of:
  - age and development capacity of the child
  - purpose of interview
  - level of training and experience of the individual practitioner conducting the interview
  - organisation policies of the particular agencies
  - relevant interagency guidelines or codes of practice
  - principles of best interest of the child being paramount to minimise the interviewing of children

Best practice interviewing may include:

- Interviewing practices using strategies based on the SAFE principles:
  - simple language
  - absence of specific detail or coercive techniques that suggest a desired response
  - flexibility for the interviewee to choose what to report
  - encourage elaborate responses
- Practice based upon these principles employs open questions to develop rapport and to elicit the child's free narrative

Organisation and legislation requirements may include:

- Agency policies and guidelines
- Interagency codes of practice
- Interagency guidelines
- Evidentiary requirements eg, recording of interviews

Assess interviewing skills may include:

- Self assessment of interviewing practices based upon reflecting on a child focused practice that trusts the child's capacity to tell her or his story, i.e. listening to the voice of the child
- Reflecting on the challenges of maintaining good interviewing practice
- Reflecting on values and attitudes that may be in conflict with child focused practice and good interviewing practice, e.g. the perception that to elicit specific and detailed information requires specific questions

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit of competence will be most appropriately assessed in the workplace or in a simulated workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions
- Consistency in performance should consider the range of client issues workers are expected to be able to address

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment include access to relevant workplace or simulated realistic workplace setting where assessment may take place

Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit of competence must be assessed in the workplace and under the normal range of workplace conditions
- Consistency in performance should consider the range of clients and specific needs that will encountered in the workplace
Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resource requirements for assessment include access to:
  - an appropriate workplace or an environment capable of accurately simulating the workplace for assessment purposes:

Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on 'What if?' scenarios
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on Essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a 'period of time' and/or in a 'number of locations', any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, clients or other appropriate persons
Related units: This unit should be assessed in conjunction with related unit:
- CHCCM506C Undertake case management in a child protection framework

- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged
- Resources required for assessment include access to relevant workplace or simulated realistic workplace setting where assessment may take place

Method of assessment:

- Assessment may include observation, questioning and evidence gathered from a workplace environment

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional Potential and actual risks to worker safety associated with child protection work may include:

- Physical attack and subsequent injury
- Psychological and emotional distress
- Threats to personal and family safety

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this unit of competency:

- The individual being assessed must provide evidence of specified essential knowledge as well as skills
- This unit is best assessed on the job or in a simulated workplace under the normal range of conditions
- Consistency in performance should consider the requirements of the particular workplace context
- The candidate must show evidence of being able to identify the context of mental health peer work and apply the values and philosophies of the area to their own work role
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Conditions of assessment:

- This unit includes skills and knowledge specific to mental health peer work
- Assessment must be undertaken by a qualified Assessor [as determined by the Australian Quality Training Framework] who has lived experience and holds this unit of competency or demonstrated equivalent competencies

- A consumer/carer him/herself who has lived experience and demonstrated experience in a consumer peer worker or carer peer worker role
- accompanied by a qualified Assessor who has the necessary assessment competencies [as determined by the Australian Quality Training Framework]

- Where the candidate being assessed in a consumer peer worker context, they must be assessed by an experienced consumer peer worker with lived experience (and a qualified Assessor where the consumer peer worker is not a qualified assessor)
- Where the candidate is being assessed in a carer peer worker context, they must be assessed by an experienced carer peer worker who has lived experience (and a qualified assessor where the carer peer worker is not a qualified assessor)
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Access and equity considerations:

- All workers in community services should be aware of access, equity and human rights issues in relation to their own area of work.
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities.
- All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally and linguistically diverse environment.
- In recognition of particular issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people.
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people communities.
- In recognition of particular issues facing culturally and linguistically [CALD] diverse communities, workers should be aware of cultural and current issues impacting on CALD groups.
- Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on individuals from culturally and linguistically diverse communities.

Context of and specific resources for assessment:

- This unit can be assessed independently, however holistic assessment practice with other community services units of competency is encouraged.
- Resources required for assessment of this unit include access to a workplace or simulated workplace where assessment may occur.
EVIDENCE GUIDE

Method of assessment:

- In cases where the learner does not have the opportunity to cover all relevant aspects in the work environment, the remainder should be assessed through realistic simulations, projects, previous relevant experience or oral questioning on ‘What if?’ scenarios
- Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on essential knowledge and skills and consideration of required attitudes
- Where performance is not directly observed and/or is required to be demonstrated over a ‘period of time’ and/or in a ‘number of locations’, any evidence should be authenticated by colleagues, supervisors, or other appropriate persons

Range Statement

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts
