• communication skills to conduct potentially complex and challenging negotiations and consultations on new systems development and implementation • creative thinking skills to explore and generate innovative concepts • learning skills to stretch boundaries of own knowledge and skills, and to foster similar approaches in others • literacy skills to analyse and develop potentially complex organisational requirements and documentation for work systems • numeracy skills to develop and interpret financial estimates • planning and organisational skills to plan the implementation of new systems and to organise and implement training and learning activities • research skills to investigate the broader context for system development • self-management skills to take responsibility for driving system development with a focus on innovation
Required knowledge
• concepts and theories of change management, including ways of introducing change in different organisational contexts and change management communication strategies • concepts and theories of innovation and how these link to innovation in practice • in-depth understanding of the ways in which workplace systems can contribute to innovation in the workplace • project planning and management techniques • technical context in which the system is being developed • typical ways in which systems may present barriers to innovation

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and	Evidence of the following is essential:

EVIDENCE GUIDE
evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	• designing, trialling and reviewing more than one work system that is planned and structured to maximise opportunities for innovation by workers and managers in the workplace • clearly articulating and understanding how and why the work system fosters workplace innovation among workers and managers • knowledge of concepts and theories of innovation.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • interaction with others to reflect the collaborative nature of systems development and of innovation more broadly • use of current industry technology in the development of systems.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is strongly recommended, for example: • BSBHRM506A Manage recruitment, selection and induction processes • BSBINM601A Manage knowledge and information • BSBINN601B Manage organisational change

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • designing a minimum of two spreadsheets • using cell-based formulae • creating charts using relevant data • knowledge of purpose and range of use of spreadsheet functions.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to an actual workplace or simulated environment • access to office equipment and resources • access to examples of spreadsheets and simple formulae.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • general administration units • other IT use units.

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Ergonomic requirements may include:	• avoiding radiation from computer screens • chair height, seat and back adjustment • document holder • footrest • keyboard and mouse position • lighting • noise minimisation • posture • screen position • workstation height and layout
Work organisation requirements may include:	• exercise breaks • mix of repetitive and other activities • rest periods
Conservation techniques may include:	• double-sided paper use • recycling used and shredded paper • re-using paper for rough drafts (observing confidentiality requirements) • utilising power-save options for equipment
Spreadsheet task requirements may include:	• data entry • output • presentation • storage
Data may include:	• numbers • text
Checking may include:	• accuracy of data • accuracy of formulae with calculator • ensuring instructions with regard to content and format have been followed • proofreading • spelling, electronically and manually
Formatting may include:	• alignment on page • efficiency of formulae • enhancements to format - borders, patterns and

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
1. Select and prepare resources	1.1. Adhere to ergonomic, work organisation and occupational health and safety requirements 1.2. Use energy and resource conservation techniques to minimise wastage 1.3. Identify spreadsheet task requirements in relation to data entry, storage, output and presentation
2. Plan spreadsheet design	2.1. Ensure spreadsheet design suits the purpose, audience and information requirements of the task 2.2. Ensure spreadsheet design enhances readability and appearance, and meets organisational and task requirements for style and layout 2.3. Use style sheets and automatic functions to ensure consistency of design and layout
3. Create spreadsheet	3.1. Ensure data is entered, checked and amended to maintain consistency of design and layout, in accordance with organisational and task requirements 3.2. Format spreadsheet using software functions to adjust page and cell layout to meet information requirements, in accordance with organisational style and presentation requirements 3.3. Ensure formulae are tested and used to confirm output meets task requirements, in consultation with appropriate personnel as required 3.4. Use manuals, user documentation and online help to overcome problems with spreadsheet design and production

4. Produce simple charts	4.1. Select chart type and design that enables valid representation of numerical data, and meets organisational and task requirements 4.2. Create charts using appropriate data range in the spreadsheet 4.3. Modify chart type and layout using formatting features
5. Finalise spreadsheets	5.1. Preview, adjust and print spreadsheet and any accompanying charts, in accordance with task requirements 5.2. Ensure data input meets designated time lines and organisational requirements for speed and accuracy 5.3. Name and store spreadsheet in accordance with organisational requirements and exit the application without data loss/damage

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills
• communication skills to clarify requirements of spreadsheet • editing and proofreading skills to check own work for accuracy against original • keyboarding skills to enter text and numerical data • literacy skills to read and understand organisational procedures, and to use basic models to produce a range of spreadsheets • mathematical and statistical skills to use spreadsheet functions such as sum, counts and averages.
Required knowledge
• formatting requirements of workplace documents • organisational guidelines on spreadsheet design and use • organisational requirements for ergonomic standards, work periods and breaks, and conservation techniques.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to office equipment and resources • access to samples of data for inclusion in spreadsheets.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • other IT use units.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Ergonomic requirements may include:	• avoiding radiation from computer screens • chair height, seat and back adjustment • document holder • footrest • keyboard and mouse position • lighting • noise minimisation • posture • screen position • workstation height and layout
Work organisation requirements may include:	• exercise breaks • mix of repetitive and other activities • rest periods
Occupational health and safety requirements may include:	• inspections • organisational procedures regarding incidents, accidents, fire and emergencies • workplace meetings • workplace safety procedures • other consultative activities
Spreadsheet design may include:	• appropriateness to required tasks • basic analysis • charts • formatting and reformatting • formulae • functions • headers and footers • headings

	• headings and labels • identification and parameters • import and export of data • labels • macros • multi-page documents • split screen operation
Automatic functions may include:	• auto date • auto correct • auto format • auto text • default settings • headers and footers • page numbering • styles • table headings
Consistency of design and layout may include:	• borders • bullet/number lists • captions • consistency with other business documents • page numbers • spacings • typeface styles and point size
Data may include:	• numbers • text
Checking data may include:	• accuracy of data • accuracy of formulae with calculator • ensuring instructions with regard to content and format have been followed • proofreading • spelling, electronically and manually
Formatting may include:	• alignment on page • efficiency of formulae • enhancements to format - borders, patterns and colours • enhancements to text • headers/footers • use of absolute and relative cell addresses • use of cell addresses in formulae

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

RANGE STATEMENT
Software functions may include:	• adding/deleting columns/rows • formatting cells • formatting text • headers/footers • sizing columns/rows • using macros • utilising shortcuts
Formulae may include:	• average • division • multiplication • percentage • subtraction • sum • combinations of above
Printing may include:	• charts • entire workbooks • selected data within a worksheet • worksheets
Designated time lines may include:	• organisational time line e.g. financial requirements • time line agreed with internal/external client • time line agreed with supervisor/person requiring spreadsheet
Naming and storing spreadsheet may include:	• authorised access • file naming conventions • filing locations • organisational policy for backing up files • organisational policy for filing hard copies of spreadsheets • security • storage in electronic folders/sub-folders • storage on CD-ROM, USB, tape back-up, server

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
1. Prepare to develop spreadsheet	1.1. Organise personal work environment in accordance with ergonomic requirements
	1.2. Analyse task and determine specifications for spreadsheets
	1.3. Identify organisational and task requirements in relation to data entry, storage, output, reporting and presentation requirements
	1.4. Apply work organisation strategies and energy and resource conservation techniques to plan work activities
2. Develop a linked spreadsheet solution	2.1. Utilise spreadsheet design software functions and formulae to meet identified requirements
	2.2. Link spreadsheets in accordance with software procedures
	2.3. Format cells and use data attributes assigned with relative and/or absolute cell references, in accordance with the task specifications
	2.4. Test formulae to confirm output meets task requirements
3. Automate and standardise	3.1. Evaluate tasks to identify those where automation

spreadsheet operation	would increase efficiency 3.2. Create, use and edit macros to fulfil the requirements of the task and automate spreadsheet operation 3.3. Develop, edit and use templates to ensure consistency of design and layout for forms and reports, in accordance with organisational requirements
4. Use spreadsheets	4.1. Enter, check and amend data in accordance with organisational and task requirements 4.2. Import and export data between compatible spreadsheets and adjust host documents, in accordance with software and system procedures 4.3. Use manuals, user documentation and online help to overcome problems with spreadsheet design and production 4.4. Preview, adjust and print spreadsheet in accordance with organisational and task requirements 4.5. Name and store spreadsheet in accordance with organisational requirements and exit the application without data loss or damage
5. Represent numerical data in graphic form	5.1. Determine style of graph to meet specified requirements and manipulate spreadsheet data if necessary to suit graph requirements 5.2. Create graphs with labels and titles from numerical data contained in a spreadsheet file 5.3. Save, view and print graph within designated time lines

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills
• literacy skills to interpret and evaluate the purposes and uses of various features of spreadsheets and to use a variety of strategies for planning and reviewing own work • proofreading and editing skills to check for accuracy and consistency of information by consulting additional resources • numeracy skills to collate and present data, graphs and related references.

Required knowledge

• advanced functions of spreadsheet software applications
• impact of formatting and design on the presentation and readability of data
• key provisions of relevant legislation from all forms of government, standards and codes that may affect aspects of business operations, such as:
  • anti-discrimination legislation
  • ethical principles
  • codes of practice
  • privacy laws
  • occupational health and safety
• organisational policies and procedures.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment

	• review of authenticated documents from the workplace or training environment • demonstration of techniques.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • administration units • other information and communications technology units.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Ergonomic requirements may include:	• avoiding radiation from computer screens • chair height, seat and back adjustment • document holder • footrest • keyboard and mouse position • lighting • noise minimisation • posture • screen position • workstation height and layout
Work organisation strategies may include:	• exercise breaks • mix of repetitive and other activities • rest periods
Energy and resource conservation techniques may include:	• double-sided paper use • recycling used and shredded paper • re-using paper for rough drafts (observing confidentiality requirements) • using power-save options for equipment

Spreadsheet design may include:	• analysis • appropriateness • avoidance of blank rows and columns • embedding cell references in formulae • formulae • formatting and reformatting • functions • headers and footers • headings • headings and labels • identification and parameters • import and export of data • labels • linked formulae • multi-page documents • pivot tables • relative and absolute cell references • split screen operation
Functions may include:	• basic financial functions (if available) • date functions • logical functions (lookup, if, choose, true, false, conditions) • mathematical functions (square root, integer, absolute value, round) • simple nested functions • statistical functions (standard deviation, count, maximum, minimum)
Formulae may include:	• addition • average • comparison • division • exponentiation • multiplication • percentage • subtraction • combinations of above
Macros may include:	• printing sections of a spreadsheet
Templates may include:	• font types and sizes • forms

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to manage the performance of staff who report to them directly. Development of key result areas and key performance indicators and standards, coupled with regular and timely coaching and feedback, provide the basis for performance management. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to all managers and team leaders who manage people. It covers work allocation and the methods to review performance, reward excellence and provide feedback where there is a need for improvement. The unit makes the link between performance management and performance development, and reinforces both functions as a key requirement for effective managers. This is a unit that all managers/prospective managers who have responsibility for other employees should strongly consider undertaking.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to develop and monitor implementation of the operational plan to provide efficient and effective workplace practices within the organisation's productivity and profitability plans. Management at a strategic level requires systems and procedures to be developed and implemented to facilitate the organisation's operational plan. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to people who manage the work of others and operate within the parameters of a broader strategic and/or business plan. The task of the manager at this level is to develop and implement an operational plan to ensure that the objectives and strategies outlined in the strategic and/or business plan are met by work teams. However in some larger organisations operational plans may be developed by a strategic planning unit. At this level work will normally be carried out within complex and diverse methods and procedures, which require the exercise of considerable discretion and judgement, using a range of problem solving and decision making strategies.

This unit applies to people who have managerial responsibilities which include building a better and more effective work environment. Continuous improvement and innovation have links with the model of the learning organisation and people working at this level play an important role in building the culture, values and attitudes of the organisation.

Links may be made between continuous improvement and formal quality systems such as International Standardization for Organization (ISO) or quality software. However it is not assumed that formal quality systems or software are in the workplace.

Innovation is seen as an important attitude and set of practices which should be fostered by people working at this level in teams and across the organisation.

Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • documentation of consultation processes to introduce or evaluate an existing continuous improvement process or system, including suggested actions or an action plan • generation of an idea or concept which exhibits creative thinking and which offers the possibility of advantaging the organisation • how the concept or idea was introduced, tested and evaluated - the idea or concept does not have to have been shown to work or to be adopted by the business • knowledge of quality management and continuous improvement theories.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to appropriate documentation and resources normally used in the workplace.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios • assessment of written reports • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • observation of presentations • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of creativity/innovation theories/concepts • evaluation of strategies established to monitor and evaluate performance of key systems and processes • review of briefing of groups on performance improvement strategies and innovation • review of documentation communicating costs and benefits of innovations and improvements to relevant groups and individuals.

Range Statement

Supply chains includes:	• network of facilities that procures raw materials, transforms them into intermediate products (or services) and then finished goods (or services), and delivers them through a distribution system • procurement, production and distribution, which are viewed as being interlinked not as discrete elements
Performance reports may include:	• budget/cost variance • customer service • environmental • financial • occupational health and safety • quality • other operating parameters
Specialists refers to:	• those people inside and outside the organisation who are expert in the application of technology to process systems and procedures, relevant to the organisation's business
Creative climate means:	• climate of high motivation with extensive expertise, and deliberative and lateral thinking time to think through and test out ideas
Organisational learning refers to:	• extent to which groups and individuals within an organisation are given the opportunity to learn from each other and encouraged to share their learning
Risk management means:	• process of identification of potential negative events and the development of plans to

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

	mitigate or minimise the likelihood of the negative event occurring and/or the consequences in the event it does occur
Cost benefit analyses means:	• calculation to determine whether the results/outcomes of a particular course of action are sufficient to justify the costs and risks in taking that action
Continuous improvement means:	• consistently reviewing what we do in search of a better way and improving the organisation in every aspect of its activities
Transition plan means:	• process of communication and education to help people through major change programs which impact on the way they do their work or them personally
Contingency plan means:	• plan which will deal with the uncertainty of a proposal and will come into operation in the event of a failure or non-conformance

BSBMKG402B Analyse consumer behaviour for specific markets

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals working in a marketing team who need to analyse consumer behaviour to examine the factors that impact on decisions to purchase products or services. Having thoroughly analysed consumer attitudes and behaviour, recommendations can be made on marketing strategies to increase consumption of the product or service being marketed. This unit analyses consumer behaviour in greater detail than BSBMKG401B Profile the market, which covers more generic profiling, targeting, and positioning strategy development and planning. This unit is relevant to individuals working within a variety of marketing communications occupational roles including advertising, public relations, direct marketing, promotional marketing or personal selling roles.

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals in a non market research organisation who conduct market research planning at a managerial level. While market research planning can be undertaken as part of a broader role, it does require a good general knowledge of market research principles and practices, and a detailed understanding of the organisation's operations, objectives and the application of market research. This unit applies to managers who allocate responsibility to team members who conduct market research, covered by BSBMKG408B Conduct market research.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to evaluate the international environment, to identify market factors and risks, and to assess the viability of international marketing opportunities. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to senior marketing or management personnel who are required to evaluate the international business environment in preparation for entering an international or export market for the first time, or to identify new marketing opportunities in markets in which their organisation already has a presence. This unit is different to BSBMKG501B Identify and evaluate marketing opportunities, which applies to senior marketing or general managers evaluating domestic marketing opportunities. While the underlying principles of the units are similar, this unit covers the increased complexity of the global business environment, and the cultural differences and international trade agreements to be addressed when conducting business internationally.

Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
1. Establish and maintain an OHS system	1.1. Locate and communicate OHS policies which clearly express the organisation's commitment to implement relevant OHS legislation in the enterprise 1.2. Define OHS responsibilities for all workplace personnel in accordance with OHS policies, procedures and programs 1.3. Identify and approve financial and human resources for the effective operation of the OHS system
2. Establish and maintain participative arrangements for the management of OHS	2.1. Establish and maintain participative arrangements with employees and their representatives in accordance with relevant OHS legislation 2.2. Appropriately resolve issues raised through participative arrangements and consultation 2.3. Promptly provide information about the outcomes of participation and consultation in a manner accessible to employees
3. Establish and	3.1. Develop procedures for ongoing hazard

maintain procedures for identifying hazards, and assessing and controlling risks	identification, and assessment and control of associated risks 3.2. Include hazard identification at the planning, design and evaluation stages of any change in the workplace to ensure that new hazards are not created by the proposed changes 3.3. Develop and maintain procedures for selection and implementation of risk control measures in accordance with the hierarchy of control 3.4. Identify inadequacies in existing risk control measures in accordance with the hierarchy of control and promptly provide resources to enable implementation of new measures 3.5. Identify intervention points for expert OHS advice
4. Establish and maintain a quality OHS management system	4.1. Develop and provide an OHS induction and training program for all employees as part of the organisation's training program 4.2. Utilise system for OHS record keeping to allow identification of patterns of occupational injury and disease in the organisation 4.3. Measure and evaluate the OHS system in line with the organisation's quality systems framework 4.4. Develop and implement improvements to the OHS system to achieve organisational OHS objectives 4.5. Ensure compliance with the OHS legislative framework so that legal OHS standards are maintained as a minimum

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills
• analytic skills to analyse relevant workplace data in order to identify hazards, and to assess and control risks • communication skills to consult with staff and to promote a safe workplace • problem-solving skills to deal with complex and non-routine difficulties • technology skills to store and retrieve relevant workplace data.

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
Required knowledge
• application of the hierarchy of control (the preferred order of risk control measures from most to least preferred, that is, elimination, engineering controls, administrative controls, personal protective equipment) • hazard identification and risk management • relevant legislation from all levels of government that affects business operation, especially in regard to OHS and environmental issues, equal opportunity, industrial relations and anti-discrimination • reporting requirements.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • detailed knowledge and application of all relevant OHS legislative frameworks • establishment and maintenance of arrangements for managing OHS within the organisations' business systems and practices • identification of intervention points for expert OHS advice • principles and practice of effective OHS management in a small, medium or large business.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to appropriate documentation and resources normally used in the workplace.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

EVIDENCE GUIDE
	• direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • review of OHS policies, information provided on the OHS system, information about the outcomes of participation and consultation provided to employees • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of OHS and OHS legislation • evaluation of OHS induction and training • review of OHS record keeping system.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
OHS legislation will depend on state/territory legislation and requirements, and will include:	• common law duties to meet general duty of care requirements • regulations and approved codes of practice relating to hazards in the work area • requirements for establishment of consultative arrangements including those for health and safety representatives, and health and safety committees • requirements for effective management of hazards • requirements for provision of information and training including training in safe operating procedures, procedures for workplace hazards, hazard identification, risk assessment and risk control, and emergency and evacuation

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

	procedures • requirements for the maintenance and confidentiality of records of occupational injury and disease
Control of associated risks may include:	• administrative • counselling/disciplinary processes • elimination • engineering • housekeeping and storage • issue resolution • OHS records maintenance and analysis • personal protective equipment • purchasing of supplies and equipment • workplace inspections including plant and equipment
Organisational health and safety record keeping may relate to:	• audit and inspection reports • workplace environmental monitoring records • consultation e.g. meetings of health & safety committees, work group meeting agendas including OHS items and actions • induction, instruction and training • manufacturers' and suppliers' information including dangerous goods storage lists • hazardous substances registers • plant and equipment maintenance and testing reports • workers compensation and rehabilitation records • first aid/medical post records

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to contribute to the control of a project's scope by assisting with the identification of objectives, deliverables, constraints, assumptions and outcomes; and by applying controls once the project has commenced. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to a project team member working under the direction of a project manager with other project team members. The individual may be operating within an organisation or as a consultant. The skills should be applied in the context of multiple complex projects, with the individual operating as part of a specialist project management team. In the context of this unit a complex project is defined as a project which involves: • a comprehensive and multi faceted project plan • a formal internal or external communications strategy • a dedicated and diverse project budget • multiple administrative components • multiple operational components • a wide range of stakeholders • a project operations team. 2. Apply project scope controls	2.1. Undertake work in accordance with agreed project management plan and by using established change control procedures and performance measurement procedures 2.2. Monitor and control aspects of project scope and communicate instances of non-compliance with overall scope to the project manager and other team members 2.3. Measure progress to determine potential, perceived and actual scope changes 2.4. Appropriately report scope changes 2.5. Provide assistance in the review of project outcomes to determine the effectiveness of initial and subsequent scope management approaches

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- literacy skills sufficient to interpret potentially complex project plans and documentation
- planning and organisational skills to monitor and respond to compliance issues and to measure progress against agreed objectives
- teamwork and communication skills to liaise with other members of the project team on a range of project scope management issues and challenges.

Required knowledge

- elements which make up a project scope management plan
- methods for measuring work outcomes and progress against plans
- factors likely to impact on project scope
- methods for segmenting and documenting the work of a project.

BSBPMG601A Direct the integration of projects

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to manage the integration of all functions of project management in a program or multiple project context. This covers managing conflicting priorities between projects, directing project managers in re aligning projects within the program, directing the internal environment with the needs and expectations of the external environment, and directing projects within the program throughout their life cycle. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	A program is defined as a set of interrelated projects, each of which has a project manager. Multiple projects (sometimes called a portfolio of projects) refers to a number of projects related in some way and managed by the same person as a program to achieve a common organisational objective/s. For the purposes of this unit someone who manages a suite of projects (a program) will be referred to as a program manager. The functions performed by a project manager to manage integration within individual projects are addressed in BSBPMG501A Manage application of project integrative processes.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • documented agreement of terms with suppliers • drafting and completion of a contract with a supplier for goods and services • informing of successful and unsuccessful suppliers.

	• review testimony from team members, colleagues, supervisors or managers • review of authenticated documents from the workplace or training environment.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • other purchasing units.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
Issues may include:	• issues relating to non-compliance with invitation to offer requirements • issues relating to occupational health and safety (OHS) performance standards • issues relating to the form and specific requirements of contract documentation
Contracts may include:	• agreements for one-off or ongoing supply of goods or services • agreements with Australian or overseas individuals, contractors, corporations, individuals and government agencies • electronic or paper-based agreements • memoranda of understanding/agreement

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to plan, conduct and report on applied research to influence strategic practices and outcomes within an organisational context. The unit also covers constructing an applied research strategy, using a range of applied research techniques, and analysing and presenting findings. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to leaders or managers using applied research to ensure learning can enhance individual, team and organisational performance. The intended purpose and approach to applied research may vary across a range of contexts and organisations. In this unit, the focus is on applied research to attain improved organisational outcomes. It involves leading a range research activities and techniques that, in combination, can provide quality information to enhance learning related activities and the development of capabilities.

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication and teamwork skills to:
  - analyse and interpret structurally intricate information in the area being researched
  - consult with target groups using a range of communication techniques
  - develop written texts which deal with complex ideas and concepts
  - present research results creatively to meet audience needs
- initiative and enterprise skills to discover and source appropriate information, and to identify future implication of information and data collected
- planning and organising skills to:
  - construct an applied research strategy

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

• initiate and design research methodology
• manage an applied research project
• frame research strategy in consideration of available resources
• problem-solving skills to:
  • develop and examine the validity of the hypothesis using a range of applied research techniques
  • collect, organise, analyse and present data
  • analyse research
  • check the integrity of data collected
  • conduct trend analyses
• self-management and learning skills to:
  • manage own time and determine priorities
  • review and adhere to relevant ethics and codes of conduct
  • store data to maintain privacy and confidentiality of information
  • conduct research to develop capabilities and learning related activities
• technical skills to:
  • select suitable technology and technical services
  • use a range of software programs
  • use technology and the internet to discover, access, collect and store data, information and research in a systematic manner.

Required knowledge
• communication processes and methods • data collection methods • legislation, regulations, policies, procedures and guidelines relating to handling or storing data, including privacy and freedom of information • presentation techniques • reporting methods • research ethics and codes of conduct • research tools and methods • selection of appropriate applied research techniques.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential:
	• formulating a research proposal or plan which includes:
	  • specific research questions or hypotheses
	  • valid population or sample size
	  • description of the geographical, cultural, social or institutional context within which the research will be carried out
	  • full description of the data collection methods
	  • analysis of the limitations to research design
	• designing an applied research project using appropriate tools and techniques
	• research report with analysis of data, and valid and reliable findings
	• utility and relevance of the research results
	• knowledge of applied research techniques.

Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • research activity relates to an actual workplace or simulated context and topic • competence is consistently demonstrated over time, over a range of applied topics, and using a range of tools and techniques appropriate to the given situations and research topic.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • applied projects or assessment activities relating to conducting applied research • observation of contextual application of skills • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of applied research.

Context may include:	• any related projects or organisations • any resources, including physical assets, which are vital to operations • key operational elements and service of the organisation • organisation or project, how it is organised and its capabilities • own role and responsibilities in relation to overall project or organisation design
Risks may include:	• commercial and legal relationships • economic circumstances and scenarios • human behaviour • individual activities • management activities and controls • natural events • political circumstances • positive risk • technology - technological issues
Tools may include:	• documentation to assist in process of identifying risk, and assessing impact and likelihood of occurrence • standard instruments developed for the organisation and contextualised for sections of the workplace's operations, such as checklists and testing procedures • tools to prioritise risks, including where relevant, numerical scoring systems for risks

Stakeholders may include:	• contractors • employees • financial managers • insurance agents • managers • public • service providers • suppliers • unions • volunteers

Risk categorisation may include:	• likelihood of risks:
	  • almost certain
	  • likely
	  • possible
	  • unlikely
	  • rare
	• consequences of risks:
	  • insignificant
	  • minor
	  • moderate
	  • major • catastrophic
	  • current control measures

Level of risk may include:	• low, treated with routine procedures • moderate, with specific responsibility allocated for the risk, and monitoring and response procedures implemented • high, requiring action, as it has potential to be damaging to the organisation or project • extreme, requiring immediate action, as it has potential to be devastating to the organisation or project

Control measures may include:	• hierarchy of controls:
	  • reduction in likelihood of risks
	  • reduction of consequences of risks
	  • retention of risks
	  • risk aversion
	  • transfer of responsibility of risks

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • developing strategies and procedures to successfully manage the operation of the business • making appropriate adjustments to the business operations as required • knowledge of quality system principles and methods.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to relevant documentation • candidate's individual circumstances and work in the context of running a small business, are the basis for assessment.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

EVIDENCE GUIDE
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • candidate's involvement as a key person in planning, developing and implementing organisational policy and that the developed policy complies with legislative requirements • implementation strategy, as part of the policy, that has been devised, implemented and reviewed showing a measurable improvement utilising the chosen benchmark indicators • communicating with stakeholders to discuss possible approaches to policy development and implementation, and contributing to the resolution of disputes among stakeholders • developing and monitoring policies for analysing data on enterprise resource consumption • using software systems for recording and filing documentation for measurement of current usage and using word processing and other basic software for interpreting charts, flowcharts, graphs and other visual data and information • reviewing and improving policies by identifying improvements and benchmarking against industry best practice and attempting new approaches continuously over time.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to an actual workplace or simulated environment • access to relevant legislation/standards/guidelines • access to a range of workplace documentation and personnel, information and resources (such as compliance obligations, organisational plans, work responsibilities) • access to reports from other parties involved in the development and implementation of policy • evidence is collected over time, involving both formative and summative assessment • evidence is relevant to the particular workplace role, including work area, equipment, systems, and documentation.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

EVIDENCE GUIDE
	• direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on the job performance by the candidate • response to case studies • review of policy developed and procedural documentation outlining the approach taken • review of implementation strategy, plans and work plans • analysis of methods used to involve stakeholders in policy development, implementation and review • analysis of inefficiencies or opportunities for improvements identified in the workplace • evaluation of participation in sustainability work practices and programs such as an environmental management framework • observation over time in relation to review of work area relating to policy and procedures being developed to assess measurement of resources used, hazards and compliance.

BSBWOR201A Manage personal stress in the workplace

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to manage personal stress in a customer contact environment. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit requires an awareness of sources of personal stress, the development of strategies to effectively manage stress, time management and recovery from stressful contacts or situations. This particularly applies in a contact centre environment due to the very measured, structured, high volume and potentially repetitive nature of the work but could apply in any work environment. Competence in this unit requires resilience and self management of the stress that can be encountered in a customer contact environment. This work is undertaken with some guidance and supervision.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor This unit specifies the outcomes required to perform basic rigging work associated with movement of plant and equipment, steel erections, hoists (including mast climbing hoists), placement of pre-cast concrete, safety nets and static lines, perimeter safety screens and shutters; and cantilever crane loading platforms for licensing purposes.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit

This unit requires the applicant to be able plan the work, select and inspect equipment, set up task, erect structures and plant and dismantle structures and plant.

This unit is based upon the National Standard for Licensing Persons Performing High Risk Work.

This unit in its current form meets state and territory licensing requirements. Any alteration will result in a unit which is not acceptable to regulators for the purpose of licensing.

This unit has a pre-requisite requirement. This requirement may be met by either the successful completion of the unit CPCCLDG3001A Licence to perform dogging or holding a valid licence for dogging.

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

Required skills for this unit are:

- ability to calculate Safe Working Load (SWL) and Working Load Limit (WLL)
- ability to erect and dismantle, level, plumb and stabilise associated plant and structures
- ability to work safely at heights including the correct application of safety equipment.
- accurate interpretation of basic structural charts and structural plans (site information)
- applying methods for making temporary connections of ropes using fibre and synthetic types
- apply methods of splicing and whipping fibre and synthetic ropes
- correct application and use of all rigging and associated equipment
- risk assessment and hazard control strategies
- interpersonal and communication skills at a level sufficient to site/workplace requirements. This includes the relevant communication methods and equipment.
- verify problems and equipment faults and demonstrate appropriate response.

Required knowledge

Required knowledge for this unit is:

- appropriate mathematical procedures for estimation and measurement of loads
- ability to interpret manufacturer's specifications for all plant and equipment use in rigging operations
- knowledge of principles relating to all plant, equipment and structural stability
- knowledge of the types and functions of rigging, safety and associated equipment including an understanding of their limitations.
- organisational and workplace standards, requirements, policies and procedures for rigging
- understanding of the hierarchy of hazard identification and control
- relevant Commonwealth, state or territory and local government OHS legislation, standards and codes of practice for undertaking rigging activities
- understanding of inspection and maintenance requirements of a wide range of appropriate plant and equipment in line with Australian Standards or manufacturer's specifications
- estimation of ground bearing pressures of the full range of soil types and associated ground conditions for setting up plant and equipment.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Successful assessment of this unit meets the competency requirement of the National Standard for licensing Persons Performing High Risk Work.

State/Territory OHS regulators have mandated the use of Assessment Instruments and Instructions for Assessment endorsed by the national body responsible for OHS matters for the assessment of this unit.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

A person who demonstrates competency in this unit must be able to provide evidence of the ability to:

- comply with OHS licensing legislation.
- effectively communicate and work safely with others in the work area.
- effectively conduct risk assessment and management procedures.
- effectively complete the following tasks:-
  - inspection of all plant and equipment, and
  - installation of a fall arrest system (Static line), and
  - use of a safety harness / fall arrest system, and
  - installation of crane loading platforms and
  - installation of a safety net, and
  - installation of a shutter and safety screen, and
  - demonstrated ability to work safely at heights, and
  - erection of structural steel, and
  - erection of precast panel, and
  - set up and operation of a winch for load movement, and
  - installation of a materials hoist, or
  - installation of a mast climber.
- effectively demonstrate the following knots,

	bends and hitches:- • Sheet bend, • Becket hitch, • Running bowline, • Double bowline. • effectively demonstrate the following splices and whippings:- • Eye splice, • Back splice, • Short splice, • Sail makers whipping, • Common whipping, • West countryman's
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment of the safe and effective application of knowledge and skill to workplace tasks (performance) must be undertaken using the National OHS endorsed Assessment Instrument. Assessment of performance must be undertaken either in the workplace or in a realistically simulated workplace setting. Assessors must ensure that the assessment in the workplace is organised to ensure that all the required equipment and materials and a suitable working area is made available to suit the assessment and the workplace. Assessment must occur under standard and authorised work practices, safety requirements and environmental constraints. Assessment is to comply with the requirements of any relevant Standards or operating procedures for basic rigging. Applicants must have access to: • personal protective equipment (PPE) for the purpose of the Performance Assessment. • appropriate safety equipment in safe condition • appropriate rigging equipment, associated equipment associated plant in safe condition as described in the endorsed assessment instrument • communication equipment (e.g. two-way

Method of assessment	Assessment must be conducted using the national OHS endorsed Assessment Instruments. These Instruments provide advice on their application. The use of 'simulators' in the assessment of this unit of competency is not acceptable. Assessment may be in conjunction with the assessment of other units of competency. Assessment methods must confirm consistency and accuracy of performance together with application of underpinning knowledge. Assessment must confirm a reasonable inference that competency is not only able to be satisfied under the particular circumstance, but is able to be transferred to other circumstances.
Guidance information for assessment	Further information about endorsed Assessment Instruments may be obtained from state/territory OHS regulators.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

Hazards may include but are not limited to:	• ground stability (e.g. ground condition, recently filled trenches, slopes) • overhead hazards (e.g. power lines, service pipes) (NB: minimum clearance distance from powerlines or electrical equipment as determined by relevant state authority or electrical supply authority.) • traffic (e.g. pedestrians, vehicles, other plant) • insufficient lighting • environmental conditions (e.g. wind, lightning, storms) • other specific hazards (e.g. dangerous materials).

Hazard control measures:	Refers to the systematic process of eliminating or reducing the risk to personnel and property through the application of controls. It includes the application of the hierarchy of control, the six-step preference of control measures to manage and control risk: • elimination • substitution • isolation • engineering control measures • using safe work practices • personal protective equipment.
Appropriate standards may include:	• codes of practice • legislation • Australian Standards • manufacturer's specifications • industry standards (where applicable).
Site Information may include, but not limited to:	• local conditions such as access and egress, • work method statements, • site specific job safety analyses and other site specific documentation as required. • task plans / Schedules and structural plans.
Forces and Loads may include, but not limited to:	• dead loads • live loads • static load • dynamic loads • wind loads.
Structures may include but are not limited to:	• structural steel • precast panels.
Associated plant may include but not limited to:	• static lines • safety nets • hoists

	• mast climbers • loading platforms.
Appropriate personnel may include:	• engineers • supervisors • colleagues • managers who are authorised to take responsibility for the workplace or operations.

Rigging Equipment may include but is not limited to:	• scaffolds
	• elevated work platforms
	• personnel box
	• cantilevered crane loading platforms
	• mast climbers.
	• safety screens and shutters
	• cranes including but not limited to:
	  • non-slewing cranes
	  • mobile slewing cranes
	  • vehicle loading cranes
	  • tower cranes
	  • self-erecting tower cranes
	  • portal boom cranes
	  • derrick cranes
	  • bridge and gantry cranes.

Associated equipment may include but is not limited to:	• all types of power and manually operated lifting gear • fibre ropes • flexible steel wire rope (FSWR) • chains • wire and synthetic slings • shackles • terminations • wedge sockets • eye bolts • beam clamps • plate clamps • rope grips • turnbuckles • rigging screws • chain blocks • lever blocks • lever-action winches

	• sheaves • spreader bars • lifting beams • jacks • levers • skates • wedges • rollers • girder trolley
Procedures may include but is not limited to:	• manufacturer's guidelines (instructions, specifications or checklists) • industry operating procedures, relevant codes of practice • workplace procedures (work instructions, operating procedures, checklists).
Safety Equipment may include but not limited to:	• safety harness • energy absorber • lanyard • inertia reel • static safety lines • safety nets.
Communication Methods may include but is not limited to:	• verbal and non-verbal language • written instructions • signage • hand signals • listening, • questioning to confirm understanding, and appropriate worksite protocol. NB: Mobile phones are not to be used for signalling purposes during the rigging process.
Communication equipment may include but is not limited to:	• fixed channel two-way radios
Hazard prevention/control measures may include but is not limited to:	• safety tags on electrical switches/isolators • powerlines are insulated • safety observer used inside exclusion zone • power disconnected • traffic barricades and control • pedestrian barricades • trench covers

	• movement of obstructions • personal protective equipment • adequate illumination • safety shutters and screens.
Ground suitability may include but is not limited to:	• rough uneven ground • backfilled ground • soft soils • hard compacted soil • rock • bitumen • concrete • suspended concrete floors • building roofs • landings • ground bearing pressure.
Appropriate personnel may include but not limited to	• other riggers • doggers • crane operators.
Temporary connections may include but not limited to:	• knots • bends • hitches • spicing • whipping.
Flexible Steel Wire Rope (FSWR) includes:	• identification, uses and connections. May include termination for: • static lines, • guys, • purchase systems, • lashing, • cranes, • hoist and winch ropes.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor

This unit specifies the outcomes required to perform rigging work at the intermediate level, which includes all the outcomes for rigging work at the basic level, and also includes rigging of cranes, rigging of conveyors, rigging of dredges and excavators, rigging associated with tilt slabs, rigging associated with demolition work, and dual lifts for licensing purposes.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit

This unit requires the applicant to be able plan the work, select and inspect equipment, set up task, erect structures and plant and dismantle structures and plant.

This unit is based upon the National Standard for Licensing Persons Performing High Risk Work.

This unit in its current form meets state and territory licensing requirements. Any alteration will result in a unit which is not acceptable to regulators for the purpose of licensing.

This unit has a pre-requisite requirement. This requirement may be met by either the successful completion of the unit CPCCLRG3001A Licence to perform rigging basic level or holding a valid licence for basic rigging.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
1. Plan job.	1.1. Task to be undertaken is assessed 1.2. Potential workplace hazards are identified 1.3. Hazard control measures are identified consistent with appropriate standards to ensure the safety of personnel and equipment 1.4. Site information is obtained 1.5. All forces and loads associated with erecting and dismantling structures and associated plant are considered in consultation with appropriate personnel. 1.6. Rigging equipment and associated equipment are identified in consultation with appropriate personnel according to procedures and site information.

	1.7. Safety equipment is identified.
	1.8. Appropriate communication methods are identified with appropriate personnel.
2. Select and inspect equipment.	2.1. Rigging equipment and associated equipment are selected and inspected according to procedures and the appropriate standard.
	2.2. Safety equipment is selected and inspected according to procedures.
	2.3. All defective rigging equipment, associated equipment and safety equipment is isolated, reported and recorded according to procedures.
	2.4. Communication equipment is selected and inspected for serviceability (where applicable)
3. Set up tasks.	3.1. Appropriate hazard prevention/control measures are applied to the work area according to procedures.
	3.2. Ground suitability is inspected and checked (where appropriate).
	3.3. Site information is reviewed, interpreted and communicated to appropriate personnel and appropriate personnel.
	3.4. All forces and loads associated with erecting and dismantling structures and associated plant are determined in consultation with appropriate personnel.
	3.5. Safety equipment is fitted and worn correctly (where appropriate).
	3.6. Rigging equipment and associated plant are positioned for work application and stability according to procedures.
4. Erect structures and plant.	4.1. Structures and associated plant is erected according to procedures and site information.
	4.2. Stability of structures and associated plant is maintained during erection according to procedures.
	4.3. Work is conducted safely at heights including safe and effective use of safety equipment.
	4.4. Appropriate communication methods and communication equipment, are used to co-ordinate the tasks.
	4.5. Temporary guys, ties, propping and shoring, including flexible steel wire rope, and tubing, are connected where required.

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
	4.6. Associated plant and rigging equipment is used according to procedures and the appropriate standard. 4.7. Associated equipment is used in a safe and appropriate manner. 4.8. The completed task is inspected according to the appropriate standard. 4.9. Excess materials are removed from the work area (where applicable)
5. Dismantle structures and plant.	5.1. Structures and associated plant are dismantled according to procedures and the appropriate standard. 5.2. Work is conducted safely at heights including safe and effective use of safety equipment. 5.3. Stability of structures and associated plant is maintained during dismantling according to procedures. 5.4. Rigging equipment, associated equipment, safety equipment and associated plant are inspected for damage and defects 5.5. All defective rigging equipment, associated equipment, associated plant and safety equipment are isolated reported and recorded according to procedures. 5.6. Rigging equipment and associated equipment are stored according to procedures and the appropriate standard. 5.7. Hazard prevention/control measures are removed (where appropriate)

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

Required skills for this unit are:

- ability to calculate Safe Working Load (SWL) and Working Load Limit (WLL)

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- ability to erect and dismantle, level, plumb and stabilise associated plant and structures
- ability to work safely at heights including the correct application of safety equipment.
- accurate interpretation of structural charts and structural plans (site information)
- correct application and use of all rigging and associated equipment
- risk assessment and hazard control strategies
- interpersonal and communication skills at a level sufficient to site/workplace requirements. This includes the relevant communication methods and equipment.
- verify problems and equipment faults and demonstrate appropriate response.

Required knowledge

Required knowledge for this unit is:

- appropriate mathematical procedures for estimation and measurement of loads
- ability to interpret manufacturer's specifications for all plant and equipment use in rigging operations
- knowledge of principles relating to all plant, equipment and structural stability
- knowledge of the types and functions of rigging, safety and associated equipment including an understanding of their limitations
- organisational and workplace standards, requirements, policies and procedures for rigging
- understanding of the hierarchy of hazard identification and control
- relevant Commonwealth, state or territory and local government OHS legislation, standards and codes of practice for undertaking rigging activities
- understanding of inspection and maintenance requirements of a wide range of appropriate plant and equipment in line with Australian Standards or manufacturer's specifications
- estimation of ground bearing pressures of the full range of soil types and associated ground conditions for setting up plant and equipment.

	for licensing Persons Performing High Risk Work. State/Territory OHS regulators have mandated the use of Assessment Instruments and Instructions for Assessment for this unit which have been endorsed by the national body responsible for OHS matters.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	A person who demonstrates competency in this unit must be able to provide evidence of the ability to:
	• comply with OHS licensing legislation.
	• effectively communicate and work safely with others in the work area.
	• effectively conduct risk assessment and management procedures.
	• effectively complete the following tasks:
	  • adding and removing a tower crane section, or • adding and removing a crane lattice boom section, or • erecting a non guyed tower (e.g. light tower, and
	  • perform a multiple crane lift, or
	  • a multiple winch lift, or
	  • a combination of a crane and winch lift, and
	  • lifting and installing a series of tilt-up panels, or
	  • lifting and installing a series of scenery panels (i.e. entertainment industry), and
	  • demolish/remove a series of tilt-up panel structures, or
	  • demolish/remove a series of scenery panel structures, and
	  • demolishing a concrete encased structural steel column and beam.
	• NB: All specifications for these performance tasks are detailed in the endorsed assessment instrument.
	• effectively conduct pre and post operational checks of intermediate rigging equipment.

Assessors must ensure that the assessment in the workplace is organised to ensure that all the required equipment and materials and a suitable working area is made available to suit the assessment and the workplace. Assessment must occur under standard and authorised work practices, safety requirements and environmental constraints. Assessment is to comply with relevant appropriate standard requirements. Applicants must have access to: • personal protective equipment (PPE) for the purpose of the Performance Assessment • appropriate safety equipment is safe condition • appropriate rigging equipment, associated equipment associated plant in safe condition as described in the endorsed assessment instrument • communication equipment (e.g. radios) where applicable • appropriate materials as required for safe erection of structures.
Method of assessment	Assessment must be conducted using the endorsed Assessment Instruments. These Instruments provide advice on their application. The use of 'simulators' in the assessment of this unit of competency is not acceptable. Assessment may be in conjunction with the assessment of other units of competency. Assessment methods must confirm consistency and accuracy of performance together with application of underpinning knowledge. CPCCOHS1001A Work safely in the construction industry

Not Applicable

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor

This unit of competency specifies the outcomes required to undertake Occupational Health and Safety (OHS) induction training within the construction industry.

It requires the ability to demonstrate personal awareness of OHS legislative requirements, and the basic principles of risk management and prevention of injury and illness in the construction industry.

Licensing requirements will apply to this unit of competency depending on the regulatory requirements of each jurisdiction.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit

This unit of competency supports the attainment of the basic OHS knowledge required prior to undertaking designated work tasks within any of the sectors within the construction industry. The unit relates directly to the general induction training program specified by the National Code of Practice for Induction for Construction Work (ASCC 2007).

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
1. Identify OHS legislative requirements.	1.1. Applicable OHS legislative requirements relevant to own work, role and responsibilities are identified and explained. 1.2. Duty of care requirements are identified. 1.3. Own responsibilities to comply with safe work practices are identified and explained.
2. Identify construction hazards and control measures.	2.1. Basic principles of risk management are identified. 2.2. Common construction hazards are identified and discussed. 2.3. Measures for controlling hazards and risks are identified.
3. Identify OHS communication and reporting processes.	3.1. OHS communication processes, information and documentation are identified and discussed. 3.2. Role of designated OHS personnel is identified and explained.

	3.3. Safety signs and symbols are identified and explained. 3.4. Procedures and relevant authorities for reporting hazards, incidents and injuries are identified.
4. Identify OHS incident response procedures.	4.1. General procedures for responding to incidents and emergencies are identified and explained. 4.2. Procedures for accessing first aid are identified. 4.3. Requirements for the selection and use of relevant personal protective equipment are identified and demonstrated. 4.4. Fire safety equipment is identified and discussed.

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

Required skills for this unit are:

- communication skills to:
  - clarify OHS legislative requirements
  - verbally report construction hazards and risks
  - ask effective questions
  - relay information to others
  - discuss OHS issues and information
- comprehension skills to:
  - explain the basic OHS legislative requirements which will be applicable to own work
  - explain the meaning of safety signs and symbols
  - identify common construction hazards
  - discuss the basic principles of risk management.

Required knowledge

Required knowledge for this unit is:

- applicable Commonwealth, State or Territory OHS legislation, regulations, standards, codes of practice and industry standards/guidance notes relevant to own work, role and responsibilities

- basic principles of risk management and assessment for construction work
- common construction hazards
- common construction safety signage and its meanings
- general construction emergency response and evacuation procedures
- general construction work activities that require licenses, tickets or certificates of competency
- general first aid response requirements
- general procedures for raising OHS issues
- general procedures for reporting OHS hazards, accidents, incidents, emergencies, injuries, near misses and dangerous occurrences
- general procedures for responding to hazards, incidents and injuries
- general workers' compensation and injury management requirements
- OHS hierarchy of controls
- OHS responsibilities and rights of duty holders, including:
  - persons in control of construction work/projects
  - employers and self-employed persons
  - supervisors
  - employees
  - designers
  - inspectors
  - manufacturers and suppliers
- own responsibilities to comply with safe work practices relating to:
  - housekeeping
  - identification of hazards
  - preventing bullying or harassment
  - smoking
  - use of amenities
  - use of drugs and alcohol
- role of OHS committees and representatives
- types of common personal protective equipment and fire safety equipment
- types of OHS information and documentation.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Context of and specific resources for assessment	• Resources must be available to support the program including participant materials and other information or equipment related to the skills and knowledge covered by the program. • It is recommended that the assessment tool designed specifically to support this unit of competency will provide consistency in assessment outcomes. • Where applicable, physical resources should include equipment modified for people with disabilities • Access must be provided to appropriate assessment support when required. • Assessment processes and techniques must be culturally appropriate, and appropriate to the oracy, language and literacy capacity of the assessee and the work being performed • In all cases where practical assessment is used it will be combined with targeted questioning to assess the underpinning knowledge. Questioning will be undertaken in such a manner as is appropriate to the oracy, language and literacy levels of the operator, any cultural issues that may affect responses to the questions, and reflecting the requirements of the competency and the work being performed.

Method of assessment	Assessment methods may include more than one of the following: • practical assessment • oral questioning • written test • work-based activities • simulated project based activity

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

OHS legislative requirements relate to:	• Australian standards • construction industry OHS standards and guidelines • duty of care • health and safety representatives, committees and supervisors • licences, tickets or certificates of competency • National Code of Practice for Induction Training for Construction Work • national safety standards • OHS and welfare Acts and regulations • safety codes of practice.
Duty of care requirements relate to:	• legal responsibility under duty of care to do everything reasonably practicable to protect others from harm

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

RANGE STATEMENT

	• own responsibilities to comply with safe work practices, including activities that require licences, tickets or certificates of competency • relevant state OHS requirements, including employers and self-employed persons, persons in control of the work site, construction supervisors, designers, manufacturers and suppliers, construction workers, subcontractors and inspectors.
Safe work practices include:	• access to site amenities, such as drinking water and toilets • general requirements for safe use of plant and equipment • general requirements for use of personal protective equipment and clothing • housekeeping to ensure a clean, tidy and safer work area • no drugs and alcohol at work • preventing bullying and harassment • smoking in designated areas • storage and removal of debris.
Risk relates to:	• likelihood of a hazard causing injury or harm.
Principles of risk management include:	• assessing the risks involved • consulting and reporting ensuring the involvement of relevant workers • controlling the hazard • identifying hazards • reviewing to identify change or improvement.
Hazard relates to:	• any thing (including an intrinsic property of a thing) or situation with the potential to cause injury or harm.
Common construction hazards include:	• confined spaces • electrical safety • excavations, including trenches • falling objects • hazardous substances and dangerous goods • HIV and other infectious diseases • hot and cold working environments • manual handling • noise • plant and equipment

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

RANGE STATEMENT

	• traffic and mobile plant • unplanned collapse • ultraviolet (UV) radiation • working at heights.
Measures for controlling risk to eliminate or minimise hazards in accordance with the hierarchy of control include:	• elimination • substitution • isolation • engineering control • administrative control • personal protective equipment.
OHS communication processes include:	• discussions with OHS representatives • OHS meetings • OHS notices, newsletters, bulletins and correspondence • OHS participative arrangements • processes for raising OHS issues • toolbox talks • workplace consultation relating to OHS issues and changes.
OHS information and documentation includes:	• accident and incident reports • Acts and regulations • Australian standards • codes of practice • construction documentation and plans • emergency information contact • evacuation plans • guidance notes • job safety analyses • labels • material safety data sheets (MSDS) • proformas for reporting hazards, incidents and injuries • reports of near misses and dangerous occurrences • risk assessments • safe work method statements • safety meeting minutes • site safety inspection reports.
Designated OHS personnel includes:	• first aid officers • OHS committee members

	• OHS representatives • supervisors.
Safety signs and symbols include:	• emergency information signs (e.g. exits, equipment and first aid) • fire signs (e.g. location of fire alarms and firefighting equipment) • hazard signs (e.g. danger and warning) • regulatory signs (e.g. prohibition, mandatory and limitation or restriction) • safety tags and lockout (e.g. danger tags, out of service tags).
Relevant authorities include:	• emergency services (e.g. police, ambulance, fire brigade and emergency rescue) • OHS regulatory authority • supervisor.
Incidents include:	• accidents resulting in personal injury or damage to property • near misses or dangerous occurrences which do not cause injury but may pose an immediate and significant risk to persons or property, and need to be reported so that action can be taken to prevent recurrence, for example: • breathing apparatus malfunctioning to the extent that the user's health is in danger • collapse of the floor, wall or ceiling of a building being used as a workplace • collapse or failure of an excavation more than 1.5 metres deep (including any shoring) • collapse or partial collapse of a building or structure • collapse, overturning or failure of the load bearing of any scaffolding, lift, crane, hoist or mine-winding equipment • damage to or malfunction of any other major plant • electric shock. • electrical short circuit, malfunction or explosion • uncontrolled explosion, fire or escape of gas, hazardous substance or steam • any other unintended or uncontrolled incident or event arising from operations carried on at a

General procedures for responding to incidents and emergencies include:	• basic emergency response (keep calm, raise alarm, obtain help) • evacuation • notification of designated OHS personnel and authorities • notification of emergency services (e.g. when and how) • referring to site emergency plans and documentation.
Emergencies include:	• chemical spill • fire • injury to personnel • structural collapse • toxic and/or flammable vapours emission • vehicle/mobile plant accident.
Personal protective equipment includes:	• aprons • arm guards • eye protection • gloves • hard hat • hearing protection • high visibility retro reflective vests • protective, well fitting clothing • respiratory protection • safety footwear • UV protective clothing and sunscreen.
Fire safety equipment includes:	• breathing apparatus • fire blankets • firefighting equipment.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the skills and knowledge required to interpret vision system plans, install equipment and conduct pre-production/event checks in accordance with the plans. The National Standard for Licensing Persons Performing High Risk Work applies to persons performing dogging and rigging work. Completion of the following units is required for certification at either basic, intermediate or advanced levels. CPCCLDG3001A Licence to perform dogging CPCCLRG3001A Licence to perform rigging basic level CPCCLRG3002A Licence to perform rigging intermediate level CPCCLRG4001A Licence to perform rigging advanced level. Sets and staging for some performances or events may fall within the definition of construction work. If so, people entering a construction site are required to complete the general induction training program specified by the National Code of Practice for Induction Training for Construction Work (Australian Safety Compensation Council, May 2007). Achievement of the unit 'CPCCOHS1001A Work safely in the construction industry' fulfils this requirement.

1. Identify requirements and prepare vision systems	1.1. Liaise with relevant personnel and interpret the vision system plan to determine and confirm the vision system requirements 1.2. Identify rigging, cabling and power requirements and calculate accurately in accordance with the vision system plan 1.3. Select, assemble and test equipment and accessories and consumables to ensure that they are working and prepared for installation 1.4. Recognise faults and take appropriate remedial action 1.5. Pre-rig all relevant vision system equipment as required by the vision system plan and in accordance with licencing regulations 1.6. Prepare, roll, test and service extension leads, looms and cables in accordance with design specifications, enterprise and legislative requirements 1.7. Construct or devise effects and masking as required 1.8. Establish contingency plans in the event of equipment malfunction and prepare back-up equipment
2. Install vision systems	2.1. Determine the positioning of all vision systems and the necessary support requirements 2.2. Install supports or check that any rigging and mounts have been installed in the appropriate position 2.3. Use safe lifting and handling techniques to install all vision systems, primary and back-up, according to the requirements of the plan 2.4. Lay and secure power and other cables to avoid damage and hazardous situations
3. Test and modify vision systems	3.1. Patch and test all equipment and accessories to ensure operational efficiency and working order 3.2. Check all equipment in conjunction with other technical operations as required 3.3. Identify any problems and modify the installation or technical elements of the equipment in consultation with relevant personnel 3.4. Complete any documentation according to enterprise procedures and provide copies to relevant personnel as required

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills
• reading and interpreting documentation and plans • calculating power loads, lengths and areas and other mathematical requirements • key operational features of different types of vision systems
Required knowledge
• the capacities and limitations of various type of projectors and other elements used in vision systems • general understanding of other technical elements of the production/event such as staging, lighting and sound elements to be used in conjunction with vision systems • general knowledge of rigging procedures, including licencing requirements and restrictions • relevant organisational and legislative occupational health and safety requirements, including those related to safe manual handling techniques and working at heights

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Context of and specific resources for assessment	The assessment context must provide for: • practical demonstration of skills through the completion of a range of preparatory and set up tasks with industry-current vision systems equipment • project or work activities that allow knowledge to be applied to specific live production contexts and situations • completion of tasks within workplace-realistic time constraints.
Method of assessment	Assessment may incorporate a range of methods to assess performance and the application of essential underpinning knowledge, and might include: • direct observation of the candidate working with equipment and completing tasks • inspection of equipment set up by the candidate • oral questioning/interviewing to assess knowledge of equipment and procedures • review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate. Assessment methods should closely reflect workplace demands and the needs of particular groups (e.g. people with disabilities, and people who may have literacy or numeracy difficulties such as speakers of languages other than English, remote communities and those with interrupted schooling).

EVIDENCE GUIDE
Guidance information for assessment	Assessment of this unit requires access to: • current and operational vision systems as specified in the Range Statement • vision system plans or instructions.

RANGE STATEMENT
Vision system activities within this unit must include:	• cabling of equipment, including making cables using connectors and crimping tools • positioning of equipment • testing the basic operation of equipment

Equipment may include:	• 35mm and 16mm projectors
	• audio equipment, including:
	  • amp racks
	  • amplifiers
	  • cables
	  • compact disc players
	  • connectors
	  • effects and mixing desks
	  • equalisers
	  • feedback monitors
	  • microphones • speakers
	  • tape recorders
	• cables and wireless microphones
	• computer-operated equipment
	• digital and still cameras
	• lighting equipment
	• portable LCD and DLP projectors
	• screens

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

RANGE STATEMENT
	• video players and monitors
Problems with equipment would be quite simple in nature and may include:	• difficulties with positioning • discrepancies within plans • incorrect number of equipment pieces • insufficient or wrong cabling • not receiving signal from input devices to display/output devices • problems with power source

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Context of and specific resources for assessment	The assessment context must provide for: • practical demonstration of skills through the creation and use of technical references from a score for at least two different productions, i.e. use during an actual performance • interaction with and involvement of a production team • development of a technical reference within commercially-realistic time constraints. • Because this unit can cover a broad range of industry contexts, assessment should be tailored to address the particular technical area or job role.
Method of assessment	Assessment may incorporate a range of methods to assess practical skills and the application of essential underpinning knowledge, and might include: • evaluation of a performance for which the candidate is responsible for the technical references • review of technical reference materials prepared by the candidate using a score • project activity to allow the candidate to create and update a technical reference using a score • written or oral questioning to test knowledge of musical and technical requirements of the

CUESOU01C Repair and maintain audio equipment

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the skills and knowledge required to perform regular basic maintenance and simple repairs on audio equipment. It does not require the use of specific electrical or electronic knowledge and skills. In some States and Territories of Australia, a restricted electrical licence is required to repair and maintain production equipment. Restricted electrical licences allow a person to carry out electrical work incidental to a trade. Incidental work may include fault-finding on equipment or changing like for like equipment by disconnecting and reconnecting the fixed wiring. It does not include any other changes to the fixed wiring. Testing and tagging of electrical equipment must be carried out by a person with the relevant certificate of competency in accordance with the performance specifications of: • Australian Standard 3760: 200 In-service safety inspection and testing of electrical equipment • Australian Standard 3002: 1985 Electrical installations - shows and carnivals

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	Technicians working with equipment in the screen, media and entertainment industries typically apply the skills and knowledge described in this unit. Under the supervision of senior technical staff, they are responsible for basic repairs and maintenance of equipment and facilities needed for a wide range of productions.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

	Complex repairs requiring specific mechanical, electrical or electronic skills are referred to specialist service technicians, e.g. major electrical repairs are carried out by licensed electricians. This unit has linkages to a range of other audio units, and combined assessment and/or training with those units may be appropriate. It is strongly recommended that this unit be assessed with or after the following units: • CUESOU07B Apply a general knowledge of audio to work activities • CUSOHS301A Follow occupational health and safety procedures.

• typical maintenance needs and schedules for a range of audio equipment • cleaning agents, equipment and techniques for the major types of audio equipment • techniques and processes for detecting faults in major types of audio equipment • common faults and associated repair procedures for the range of equipment in use • spare parts and sub-assemblies used in audio equipment repair and maintenance • the effects of bad ventilation on equipment • the meaning and use of electrical measurements, including voltage, current resistance, power insulation and circuit continuity • legal and licensing issues that impact on the repair and maintenance of audio equipment, including the role of the restricted electrical licence and the limitations on the type of work that can be undertaken without a licence • specific occupational health and safety issues in relation to the repair and maintenance of audio equipment.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	The following evidence is critical to the judgement of competence in this unit: • ability to correctly use repair and maintenance techniques on multiple pieces of audio equipment • correct selection and use of tools • application of logical fault detection procedures • correct interpretation of service and technical manuals • knowledge of the technical features of major types of audio equipment

	• knowledge of occupational health and safety issues which impact on the repair and maintenance of audio equipment.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	The assessment context must provide for: • practical demonstration of skills within an environment which has a range of operational and industry-current audio equipment on which the candidate can work • completion of fault detection, repair and maintenance tasks within typical workplace time constraints.
Method of assessment	Assessment may incorporate a range of methods to assess performance and the application of essential underpinning knowledge, and might include: • direct observation of the candidate completing maintenance and repair tasks • inspection of equipment repaired or maintained by the candidate • review of maintenance schedules and repair reports prepared by the candidate • written or oral questioning to test knowledge of audio equipment and occupational health and safety issues and regulations • review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate. Assessment methods should closely reflect workplace demands and the needs of particular groups (e.g. people with disabilities, and people who may have literacy or numeracy difficulties such as speakers of languages other than English, remote communities and those with interrupted schooling).
Guidance information for assessment	This unit requires access to: • a range of industry-current audio equipment as identified in the Range Statement • a venue where maintenance and repairs can be completed • the tools required to complete repair and maintenance tasks.

RANGE STATEMENT
Audio equipment may include:	• amplifiers • CD player • computer DAT • DVD • effects rack • hard disc recorder • headphones • microphone • mini disc • mixing desk • radio microphones • reel-to-reel • sequencer/sampler • speakers • talkback communication headsets • tape machines • turntables
Minor repairs may include:	• making up leads • replacing faders • replacing fuses • replacing or tagging items which do not require specific electronic or electrical skills • replacing parts of microphones and stands • replacing the range of connectors used in sound
Appropriate personnel may include:	• colleagues from other specialist areas • external suppliers • production team • supervisors/managers • other technicians
Spares and consumables may include:	• batteries • diskettes • fuses

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the skills and knowledge to operate audio equipment during any type of live performance/presentation. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the unit	People working as sound technicians apply the skills and knowledge described in this unit. They are responsible for interpreting audio production requirements and participating in technical run-throughs prior to operating professional audio equipment during a live performance or event. The work often involves long or irregular hours and can be physically demanding. The ability to work cooperatively as part of a production team is essential. It is strongly recommended that this unit be assessed with or after the following unit: • CUESOU07B Apply a general knowledge of audio to work activities. Implement appropriate changes to audio operation and document in accordance with organisational procedures 1.5. Communicate appropriate technical information to performers/presenters
2. Prepare for audio operation	2.1. Power up equipment at the appropriate time and check to ensure correct functioning 2.2. Complete audio check and implement and document any adjustments in accordance with organisational procedures 2.3. Promptly identify, rectify and/or refer any equipment faults/problems to the relevant personnel as required
3. Operate audio equipment	3.1. Execute all audio cues in accordance with the running sheet, directions from colleagues and performance requirements 3.2. Promptly identify the need for change during the performance and modify cues as required to cater for unexpected events and to minimise negative impact on the performance 3.3. Operate console to produce the required technical level and tonal balances 3.4. Adjust equalisation for required tonal balance 3.5. Balance signal levels appropriately 3.6. Maintain overall audio level within the requirements of the venue 3.7. Play back audio effects at the required level through the appropriate speakers 3.8. Monitor equipment for correct operation throughout the performance and identify and action any problems appropriately
4. Complete post-performance procedures	4.1. Safely power down equipment at the appropriate time in accordance with manufacturer instructions and organisational procedures 4.2. Identify and complete necessary equipment adjustments, including maintenance and re-setting where appropriate in preparation for the next performance

CUESOU04C Mix live audio

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the skills and knowledge required to mix audio for live performance. As such it builds on other units dealing with the set-up and operation of audio equipment. Skills in mixing audio are developed over an extended period. This unit defines a minimum standard for the mixing of live audio. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	People working as sound technicians apply the skills and knowledge described in this unit. Typically they are responsible for the front-of-house mix which involves creating quality sound for an audience. The skills and knowledge associated with managing the foldback mix for performers on stage are covered in: • CUESOU11B Set up and operate stage monitor systems. The work often involves long or irregular hours and can be physically demanding. The ability to work cooperatively as part of a production team is essential. It is strongly recommended that this unit be assessed with or after the following units: • CUESOU07B Apply a general knowledge of audio to work activities

1. Tune and balance audio equipment	• Power up equipment and check to ensure it is in working order • Match interfaces between audio and destination in accordance with level, impedance, phase and frequency • Route signals to correct signal path • Operate faders to produce an audio level in accordance with production requirements • Operate audio controls in accordance with acoustic and dynamic requirements • Promptly identify faults and problems and take appropriate action to rectify or report to relevant personnel • Complete audio check, implement any required adjustments and document accurately in accordance with organisational requirements
2. Mix audio sources	• Mix audio to produce the required audio level and tonal balance in accordance with production requirements • Monitor signal paths throughout the performance • Select effects in accordance with production requirements • Adjust equalisation for required tonal balance • Adjust relative fader levels in accordance with the musical context • Balance signal levels appropriately • Produce transitions between sound signals that are technically accurate and produce the required effect • Ensure that the level of the composite signal is within technical limits and the desired dynamic range • Maintain overall audio level in accordance with venue requirements and safe noise levels

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the foundation skills and knowledge required to complete a range of general audio-related tasks in a live venue environment. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	People assisting with audio operations in the screen, media and entertainment industries apply the skills and knowledge outlined in this unit. They are working under the direct supervision of an experienced sound technician. The role includes the need for an understanding of the role of sound technicians, the process for setting up audio equipment and the functions of a range of sound equipment. Equipment operation is at a routine level. This unit underpins and has linkages to general technical units and all other audio units, and combined training and assessment with those units may be appropriate, e.g.: • CUSOHS301A Follow occupational health and safety procedures • CUETGE15B Handle physical elements safely during bump in/bump out.

• understanding of phase, including phase cancellation, and that at 180 degree phase difference signals do cancel each other out
• common terminology used in relation to audio
• occupational health and safety requirements and legislation that relate to audio personnel, in particular with regard to working safely with electricity
• requirements for the storage of audio equipment
• key features, purpose and basic operating procedures of major types of audio equipment, including different types of loudspeakers, audio mixing consoles, signal processing equipment, input source equipment and common accessories
• different types of cable, their usage in different situations and how to care for them, including:
  • microphone cables; how to run safely and neatly and where to store excess
  • speaker cables; how to run safely and neatly and avoid lighting components
  • multicore cables, how to run safely and neatly and where to store excess
  • power cables, how to run safely and neatly and where to store excess

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the skills and knowledge required to compile sound effects and replay material from diverse sources and to replay those effects on cue in a live performance situation. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	People working as sound technicians apply the skills and knowledge described in this unit. Typically they are responsible for assembling the range of sound effects required during a live performance and ensuring that these are replayed in the correct sequence and required level during performances. The work often involves long or irregular hours and can be physically demanding. The ability to work cooperatively as part of a production team is essential. It is strongly recommended that this unit be assessed with or after the following unit: • CUESOU07B Apply a general knowledge of audio to work activities. This unit has linkages to a range of other audio units, and combined assessment and/or training with those units may be appropriate.

2. Assemble source materials	2.1. Collect and collate pre-recorded materials and check correct versions and duration 2.2. Liaise with relevant colleagues to determine the most appropriate replay mechanism or platform 2.3. Ascertain hardware and software availability for duplication and recording
3. Duplicate and record materials	3.1. Correctly record voice using a range of devices 3.2. Correctly prepare an Edit Decision List (EDL) 3.3. Use appropriate techniques and equipment to record sources at different source levels 3.4. Use correct techniques and equipment to complete editing of tracks or cues 3.5. Make back-up materials using equipment correctly
4. Test and play materials on cue	4.1. Check final source material against show log 4.2. Correctly prepare replay equipment, sound levels and back-up hardware 4.3. Confirm cues with relevant colleagues 4.4. Play materials on cue

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

literacy skills sufficient to interpret cue documentation and source materials

Required knowledge

- optimum recording levels for a range of devices
- operating techniques for different recording devices, both digital and analogue
- operating techniques for a range of audio equipment to complete a signal chain
- safety issues associated with recording material
- copyright, moral rights and intellectual property issues and legislation that impacts on the recording and replay of material
- techniques for creation and adaptation of cue sheets

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Context of and specific resources for assessment	The assessment context must provide for: • practical demonstration of skills through the recording and editing of sound effects for use in a live production • use of industry-current equipment.
Method of assessment	Assessment may incorporate a range of methods to assess performance and the application of essential underpinning knowledge, and might include: • evaluation of audio materials compiled/edited by the candidate • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of equipment and techniques • review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate. Assessment methods should closely reflect workplace demands and the needs of particular groups (e.g. people with disabilities, and people who may have literacy or numeracy difficulties such as speakers of languages other than English, remote communities and those with interrupted schooling).
Guidance information for assessment	Assessment of this unit requires access to: • source materials • recording and replay devices.

CUESOU10B Operate wireless audio equipment

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the skills and knowledge required to specify, fit and operate radio microphones and in-ear wireless monitors for any production within the cultural industries. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	People working as sound technicians apply the skills and knowledge described in this unit. They are working at a senior level since their responsibilities go beyond the basic skills required to attach microphones to individual performers/presenters. They are responsible for using a range of radio microphone technology during a production and for managing spectrum. In this role they require a sound knowledge of the technical and production issues that impact on radio microphone operation. The work often involves long or irregular hours and can be physically demanding. The ability to work cooperatively as part of a production team is essential, along with the interpersonal skills required to work with performers. It is strongly recommended that this unit be assessed with or after the following units: • CUESOU07B Apply a general knowledge of audio to work activities

Elements and Performance Criteria

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

1. Assess wireless audio equipment requirements and plan spectrum management	1.1. Liaise with relevant personnel to determine the various production factors that will impact on wireless audio equipment operation 1.2. Assess both technical and performance factors to establish the most appropriate approach to the use of wireless audio equipment in accordance with any regulatory requirements 1.3. Establish all other wireless frequencies in use within range, including security and building services users 1.4. Research and establish wireless instrument and in-ear monitor frequencies to be used by all acts, performers and musicians associated with the performance 1.5. Plot proposed and currently used frequencies onto suitable plot and compare with legal and available frequencies 1.6. Establish actual frequencies to be used, allocated to each person, performer, musician, and/or department 1.7. Where multiple use of the same frequency for different performers or segments is required, prepare a suitable spreadsheet/plot 1.8. Accurately document wireless audio equipment requirements prior to the production to ensure easy interpretation by others 1.9. Ensure availability of equipment and accessories in accordance with production requirements
2. Set-up wireless equipment	2.1. Establish suitable location for equipment and technician work area in consultation with relevant personnel 2.2. Run audio lines appropriately from wireless equipment to stage box or patch point and make correct connections in accordance with plot 2.3. Run standby microphone cable/s as required, and have wired and wireless standby equipment on hand 2.4. Establish backup channels with appropriate personnel, and put in place other appropriate contingency management measures
3. Check and fit wireless audio equipment	3.1. Make appropriate checks on wireless audio equipment prior to fitting to ensure equipment is correctly labelled, in working order and fully charged with new batteries 3.2. Check that frequency setting on microphones and

Fit wireless audio equipment using appropriate attachment techniques to meet performance requirements 3.5. Follow appropriate protocols with performers during the fitting process 3.6. Clearly explain any technical operation issues to performers 3.7. Check and adapt gain structure to fit production requirements
4. Monitor wireless audio equipment systems	4.1. Correctly set wireless audio equipment so that signal is received by the sound desk 4.2. Politely request performer to use equipment to ensure it is working correctly and crosscheck 4.3. Monitor all wireless systems throughout production, identify any problems and take appropriate action to rectify
5. Complete work operations	5.1. Retrieve wireless equipment from performers at conclusion of their performance 5.2. Clean and arrange or store wireless equipment in readiness for the next user or the next performance

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills
• literacy skills sufficient to interpret production documentation and regulatory requirements • numeracy skills sufficient to work with frequency allocations

CUESOU11B Set up and operate stage monitor systems

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the skills and knowledge needed to determine the requirements for a stage foldback system, and to set up and operate that system for performers. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	Sound technicians or foldback mixers apply the skills and knowledge outlined in this unit. It can be a challenging role since they need to satisfy the on-stage mixing requirements of each individual performer in a group or orchestra. This unit requires detailed knowledge of equipment and the specific issues that apply to the monitoring of foldback. As such it most commonly applies to musical performance. It is strongly recommended that this unit be assessed with or after the following units: • CUESOU07B Apply a general knowledge of audio to work activities • CUESOU10B Operate wireless audio equipment • CUSSOU303A Set up and disassemble audio equipment • CUESOU03C Operate professional audio equipment.

requirements	1.2. Correctly interpret documentation to determine system requirements 1.3. Liaise with venue and other technicians/departments to allocate adequate set-up time and to confirm requirements for stage monitor system set-up and checking
2. Specify stage monitor system	2.1. Prepare accurate stage layout diagram with proposed placements of all required stage monitor equipment 2.2. Select appropriate stage monitor loudspeakers or in-ear monitors for each required send (mix) 2.3. Select appropriate stage monitor loudspeaker or in ear processing and/or amplification, plus cabling 2.4. Ensure adequate monitoring and communication systems are in place for all relevant personnel 2.5. Ensure availability of any in-ear or wireless equipment and accessories through liaison with relevant personnel
3. Set-up equipment and prepare for performance	3.1. Correctly set-up stage monitor console, processing/amplification racks and engineer's monitor, completing all appropriate checks 3.2. Check that all cables are neatly routed and secured and that all equipment is safely positioned 3.3. Ensure that there are adequate resources available in the event of equipment breakdown 3.4. Neatly and correctly label stage monitor console input channel strips, and all processing equipment so that each item is clearly identified as to function and relevant mix 3.5. Position all stage monitor loudspeakers and neatly run/fix all appropriate cables in accordance with health and safety requirements 3.6. Cross check final set-up against production requirements
4. Tune, equalise and adjust system for performance	4.1. Test all components of the stage monitor system, including a complete line check of all inputs, in accordance with health and safety requirements 4.2. Individually equalise each stage monitor send to avoid run-away feedback at all times and set top gain (level) indication for microphones 4.3. Cross check all adjacent stage monitor sends to allow for acoustic interference

	4.4. Run complete system up to safe working limit, including while any front of house speaker system is operating, to check adequate performance and mains power availability
5. Liaise with performers on requirements	5.1. Establish and maintain a positive working relationship with relevant performance personnel 5.2. Reconfirm production requirements with each relevant performer and check that set-up meets individual requirements in relation to quality, balance and mix sound levels 5.3. Promptly identify malfunctions and rectify appropriately
6. Prepare sound mixing console for operation	6.1. Liaise with relevant personnel and/or read production documents to interpret and confirm the sound requirements so that technical and creative requirements are met 6.2. Ensure adequate worklights or console illumination and check light spill
7. Operate console during production	7.1. Observe occupational health and safety requirements for operating the sound mixing console 7.2. Operate faders to produce a level appropriate to the required sound and check each send (mix) in regular rotation 7.3. Make appropriate adjustments to equalisers to produce an appropriate tonal quality 7.4. Monitor sources and outputs both aurally and visually to meet with accepted safety standards and production requirements 7.5. Promptly identify and appropriately troubleshoot any problems on stage 7.6. Where required, allow audio signals to be processed, adding desired effects or other signal processing where necessary 7.7. Communicate appropriately with relevant personnel, when required, throughout the production
8. Complete work operations	8.1. Complete all necessary documentation in accordance with organisational procedures and production requirements 8.2. Ensure that any equipment is handled, cleaned, maintained and stored in accordance with organisational and/or production requirements 8.3. Ensure that the work environment is clean and

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- problem solving and technology skills in the context of controlling wiring and audio routing options for a typical distributed audio control system
- literacy skills sufficient to interpret audio data and draw system flow chart
- numeracy skills sufficient to work with numerical data used in audio equipment

Required knowledge

- MIDI, SMPTE and show-based protocols and control mediums
- machine control, lighting control, other stage systems
- terminology and definitions for digital systems and network control, including modern Ethernet and RS 232 based systems
- overview of cues and their relationship to control networks
- overview of analogue forms of control and switching, versus digital control and networks
- overview of data transmission and error correction
- overview of data network distribution, network topologies, and basic network protocols
- overview of data communications, data interfacing, and interfacing with various common computer operating systems, including Windows and Macintosh

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the skills and knowledge required to specify, set-up and operate an audio system for an outdoor event. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	A supervising sound technician would typically undertake the role outlined in this unit which focuses on the skills and knowledge required to plan audio operations for an outdoor event, where factors affecting audio operations can be quite varied. For example, weather conditions can significantly affect the operation of sound equipment during a live performance or event. It is strongly recommended that this unit be assessed with or after the following units: • CUESOU07B Apply a general knowledge of audio to work activities • CUSSOU303A Set up and disassemble audio equipment • CUESOU08B Select and manage microphone and other audio input sources • CUESOU03C Operate professional audio equipment. Elements and Performance Criteria

1. Specify audio for an outdoor event	1.1. Correctly interpret performance/production outline to determine audio requirements 1.2. Source and analyse relevant information on regulations that affect the design of outdoor audio systems, including noise pollution and insurance issues 1.3. Research the venue or site to determine specific factors for consideration in outdoor audio system specification 1.4. Accurately record site information in an appropriate format to assist with system design 1.5. Develop appropriate audio system specification with full consideration of power issues, loudspeaker requirements and sound pressure factors 1.6. Develop an accurate schedule of system requirements, including all components, with specific reference to additional infrastructure and equipment requirements for outdoor audio
2. Install audio system for an outdoor event	2.1. Complete checks to ensure availability of all resources prior to installation phase 2.2. Install audio system in accordance with safety procedures and test for adherence to site restrictions, emergency procedures and noise pollution limitations within scope of individual responsibility and certification 2.3. Liaise with relevant colleagues during installation to ensure efficiency of installation and maximum cooperation 2.4. Make appropriate checks to ensure mains power is well reserved

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills
• communication skills sufficient toliaise with artistic and technical personnel on performance requirements • planning and organising skills toinvestigate equipment variables for outdoor context andorganising set-up of outdoor events • problem solving skills in the context of developing and actioning contingencies for wet weather • technology skills to operate audio equipment
Required knowledge
• the unique issues that affect outdoor audio, including issues associated with transmission, types and size of equipment • requirements for control of timing and delays while dealing with the speed of sound • occupational health and safety implications when operating audio equipment outdoors, including types of hazards and possible responses • legal and regulatory issues that impact on outdoor audio, including those related to noise pollution • power and electricity provision and how this will vary between outdoor sites • site access and weather protection issues relevant to audio

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	The following evidence is critical to the judgement of competence in this unit: • knowledge of the particular issues that affect the design, installation and operation of outdoor audio

	• ability to design, install and operate a system that meets production requirements and takes account of all relevant environmental factors.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	The assessment context must provide for: • practical demonstration of skills using industry-current equipment through the design, installation and operation of an audio system for more than one outdoor event • involvement of and interaction with a production and performance team to reflect the collaborative nature of the unit • use of industry-current equipment.
Method of assessment	Assessment may incorporate a range of methods to assess performance and the application of essential underpinning knowledge, and might include: • evaluation of the audio quality at an outdoor event for which the candidate has designed and operated the audio system • projects or case studies to assess ability to design outdoor audio systems for different environmental conditions • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of the particular issues impact on outdoor sound • review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate. Assessment methods should closely reflect workplace demands and the needs of particular groups (e.g. people with disabilities, and people who may have literacy or numeracy difficulties such as speakers of languages other than English, remote communities and those with interrupted schooling).
Guidance information for assessment	Assessment of this unit requires access to: • an outdoor venue • industry-current audio and other relevant staging equipment suitable for outdoor use.

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Factors for consideration in outdoor audio system design may include:	• legal issues associated with sound re-enforcement/noise pollution • location of audience • need for specialist assistance • performer requirements • positioning of stage • presence of trees or other site features which may affect audio operation • relationship of equipment location to audience • site dimensions • time of year/forecasted weather patterns
Additional infrastructure and equipment requirements for outdoor audio may include:	• crowd barriers around equipment • flying towers • occupational health and safety requirements • platforms • protection for equipment • rigging • support and mixing positions
Relevant colleagues with whom liaison may be required during set-up may include:	• event manager • performers • production manager • specialists, eg acousticians • stage manager • other technicians (both audio and others)

CUESTA01C Install staging elements

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to install a range of staging elements for any production within the cultural industries. It builds on the skills found in the unit CUESTA05C Apply a general knowledge of staging to work activities. The National Standard for Licensing Persons Performing High Risk Work applies to persons performing dogging and rigging work. Completion of the following units is required for certification at either basic, intermediate or advanced levels. CPCCLDG3001A Licence to perform dogging CPCCLRG3001A Licence to perform rigging basic level CPCCLRG3002A Licence to perform rigging intermediate level CPCCLRG4001A Licence to perform rigging advanced level. Sets and staging for some performances or events may fall within the definition of construction work. If so, people entering a construction site are required to complete the general induction training program specified by the National Code of Practice for Induction Training for Construction Work (Australian Safety Compensation Council, May 2007). Achievement of the unit 'CPCCOHS1001A Work safely in the construction industry' fulfils this requirement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	Mechanists apply the skills and knowledge outlined in this unit. In this role they are responsible for installing a range of scenery and set items for performances or events. These include soft scenery, as well as weight and non-weight bearing set items. This unit has linkages with a range of other staging and technical production units, and combined assessment and/or training with those units may be appropriate.

1. Prepare for installation of staging	1.1. Prepare venue at the appropriate time in accordance with bump-in schedule 1.2. Read, correctly interpret and apply stage plans to venue layout 1.3. Identify and liaise with relevant personnel to determine the sequence of installation for staging elements 1.4. Where there is an existing stage, communicate modifications clearly to relevant personnel and implement as required 1.5. Install other equipment and necessary structures in consultation with the relevant personnel 1.6. Pre-rig equipment as required within safety guidelines and licensing requirements
2. Install staging elements	2.1. Mark out ground plan accurately onstage in accordance with design specifications and venue requirements 2.2. Install staging elements in accordance with design specifications and requirements of the production 2.3. Install staging elements in the appropriate sequence as agreed with relevant personnel 2.4. Install staging elements in accordance with safety regulations and any manufacturer instructions 2.5. Select and use appropriate equipment to assist with staging installation, using safe working practices at all times
3. Check staging elements after installation	3.1. Check each staging element to ensure operational standards for performance are achieved and that all safety requirements have been met 3.2. Identify any problems with staging elements, take appropriate action to rectify or refer to relevant personnel for action 3.3. Identify any modifications required to improve suitability for performance and take appropriate action

CUESTA06B Apply a general knowledge of theatrical rigging

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the skills and knowledge required to apply a broad knowledge of theatrical rigging to the live entertainment workplace. It does not cover the installation of rigs. The National Standard for Licensing Persons Performing High Risk Work applies to persons performing dogging and rigging work. Completion of the following units is required for certification at either basic, intermediate or advanced levels. CPCCLDG3001A Licence to perform dogging CPCCLRG3001A Licence to perform rigging basic level CPCCLRG3002A Licence to perform rigging intermediate level CPCCLRG4001A Licence to perform rigging advanced level. Sets and staging for some performances or events may fall within the definition of construction work. If so, people entering a construction site are required to complete the general induction training program specified by the National Code of Practice for Induction Training for Construction Work (Australian Safety Compensation Council, May 2007). Achievement of the unit 'CPCCOHS1001A Work safely in the construction industry' fulfils this requirement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	A range of technical production personnel involved in live entertainment events and productions apply the skills and knowledge outlined in this unit. Those who work in lighting, staging, sound or vision systems need a general understanding of rigging. This unit may also be useful for licensed riggers who have limited knowledge of the theatrical work context. This unit has linkages to a range of other technical production units and combined assessment and/or training may be appropriate.

1. Determine rigging requirements	1.1. Correctly interpret technical production requirements to determine rigging requirements and their impact on other aspects of work 1.2. Liaise with licensed riggers where required to confirm production requirements in relation to rigging 1.3. Correctly identify rigging-related tasks that may be completed by unlicensed personnel and those who require specialist assistance 1.4. Plan work appropriately in consultation with riggers to ensure smooth flow of work and efficient set up
2. Complete rigging related tasks	2.1. Complete tasks associated with rigging under direction and supervision of a licensed rigger 2.2. Use correct techniques to complete rigging-related tasks 2.3. Ensure that work is inspected by licensed rigger in accordance with safety and licensing regulations

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- literacy skills sufficient to read instructions for safety equipment
- numeracy skills sufficient to understand the equipment calculations associated with rigging

Required knowledge

- the definition of rigging, different levels of rigging and its use in the entertainment industry
- safety equipment and how this is used, including harnesses and fall arresters
- hoists (different types) and why and how they are used in an entertainment context

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
• the features of spansets and their uses in an entertainment context • trusses and correct and safe ways of using them • the importance of weights, loads and counterweights, and how these are calculated • shackles and other fittings and their uses in theatrical rigging • the regulatory limitations on the role of technical production personnel in relation to rigging, and the types of tasks which must be undertaken by a licensed rigger

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Context of and specific resources for assessment	The assessment context must ensure: • application of knowledge to specific technical production situations.
Method of assessment	Assessment may incorporate a range of methods to assess performance and the application of essential underpinning knowledge, and might include: • case studies and problem solving to assess application of knowledge to different technical situations • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of rigging techniques and safety issues • review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate. Assessment methods should closely reflect workplace demands and the needs of particular groups (e.g. people with disabilities, and people who may have literacy or numeracy difficulties such as speakers of languages other than English, remote communities and those with interrupted schooling).

Guidance information for assessment	Assessment of this unit requires access to: • Australian standards regarding rigging and scaffolding certification • rigging equipment and materials • venue where rigging is constructed.

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Rigging requirements may relate to one or more of the following:	• audio • lighting • set construction • staging • vision systems
Licensed riggers may be:	• contract labour • fellow employees
Rigging related tasks that may be undertaken by unlicensed personnel may include:	• application of fibre and wire rope • assembling flying units • assembling truss • attachment of soft fittings • communication as applicable to flying operation • tying knots • use of shackles, trim chains, turnbuckles, screweyes

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

RANGE STATEMENT
	Rigging related tasks that may be undertaken by unlicensed personnel do not include work that involves hanging hoists, using of lifting equipment or slinging of spansets.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the skills and knowledge required to establish and manage resources and other requirements for a particular production area. It builds on the skills found in the unit CUETEM01C Coordinate production operations. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	A head technician, technical manager or workshop manager would generally undertake this role. This unit has linkages to a range of other technical and management units and combined assessment and/or training with those units is recommended, e.g.: • CUETEM01C Coordinate production operations • CUEFIN02C Manage a budget • CUESET11B Develop set construction plans to meet design requirements.

CUETEM07B Tour the production

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the skills and knowledge required to coordinate arrangements for a touring production. The unit focuses only on the additional skills and knowledge for touring and would always be combined with other stage management and technical units in the workplace. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	Touring responsibilities will vary in accordance with the job role but the unit is particularly relevant for stage managers and other senior technical production personnel who make general touring arrangements and need to adapt aspects of a production for touring. This unit has linkages with a wide range of other technical and stage management units, and combined assessment and/or training with those may be appropriate.

CUETGE15B Handle physical elements during bump in/bump out

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the skills and knowledge required to assemble, pack and load/unload physical elements under supervision for any production within the cultural industries. This unit is introductory in nature and focuses on safe manual handling and general knowledge of the bump in/bump out process and types of equipment. It does not include the specialised bump in/bump out procedures and knowledge required by technicians. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	The role outlined in this unit may be undertaken by a range of technical production personnel, usually under the supervision of others. This unit has linkages to other technical construction and manufacturing units and combined assessment and/or training with those units may be appropriate. It is strongly recommended that this unit be assessed with or after the following unit: MEM18001C Use hand tools.

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to a range of relevant and current industry information materials, such as the Copyright Act 1968, Copyright Amendment (Digital Agenda) Act 2000 and Australian Copyright Council information sheets • access to an environment where copyright information can be applied and copyright ownership discussed • access to appropriate personnel to check copyright legislation • access to appropriate technology to source copyright information and prepare copyright documentation • access to appropriate learning and assessment support when required • use of culturally appropriate processes and techniques appropriate to the language and literacy capacity of learners and the work being performed.
Method of assessment	The following assessment methods are appropriate for this unit: • direct observation of the candidate obtaining permission to use copyright material • case studies to assess ability to identify sources of information on copyright • written and verbal questioning or interview to test knowledge of the sources of information and the role

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to manage and exploit individual or collaborative copyright arrangements. This unit is related to CUFCMP301A Implement copyright arrangements. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit addresses the management and exploitation of copyright arrangements, including assigning and licensing rights and ensuring copyright is protected locally and internationally. It has application to people involved in exploiting original works, including literary works, computer programs, compilations, artistic works, dramatic works, musical works, cinematograph films, sound recordings, broadcasts, photographs, photographic imagery and published works. This unit is appropriate for artists, artists' managers, agents, industry managers, legal representatives, music licensers and music publishers.

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills

• numeracy skills sufficient to negotiate fees and to determine the term of a copyright licence
• literacy skills sufficient to interpret relevant legislation and to complete copyright documentation
• communication skills sufficient to:
  • negotiate deals and achieve agreed outcomes
  • interpret the needs and rights of relevant parties
  • explain the difference between assignment and licensing of copyright
  • explain the difference between performing/mechanical/synchronisation rights and communicating to the public rights
• teamwork skills sufficient to work with relevant parties when negotiating deals
• problem solving skills sufficient to solve problems arising from negotiating deals
• technology skills sufficient to use documentation systems for preparing formal contracts and recording/storing copyright agreements

Required knowledge
• copyright, intellectual property and licensing legislation relevant to managing and exploiting copyright arrangements • industry organisations dealing with copyright, intellectual property and licensing • recognised procedures to determine copyright ownership • function of the Australian Copyright Council as it relates to own work context • function of copyright collection societies as they relate to copyright exploitation • copyright conventions in relation to intellectual property (using, producing and protecting), publishing and new technology.

EVIDENCE GUIDE
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to copyright, intellectual property and licensing legislation, including the Copyright Act 1968 and Copyright Amendment (Digital Agenda) Act 2000 • access to an environment where original work can be commercially exploited under copyright • access to reliable legal advice where required • access to appropriate technology to prepare copyright documentation • access to appropriate learning and assessment support when required • use of culturally appropriate processes and techniques appropriate to the language and literacy capacity of learners and the work being performed.
Method of assessment	The following assessment methods are appropriate for this unit: • direct observation of the candidate managing and exploiting copyright arrangements • case studies to assess ability to research commercial exploitation opportunities • written and verbal questioning or interview to test knowledge of assigning and licensing of copyright • problem solving activities to assess ability to solve problems arising from negotiating deals • review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance.

CUFDIG302A Author interactive sequences

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to use an authoring tool to produce discrete interactive sequences. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	People responsible for developing small components to be integrated into a larger project apply the skills and knowledge described in this unit. They could be working under the direction of an interactive author or programmer to produce several web pages, or a sequence of screens for other forms of delivery. They need to draw on technical assistance from a programmer or other technical support personnel to produce sequences for server side technologies. In all cases, they are collaborating with other members of a team and need a sound understanding of the project on which they are working. More complex skills associated with authoring are covered in: • CUFDIG401A Author interactive media • CUFDIG404A Apply scripting language in authoring.

	• preferences/options • restoration of colour (e.g. ROC) • scaling • sharpening • source image type • tones, contrast, colour cast, saturation.
Digital camera features may include:	• aperture • automatic, program or manual settings • batteries • colour, target, working space • compatibility with hardware and digital imaging software • exposure compensation • file format • flash, fill flash • lens focal lengths, such as wide angle, close-up and telephoto • menu functions • resolution - megapixels • shutter speed • size and type of memory card(s) • subject modes • white balance.
Photographic techniques may include:	• composition • depth of field • dynamic range • field of view • framing • lighting.

Digital imaging software may include:	• a wide range of programs, e.g.:
	  • Adobe Photoshop
	  • Adobe Photoshop Elements
	  • Adobe Photoshop Lightroom
	  • Apple Aperture
	  • Corel Paint Shop Pro
	  • Corel PhotoPaint
	  • GNU Image Manipulation Program (GIMP and GIMPshop).

Manipulating digital images may	• appending text/type for files and captions

CUFDIG401A Author interactive media

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	People in this role need a sound understanding of mark-up languages (HTML and XML). In addition, they need to be familiar enough with scripting languages to use script libraries in authoring software to provide interactive features. Authors work primarily on client-side technologies. In the construction of dynamic websites, for example, they develop the templates, themes and style sheets for the programmers and technical support team to integrate into the database and install on a web server. Authors also develop forms and form objects, but the scripting for form processing is provided by programmers. Authors may also use a variety of authoring software to produce complex interactions such as digital simulations, games and puzzles. In interactive media development, authors are working with a team, including user interface designers, interactive

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication and literacy skills sufficient to interpret and clarify written or verbal instructions
- ability to work as a member of a production team - both independently on assignment and under direction
- technical skills sufficient to:
  - correctly interpret design briefs, and design and technical specifications
  - proficiently use appropriate authoring and graphics software
  - seamlessly integrate and optimise a range of media assets to highest levels of technical performance
  - create and apply style sheets, templates or themes to conform with W3CAccessibility standards as they apply to client-side technology
  - manage files and directories using standard naming conventions and version control protocols
- initiative and flexibility in the context of troubleshooting and solving problems as

• self-management and planning skills sufficient to:
  • prioritise work tasks
  • meet deadlines
  • seek expert assistance as required

Required knowledge

• scope and applicability of industry-standard authoring software
• technical requirements for integrating digital content for use on a range of delivery platforms, including:
  • animation
  • graphics
  • text
  • video
  • audio
• user-centred design principles
• design principles of layout and composition
• industry knowledge, including:
  • roles and responsibilities of project team members, e.g. designers, content creators, information architects, programmers and coders
  • sound understanding of the relationship between technical and creative aspects and requirements of interactive media projects
  • sound knowledge of the features of a range of delivery platforms

EVIDENCE GUIDE

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential:
	• development of an integrated and fully functional interactive media product that:
	  • conforms to design specifications
	  • meets W3C Accessibility standards
	  • demonstrates creativity in design solutions
	• collaborative approach to work.

Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access toa range of resources, equipment and current industry-standard software as listed in the range statement • access to appropriate learning and assessment support when required • use of culturally appropriate processes and techniques appropriate to the language and literacy capacity of learners and the work being performed.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • CUFDIG404A Apply scripting language in authoring • ICAU4207B Apply web authoring tool to convert client data for websites.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to design user interfaces for interactive media products. Prototype testing of interfaces with, for example, focus groups, is a key aspect of the role. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit requires the application of visual communication principles to the design of user interfaces that form part of interactive media products, such as web environments, games or e-learning resources. People in this role respond to clearly defined briefs. They work collaboratively in a team environment where the expertise of other team members, e.g. designers and programmers, contributes to the final specifications for user interface designs. More complex skills associated with the testing and design of whole interactive media products are covered in: • CUFDIG501A Coordinate the testing of interactive media products • CUFDIG502A Design web environments • CUFDIG503A Design e-learning resources

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to create a user interface for an interactive media product. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	A person who applies the skills and knowledge outlined in this unit works to technical and creative specifications provided by a user interface designer or other designers. There is scope for individual creativity because a person in this role is expected to generate a range of design options that respond to concepts documented in design specifications. However, these ideas need to demonstrate a sound understanding of user-centred design principles, as well as comply with standards that apply to the specific platforms on which the user interface will be run. This work is undertaken with some supervision or guidance. Skills associated with designing user interfaces are covered in: • CUFDIG402A Design user interfaces.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to design web environments. A web environment may consist of one or many web applications and technologies integrated in various combinations. The design is focused on how these applications and technologies are combined and used, and the way in which interactive content is accessed by users. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	A person in this role works with clients to develop design specifications for web environments. Other specialised designers, graphic artists and programmers working as a team undertake the development of design specifications. Higher order skills associated with developing and documenting concepts that could be used as the basis for design specifications are covered in: • BSBCRT501A Originate and develop concepts.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
Determine project requirements	1. Analyse project brief to identify purpose of, and target audience for, web environments 2. Consult with clients to clarify project requirements 3. Identify target audience characteristics and determine how these influence all aspects of design 4. Identify content to be incorporated and generated and how this content is to be accessed, searched or delivered
Research and select web	5. Research web environments and analyse their potential

environments	6. Analyse how these web environments meet audience and content requirements 7. Identify issues relating to delivery platform and standards, and determine how these may affect web environment options 8. Consult relevant personnel to ensure that all possible web environment options are considered 9. Select web environments that will meet creative, production and technical requirements
Draft design specifications	10. Design the architecture of web environments to show interrelationship between environment components 11. Identify each web environment and specify its individual interactive features, functionality and navigation and its relationship to design as a whole 12. Identify content components and specify how these will be logically structured and integrated into and/or generated by web environments 13. Specify levels of access permissions to web environments as required 14. Specify media assets as required 15. Specify user interfaces of web environments 16. Specify production requirements, including appropriate testing strategies 17. Write draft design specifications to include all relevant advice to design and development teams 18. Discuss draft design specifications with client to ensure designs are consistent with project briefs
Review and confirm design specifications	19. Review designs against required project outcomes, as well as client and audience needs 20. Review designs to ensure they meet creative and technical requirements 21. Adjust designs as necessary after discussions with relevant personnel 22. Clarify legislative or ownership issues to comply with production and organisational requirements 23. Confirm with client acceptance of design specifications, including deliverables, milestones and timelines

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication, teamwork and literacy skills sufficient to:
  - interpret and clarify written proposals and creative briefs
  - work collaboratively in a team environment
  - present ideas for the design of web environments for discussion and feedback from team members
  - clearly and concisely document specifications for the design of web environments
- initiative, enterprise and creativity in the context of:
  - generating ideas for the design of web environments
  - thinking laterally when developing concepts
  - undertaking background research into web environments
  - maintaining design integrity
  - finding solutions to problems encountered when designing web environments
  - finding ways to minimise the effect of technical constraints
  - ensuring there is an intuitive and logical flow to the navigation of web environments
- technical skills sufficient to create storyboards, maps and other diagrams to specify the architecture and navigation of web environments
- self-management skills sufficient to:
  - meet deadlines
  - provide appropriate and timely documentation

Required knowledge

- industry knowledge, including:
  - roles and responsibilities of project team members, e.g. designers, content creators, information architects, programmers and coders
  - sequence and interrelationship of stages in the process of developing web environments
  - broad range of web applications and technologies
  - web design and its relationship to web optimisation strategies
  - web standards, including SCORM, usability, W3C Accessibility and interoperability
  - issues and challenges that arise in designing and developing web environments
- typical formats and techniques for documenting the design of web environments
- OHS standards as they relate to working for periods of time on computers

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential:
	• design specifications for web environments that:
	  • are well documented and clearly presented
	  • meet client and audience requirements
	  • are technically feasible
	• ability to work effectively as a member of a production team.

Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • practical demonstration of skills through the design of web environments for at least two projects • access to project briefs on which designs can be based • access to appropriate learning and assessment support when required • use of culturally appropriate processes and techniques appropriate to the language and literacy capacity of learners and the work being performed.

	for web environments to team members and explaining how it meets requirements • written or oral questioning to test knowledge as listed in the required skills and knowledge section of this unit.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • CUFDIG505A Design information architecture • CUFPPM404A Create storyboards.

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Purpose may include:	• business and corporate • community • education • entertainment • government • information and news • knowledge management • personal • promotion • training.

Project requirements may include:	• access to facilities and resources
	• budget
	• deliverables • milestones
	• personnel, including:
	  • number
	  • availability
	  • expertise prototyping

Audience characteristics may include:	• computer literacy
	• demographics, such as:
	  • age
	  • gender • education
	  • occupation
	  • location
	  • cultural background
	• hobbies
	• interests
	• internet literacy
	• language, literacy and numeracy
	• personas
	• specific needs - physical or psychological.

Web environments may include one or combinations of:	• audio streaming • blog • chat • conferencing tool • content learning management system (CLMS) • content management system (CMS) • database repository • discussion forum • dynamic website • electronic newsletter • interactive calendar • interactive form • learning management system (LMS) • podcast • RSS feed • static website • TiVo • video streaming • other online collaboration and social network

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to repair and maintain production equipment used in the screen, media and entertainment industries. In some States and Territories of Australia, a restricted electrical licence is required to repair and maintain production equipment. Restricted electrical licences allow a person to carry out electrical work incidental to a trade. Incidental work may include fault-finding on equipment or changing like for like equipment by disconnecting and reconnecting the fixed wiring. It does not include any other changes to the fixed wiring. Testing and tagging of electrical equipment must be carried out by a person with the relevant certificate of competency in accordance with the performance specifications of: • Australian Standard 3760: 200 In-service safety inspection and testing of electrical equipment • Australian Standard 3002: 1985 Electrical installations - shows and carnivals In some States and Territories a licensed electrician would be required to undertake the tasks outlined in element 2.

Application of the Unit

	a technical director or senior production staff, they are responsible for basic repairs and maintenance of equipment and facilities needed for a wide range of productions. Complex repairs requiring specific mechanical, electrical or electronic skills are referred to specialist service technicians, e.g. major electrical repairs are carried out by licensed electricians.

Undertake routine maintenance of equipment	1. Clean and maintain equipment, cables and accessories according to organisational procedures 2. Conduct safety checks on equipment according to manufacturer instructions and OHS guidelines 3. Check and replace spares and consumables and ensure production equipment is ready and available to productions at specified locations 4. Complete required documentation to ensure accurate records of checked and maintained items, and provide copies to relevant personnel
Attend to the repair of production equipment	5. Recognise faults and safely shut down equipment if necessary, following manufacturer instructions and organisational procedures 6. Isolate fault to specific equipment or parts of equipment using fault detection procedures, and determine nature of repair requirements 7. Tag faulty production equipment according to organisational procedures 8. Make minor repairs to faulty equipment according to safety requirements and manufacturer instructions and within level of own responsibility 9. Refer complex repairs to technical specialists or licensed personnel in consultation with relevant personnel 10. Where appropriate, have technical specialists pilot the repair from a remote location 11. Discuss faults and repair needs with technical specialists, demonstrating correct use of terminology
Review and document maintenance activity	12. Undertake simple modifications to equipment, ensuring current safety measures and deadlines are met 13. Complete documentation according to organisational procedures and distribute to relevant personnel as required 14. Review repair and maintenance activities to ensure compliance with legislation and organisational procedures

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- technical skills sufficient to:
  - test for and diagnose faults in equipment
  - undertake minor repairs on faulty equipment
  - conduct general maintenance of equipment
  - re-assemble equipment under repair and re-align as required
  - tag or label equipment according to its repair status
  - use safe electrical work practices
  - use appropriate tools for detecting and repairing faults
  - demonstrate good equipment storage techniques to enhance overall maintenance
- self-management and planning skills sufficient to work under pressure and meet deadlines
- literacy skills sufficient to:
  - interpret service documentation and manuals, e.g. specifications and manufacturer instructions
  - complete fault and maintenance reports
- communication skills sufficient to:
  - work effectively as a team member
  - liaise with technical specialists
  - provide reports to relevant personnel on equipment status

Required knowledge

- typical maintenance needs and schedules for the range of equipment in use
- cleaning agents, equipment and techniques
- techniques and processes for the detection of faults for specified equipment
- common faults and associated repair procedures for the range of equipment in use
- spare parts and sub-assemblies used in either sound, lighting or vision equipment repair and maintenance
- effects of not operating and maintaining equipment in optimal conditions, e.g.effect of bad ventilation on equipment
- meaning and use of electrical measurements, including voltage, current resistance, insulation and power sources (AC/DC)
- legal and licensing issues that impact on the repair and maintenance of equipment, including the role of the restricted electrical licence, testing and tagging certification, and limitations on the type of work that can be undertaken without a licence

• sources of products, supplies and equipment • affect of technology on production equipment • duty of care to colleagues and general public • OHS and public safety legislation and regulations as they apply to technical maintenance activities

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • practical demonstration of skills within an environment with a range of operational and industry-current equipment on which the candidate can work • completion of fault detection, repair and maintenance tasks within typical workplace time constraints • access to a venue where repairs and maintenance can be completed • access to the tools required to complete repair and maintenance tasks • access to appropriate learning and assessment support

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to develop and apply basic industry practices within the creative arts industries. This unit addresses the collection, application and updating of general information relevant to work roles within the creative arts industry sectors, including industry structures and operations, employment obligations and opportunities, the impact of new technology and the identification of industry laws and regulations. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit underpins effective performance within the following industry sectors: • Entertainment • Film, Television, Radio and Interactive Media • Museums and Library Services • Music • Visual Arts, Craft and Design. This unit requires a basic application of creative arts industry knowledge. The advanced application of creative arts industry knowledge is addressed in individual units developed for specific job tasks.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Context of and specific resources for assessment	This unit of competency applies to a range of creative arts industry sectors. The focus of assessment will therefore depend on the industry sector involved. Assessment must be customised to meet the needs of the particular industry sector in which performance is being assessed. Assessment should only address those variable circumstances, listed in the range statement, which apply to the chosen context. Assessment must ensure: • access to appropriate technology to collect, download and store industry information • access to a range of relevant and current industry information • access to appropriate learning and assessment support when required • use of culturally appropriate processes and techniques appropriate to the language and literacy

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to work in a team environment in the film, broadcasting and digital media industries.

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

People working in a wide range of occupations in the screen and media industries apply the skills and knowledge described in this unit. They could be working in program production, program presentation, administration, studio operations, broadcast technology, online services, film and sound archives, graphics, scenic art, props, set construction, wardrobe, or technical operations such as lighting, camera and sound.

Production teams vary in size from a few people to hundreds, depending on the scale of productions. All team members need a basic understanding of stages in the production process, as well as the roles and responsibilities of personnel involved in the production chain. They also need to understand the culture of the organisation for which they are working, whether their job is permanent or on a contract basis for the duration of a production.

Even though people at the level described in this unit work under supervision, they are expected to demonstrate a range of well-developed skills requiring some discretion and judgement.

More complex skills associated with working as a freelancer are covered in:

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to install and test lighting equipment for productions in the film, television and live events industries. Testing and tagging of electrical equipment must be carried out by a person with the relevant certificate of competency according to the performance specifications of: • Australian Standard 3760: 2000 In-service safety inspection and testing of electrical equipment • Australian Standard 3002: 1985 Electrical installations - shows and carnivals. In some states and territories, a licensed electrician is required to undertake the tasks outlined in the fifth element. A licensed rigger is required for the installation of some rigging equipment.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	Lighting technicians or lighting assistants generally undertake the role described in this unit under the supervision of a lighting designer, technical director or senior lighting technician. They install and test equipment according to a lighting plan. On some productions and outside broadcasts, a qualified

Clarify lighting requirements for productions	1. Confirm overall lighting requirements with reference to lighting documentation and in consultation with relevant production personnel 2. Calculate power requirements and identify and confirm that power sources and locations meet production requirements 3. Correctly identify patching, colour and focus requirements 4. Identify the need for additional equipment or materials and organise timely acquisition according to enterprise procedures
Prepare lighting equipment for installation	5. Use test equipment to identify faults and to ensure lighting equipment is safe and operational 6. Refer complex repairs to technical specialists according to enterprise procedures 7. Prepare and assemble colour, equipment and accessories in readiness for installation and or transportation when required 8. Pre-rig lighting equipment as required according to safety and licensing requirements 9. Prepare and/or roll extension leads, looms and cables to meet design specifications, enterprise standards and legal requirements
Install lighting	10. Install required rigging and accessories according to statutory and enterprise safety requirements 11. Test, install and hang lanterns and accessories according to the lighting plan, scale and manufacturer specifications 12. Install power supplies according to lighting plans, location standards, manufacturer specifications and safety regulations 13. Patch lanterns and accessories according to lighting or patch plans 14. Safely and neatly secure and correctly label rated cabling so that it is clear of moving elements 15. Angle and focus lanterns according to lighting plans and artistic requirements 16. Check the safety of equipment both during and after installation according to legal requirements
Install lighting control	17. Correctly connect dimmers to power, assign and turn on

system	18. Install and configure control desk and peripherals according to production requirements 19. Run and connect control cables and secure safely 20. Patch lanterns and channels to dimmers according to lighting or patch plan sheets and location procedures/conditions
Ensure electrical safety	21. Complete installation and testing according to legislative and OHS requirements 22. Check three-phase distribution and power calculations in collaboration with licensed electricians as required 23. Check that power supply is sufficient for load requirements and that distribution of electrical loading is within limits 24. Ensure that cables used are correctly rated, including three-phase cable to dimmers, and that three-phase supplies are balanced 25. Ensure that cabling and connectors meet legislative and OHS requirements
Test and adjust lighting	26. Test all aspects of lighting, including communication system, control desk and peripherals using appropriate techniques and according to safety requirements 27. Identify the need for adjustments and make modifications accordingly 28. Liaise with appropriate production personnel to confirm that lighting installation meets requirements 29. Complete lighting documentation accurately, legibly and concisely and make updates as required
Disassemble lighting equipment	30. Break down and carry lighting equipment and accessories, employing safe lifting techniques 31. Clean and safely pack equipment into cases to avoid damage and prepare for transport as required 32. Report and document equipment that is damaged and requires maintenance to the relevant production personnel 33. Leave the worksite in the original or improved condition

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication, literacy and teamwork skills sufficient to:
  - work effectively as a member of a production team
  - interpret lighting plans
  - interpret written and verbal instructions
- organisational and planning skills sufficient to assemble and test lighting equipment in a logical sequence
- initiative in the context of making practical suggestions that result in minor modifications to lighting plans
- technical skills sufficient to:
  - use tools and test equipment necessary to install and maintain lighting equipment
  - use different types of light-measuring devices
  - operate and interpret information readouts from a colour temperature meter
- numeracy skills sufficient to:
  - make mathematical calculations necessary for the safe assembly, installation and testing of equipment, e.g. power requirements, binary calculations for setting DMX dip switches
  - use a scale ruler

Required knowledge

- industry knowledge, including:
  - roles and responsibilities of production personnel
  - industry terminology relevant to lighting operations
  - issues and challenges that arise in the context of installing and testing lighting equipment
  - format of lighting plans and the meaning of different components, including an understanding of scale, position and orientation
- different types of hardware used for lighting installation, e.g. screws, nuts, bolts
- types of lanterns, lighting systems, control systems, and lighting accessories and their relevance to different types of production
- the range of colour gels available and the way in which different colours are used in lighting, including the relationship between colour and light
- techniques for rigging and hanging lighting equipment within licensing requirements
- basic principles of lighting, e.g. key, fill and back light
- relevant workers' compensation and OHS legislation
- safety regulations and industry safety codes that affect the installation of lighting

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • application of a range of technical lighting knowledge and manual techniques to the installation of lighting equipment so that the lighting set-up meets production and safety requirements • application of safe working practices when installing lighting equipment • ability to work cooperatively in a team environment.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • practical demonstration of skills through the installation and testing of lighting equipment for an actual production • completion of tasks within workplace time constraints • involvement of and interaction with a team to reflect the collaborative nature of the technical production process • use of industry-standard equipment • access to a lighting plan from which the candidate is able to work • access to a production and production venue • access to a range of lighting equipment and accessories as identified in the range statement • access to appropriate learning and assessment support when required • use of culturally appropriate processes and techniques appropriate to the language and literacy capacity of learners and the work being performed.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

EVIDENCE GUIDE
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • CUFLGT302A Record and operate standard lighting cues • CUSOHS301A Follow occupational health and safety procedures.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
Lighting documentation may include:	• building specifications, room layouts • carnet (for international travel) hire or loan contracts • colour cutting/coding schedules • colour list • colour lists, plots • cue synopsis • equipment instructions and/or manufacturer instructions and specifications

	• theatre productions.
Test equipment may include:	• analogue or digital multimeters • continuity tester • DMX cable tester • test lamps.

Lighting equipment may include:	• architectural fixtures
	• digital moving lights (intelligent lights)
	• lanterns
	• special effects units, e.g.:
	  • electrical/electronic props
	  • strobes, mirror balls and motors, smoke machines, fog machines
	  • ultraviolet light, oil and water crackers, effects projectors
	• studio and location units
	• theatre-based units.

Rigging and accessories may include:	• boom arms • chain blocks/motors and other rigging equipment installed by a licensed rigger • hook clamps • H-stands • mobile booms • safety chains • scaffold clamps • spansets, slings, shackles • spigots • T-bars • telescopic stands • truss • winch-up stands.

Lanterns and accessories may include:	• lanterns and luminaires, e.g.:
	  • fresnel
	  • profile
	  • HMI (hydrargyrum medium arc-length iodide)
	  • plasma, e.g. fluorescent
	  • theatre-based units

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to operate a lighting console by plotting and modifying standard lighting cues. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	Lighting technicians or lighting assistants in the film, television or live performance industries apply the skills and knowledge described in this unit. In this largely operational role, lighting assistants are required to plot, record and modify lighting cues based on a lighting plan supplied to them by a supervising senior lighting technician or lighting designer. Operators must be familiar with the functions and set-up of lighting consoles and associated peripheral equipment. Skills associated with operating more complex cues and working with advanced equipment are covered in: • CUFLGT402A Set up, record and operate lighting cues and effects.

Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
Record, modify and replay lighting cues	1. Identify the functions of controls on consoles, including function of the unit displaying data and controls to produce text 2. Undertake channel selection and intensity setting, then identify on display unit and make appropriate modifications 3. Record cue numbers and fade/wait times according to lighting plan, identify these on display unit and make appropriate modifications 4. Identify recorded cues on display unit after playing them in correct sequence and time 5. Create, modify and replay group and sub-groups in correct sequence and time using relevant controls correctly and then identify on display unit

Test facilities in preparation for plotting lighting cues	6. Ensure that working area is clear, tidy, properly illuminated, and relevant documentation is easily accessible 7. Check communication equipment and ensure that it is in working order 8. Power up dimmers, control desk and control desk peripherals using safe working practices 9. Use appropriate test equipment to ensure lights and accessories and general operating environment meets manufacturer operational and safety specifications 10. Test lighting instruments, accessories and other lighting elements to ensure all items are in correct working order 11. Test venue lighting to ensure it is fully operational and in a safe condition 12. Identify problems with equipment promptly and take appropriate action, or refer to relevant personnel as required
Plot and operate lighting cues	13. Check instructions and lighting plan to verify practicality before plotting and check again once plotted 14. Test line of sight needed for visual cues for feasibility during performance 15. Action cues without delay according to directions and production needs 16. Complete cue modifications according to instructions and accurately update appropriate documentation 17. Establish suitable back-up lighting states in the event of the failure of those recorded 18. Store recorded lighting cues and other data electronically on device external to main lighting console 19. Identify and rectify problems safely and according to venue procedures, or refer to relevant personnel
Conduct basic troubleshooting	20. Identify the nature of faults and locate promptly 21. Assess the need for remedial action taking into consideration safety issues and the need for uninterrupted performance

	22. Follow manufacturer diagnostic and remedial procedures according to enterprise policy 23. Report fault to relevant personnel if fault cannot be immediately rectified, providing relevant information 24. Liaise with relevant personnel to identify back-up alternatives if fault cannot be rectified before next production deadline
Carry out post-performance procedures	25. Correctly power down equipment or set to standby between performances as required 26. Store and/or cover controls according to enterprise procedures 27. Make accurate changes to documentation and file according to enterprise procedures

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication, literacy and teamwork skills sufficient to:
  - work effectively with other technicians and designers
  - interpret lighting plan requirements
  - interpret equipment and production documentation, including back-up systems used in conjunction with lighting control
- problem solving skills sufficient to identify operational problems with lighting consoles
- technical skills sufficient to:
  - operate computer-based lighting consoles
  - undertake routine maintenance of lighting consoles and peripherals
- self-management skills sufficient to work within production deadlines
- numeracy skills sufficient to complete simple mathematical calculations and recall numbers for channel selection

Required knowledge

- general lighting terms, including:
  - how terms may vary between different systems
  - how different terms can refer to the same functions on different systems

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

• industry terminology and protocols in relation to the operation of lighting in the relevant industry environment
• lighting control concepts used in a range of lighting systems
• features and operations (optical and mechanical) of the main types of lanterns, e.g.:
  • profile
  • fresnel
  • PC
  • flood
  • PAR (parabolic aluminised reflector) lamps
  • lantern accessories
• understanding of the basic elements of lighting design
• colour recognition in display equipment
• DMX distribution techniques, including allocation of channels
• basic understanding of electricity and safe electrical work practices
• OHS legislation and regulations as they apply to operations associated with lighting activities

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to install and operate follow spots for productions in the screen, media and entertainment industries. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	Lighting technicians or lighting assistants in the screen, media and entertainment industries apply the skills and knowledge described in this unit. Within this largely operational role, follow spot operators need to exhibit a degree of artistic flair, including an ability to empathise with performers and modify follow spot cues quickly and effectively to accommodate unexpected movements during productions. Follow spot operators work with other members of a production team and are typically supervised by a senior lighting technician or lighting designer.

Participate in technical or creative run-throughs	9. Participate in technical or creative run-throughs as required, noting required equipment deficiencies or technical adjustments 10. Rehearse technical aspects of production and communicate to performers and relevant personnel as required 11. Set back-up options in the event of an equipment malfunction and test to ensure that they are in working order 12. Plot and run through cues on direction from relevant personnel and according to equipment, sequencing, timing and speed requirements 13. Make necessary changes to cues and modify cue sheets as required 14. Execute necessary changes to equipment according to modifications required
Prepare for follow spot operations	15. Power up follow spots and check height, balance, sights, focus, operation of iris, operation of additional follow spot accessories and dimmer 16. Check colours and operation of colour changer 17. Check that final requirements for equipment operation have been identified, implemented and documented 18. Check communication equipment to ensure that it is in working order 19. Correctly identify and rectify faults or problems and inform relevant personnel of ongoing problems
Operate follow spots	20. Operate follow spots on cue or direction from relevant personnel or running sheet 21. Operate spots so that beam diameter, shape, edge, colour and intensity level meet performance requirements 22. Synchronise follow spot operation with other lighting and staging effects 23. Modify follow spot cues and operation as required to cater for unexpected contingencies and creative requirements 24. Operate spots in a manner that does not distract the audience and maintains reasonable comfort for the operator 25.   - interpret and update production documentation
- initiative and flexibility in the context of changing lighting cues quickly and effectively to accommodate unexpected movements by performers during productions
- problem solving skills sufficient to identify and rectify follow spot problems during productions with minimum disruption to work flows
- technical skills sufficient to:
  - demonstrate hand/eye coordination skills
  - operate follow spots and beam, and associated computer programs, including how to adjust for colour temperature
- self-management skills sufficient to work under pressure and meet deadlines

Required knowledge

- features and operations (optical and mechanical) of the main types of lanterns, e.g.:

CUFLGT304A Operate floor electrics

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	Experienced lighting technicians generally apply the skills and knowledge outlined in this unit. The operation of floor electrics is required for specific on-stage effects, which could involve both front and backstage lighting facilities. Cues for floor electrics are typically included in a lighting plan supplied to operators by a supervising senior lighting technician or lighting designer. More complex skills associated with setting up, recording and operating lighting cues are covered in: • CUFLGT402A Set up, record and operate lighting cues and effects.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
Participate in technical and creative run-throughs	1. Set floor electrics according to performance/production requirements 2. Integrate the operation of floor electrics into the run-through and advise relevant personnel of issues requiring attention 3. Plot, record, rehearse and execute cues on direction from relevant personnel 4. Set back-up systems for use in the event of equipment malfunction and test to ensure that they are in working order 5. Implement changes to cueing and modify cue sheets accurately as required
Prepare to operate floor	6. Identify, implement and document changes to floor electrics operation as required

Place floor electrics elements in stand-by position for the start of performances/productions according to safety and production requirements 10. Identify equipment requiring warm-up and turn on at the appropriate time 11. Check floor electrics elements to ensure that they are operating to specifications 12. Identify problems or faults promptly, take safe and appropriate action to rectify or report to relevant personnel 13. Isolate smoke detectors and check changes to air-conditioning as required 14. Check that cables are run safely and neatly
Operate floor electrics	15. Execute floor electrics changes on cue according to running sheets, directions and the requirements of the performance/production and/or venue 16. Check cables to ensure correct setting 17. Make modifications to floor electrics cues when required, to cater for unexpected contingencies, and inform relevant personnel 18. Identify problems or faults promptly, take safe and appropriate action to rectify or report to relevant personnel 19. Use back-up systems correctly when required
Shut down and disassemble equipment	20. Turn off power to floor electrics elements or set to standby as required 21. Reset smoke detectors and air-conditioning as required 22. Prepare and position floor electrics elements correctly for use as required, or return equipment to stand-by 23. Make accurate updates on cue sheets and other documentation and file according to enterprise procedures

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills

• effective communication, literacy and teamwork skills sufficient to:
  • work with other technicians and designers in a production environment
  • interpret lighting plans
  • interpret equipment and production documentation, including back-up systems used in conjunction with lighting control
• problem solving skills, particularly in relation to installation and operation of floor electrics
• technical skills sufficient to operate floor electrics in a range of production environments

Required knowledge

• industry knowledge, including:
  • roles and responsibilities of personnel in the relevant industry sector
  • major types of floor electrics equipment and their uses in different production contexts
  • lighting terminology, particularly in relation to the operation of floor electrics
  • relationship of floor electrics to other lighting and staging effects
  • impact of technology on production operations
  • broad understanding of the artistic and technical elements of a production
• duty of care to colleagues and the general public, especially on location
• OHS procedures as they relate to the testing, installation and operation of floor electrics

competency in this unit	• applying safe procedures for working with electricity • communicating effectively with colleagues and clients within the range of situations defined for the job role.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • demonstration of skills in operating floor electrics for an actual performance on more than one occasion • demonstration of skills in multiple performance contexts and with different types of floor electrics • involvement of and interaction with a team to reflect the collaborative nature of the technical production process • use of industry-standard equipment • access to a venue with the capacity for floor electrics operation • access to floor electrics equipment • access to cueing and other production documentation from which floor electrics are operated • access to a production on which the candidate can work • access to appropriate learning and assessment support when required • use of culturally appropriate processes and techniques appropriate to the language and literacy capacity of learners and the work being performed.

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Performances*/*productions may include:	• animations • documentaries • feature films • interactive media productions • live concerts, e.g. rock concerts, open-air concerts/events • music videos • stage productions, e.g. plays, musicals • television productions.
Relevant personnel may include:	• director • director of photography • gaffer • lighting designer • performers/actors • producer • production manager • senior lighting technician • stage manager • supervisor • technical director • other technical/specialist staff.
Consumables may include:	• connectors • gaffer tape

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills

• communication, teamwork and organisational skills sufficient to:
  • arrange film, television and interactive media content logically and accurately
  • liaise with relevant production personnel, e.g. editors, directors
  • understand and follow instructions as required
• technical skills sufficient to:
  • edit simple image and audio sequences and segments, including dialogue
  • digitise pre-recorded content, e.g. film, analogue video
  • follow relevant file management protocols for specified operating systems
• self-management skills sufficient to:
  • prioritise work tasks
  • meet deadlines

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to a range of pre-recorded films and videos • availability of a range of editing facilities - non-broadcast and broadcast • exposure to a range of computer software for editing and documentation of image and audio • access to appropriate learning and assessment support when required • use of culturally appropriate processes and techniques appropriate to the language and literacy capacity of learners and the work being performed.

Unit Descriptor

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	The skills and knowledge outlined in this unit are typically applied by a person working in a large enterprise on projects or productions that require a wide range of media assets. They work directly with asset creators (audio, video, graphics) to ensure that the asset management system accommodates their needs. Though reporting to a producer or manager, a person in this role works with a fair degree of autonomy. They are responsible for setting up the conventions for file naming, sourcing, sorting and storing formal documents and media assets, and recording project or production details. They also set up systems to manage these assets effectively. The systems may need to be built by other personnel within the enterprise or production.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	Post-production supervisors in film and media industry sectors apply the skills and knowledge described in this unit. Major duties include the supervision of editing personnel and the acquisition of post-production resources. In larger productions, supervisors may be involved in planning and scheduling at the pre-production phase, especially where complex computer generated images (CGIs) are required. As a rule, post-production supervisors are employed on a freelance basis, reporting to producers and production managers. The position is pivotal in ensuring the post-production process is achieved within budget and on time. Post-production supervisors may employ an assistant and

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills

• communication skills sufficient to:
  • interact effectively with people with diverse interests and needs
  • show strong leadership qualities and work closely with team members
  • conduct effective negotiations with a wide range of production personnel, and external suppliers and service providers
  • coordinate production meetings and brief staff to achieve required outcomes
• well-developed planning and organisational skills sufficient to coordinate all aspects of post-production
• well-developed project management skills covering both physical and human resources
• ability to address and resolve problems and challenges in a timely and collaborative manner
• self-management skills sufficient to:
  • work under pressure
  • provide appropriate and timely post-production documentation
  • meet post-production deadlines
  • evaluate own performance
• initiative and flexibility when responding to unexpected changes in the post-production schedule or process
• literacy skills sufficient to interpret written instructions, such as script requirements, and to prepare progress reports
• numeracy skills sufficient to interpret, monitor and adjust budgets and cost estimates

Required knowledge
• meeting procedures and protocols as they relate to post-production operations • artistic and technical elements associated with post-production for film and media productions sufficient to coordinate all aspects of post-production

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

• well-developed understanding of:
  • administrative procedures associated with running a post-production operation
  • content, format and timing of different types of documentation developed and distributed by a production supervisor
• duty of care to colleagues and general public
• industry knowledge, including:
  • structure of the relevant industry sector
  • roles and responsibilities of personnel
  • current industry practices, e.g. industrial awards, workers' compensation and contracts
  • filmic language and other relevant terminology, as required
  • sources of products, supplies and equipment
  • impact of technology on production and post-production operations
  • phases and practices in the production and post-production process, including problems and challenges that arise
• OHS and public safety legislation and regulations as they apply to post-production

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to post-production activities across a range of formats, e.g. film, video and interactive media • access to a selection of post-production resources and equipment as listed in the range statement • opportunities to work with and manage a team of editors and other specialist staff • access to appropriate learning and assessment support when required • use of culturally appropriate processes and techniques appropriate to the language and literacy capacity of learners and the work being performed.

Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance • review of post-production documentation prepared by the candidate • discussion with the candidate about the management of the post-production process, challenges faced and how these were overcome • written or oral questioning to test knowledge as listed in the required skills and knowledge section of this unit.

CUFSOU204A Perform basic sound editing

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to for basic digital sound editing. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	Assistant sound editors and production personnel in the community broadcasting sector apply the skills and knowledge described in this unit. They are responsible for preparing, organising and digitally editing relatively simple sound sequences or programs for radio, television, film and interactive media. They are expected to contribute to creative outcomes, including selection and acquisition of sound materials. In a production house environment, they typically work under the supervision of a picture editor or senior sound editor, and are often involved in editing both sound and vision. Combined editing skills at a basic level are covered in: • CUFPOS201A Perform basic vision and sound editing. More complex skills associated with editing sound, including dialogue, are covered in:

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication, teamwork and organisational skills sufficient to:
  - arrange sound media logically and accurately
  - liaise with relevant production personnel
  - understand and follow instructions
- technical skills sufficient to:
  - edit a range of audio sequences and segments
  - digitise pre-recorded content, e.g. digital and analogue audio, sound effects
  - change audio from one format to another
  - follow relevant file management protocols for specified operating systems
  - identify faults that occur in audio production environments
- initiative and enterprise in the context of editing sound to meet creative production requirements
- aural discrimination skills in the context of listening critically to, and enhancing the quality of, sound elements and sequences
- self-management skills sufficient to:
  - prioritise work tasks and meet deadlines
  - seek expert assistance when problems arise
- literacy and numeracy skills sufficient to:
  - identify and label accurately source materials and copies
  - read and interpret sound documentation and plans
  - implement and record codes and timings
  - document sound components, e.g. maintenance of logging sheets

Required knowledge

CUFSOU301A Prepare audio assets

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to prepare audio assets for inclusion in interactive media. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	The size of an enterprise or project determines who undertakes the role described in this unit. In a large-scale environment, the person responsible for this task would typically be supervised by an audio asset creator or audio engineer and an audio programmer or interactive media author. In a radio station, the prime focus of the task involves converting radio programs into podcast material or in a form appropriate to streaming or downloading, and this may be a dedicated role under the supervision of a producer. In a smaller enterprise or project, an audio programmer, interactive author or audio/sound engineer would absorb this task into their role. In all cases, they are collaborating closely with other team members.

	Skills associated with other aspects of audio/sound production at this level are covered in: • CUSSOU201A Assist with sound recordings • CUFSOU204A Perform basic sound editing.

	3. Identify the output purpose, destination and platform
	4. Discuss with relevant personnel the required output file format and audio codecs for specified bandwidths
	5. Discuss with relevant personnel the appropriate audio encoding software
Prepare audio assets	6. Open appropriate audio encoding software and load audio file
	7. Eliminate or treat defects on sound recordings
	8. Equalise sound output levels where necessary
	9. Ensure duration of audio sequences meets that required by the specification, and adjust if necessary
	10. Determine and apply appropriate audio codecs
	11. Batch optimise audio files where possible
	12. Save files in appropriate output file format using standard naming conventions
Package audio assets	13. Assign metadata tags if required
	14. Group files logically in folder system using standard naming conventions
	15. Store in share drive or repository for production team access

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills

• communication and literacy skills sufficient to interpret and clarify written or verbal instructions
• ability to work as a member of a production team, both independently on assignment and under direction
• technical skills sufficient to:
  • use audio software to prepare audio sequences for inclusion in interactive media
  • manage files using standard naming conventions
  • apply appropriate metadata tags to describe files
• self-management and planning skills sufficient to:
  • prioritise work tasks

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
• meet deadlines • seek expert assistance when problems arise
Required knowledge

• industry knowledge, including:
  • roles and responsibilities of project team members, e.g. designers, content creators, information architects, programmers and coders
  • basic understanding of the relationship between the technical and creative aspects and requirements of interactive media projects
  • features of a range of delivery platforms
  • basic understanding of what happens when audio files are compressed for inclusion in interactive media products
  • appropriate codecs for various platforms and destinations
  • digital audio source and output formats
  • equalisation techniques
• techniques for saving and preparing digital audio output to optimise file size
• OHS standards as they relate to working for periods of time on computers
• OHS principles of safe listening (including safeguards against hearing loss) techniques appropriate to the language and literacy capacity of learners and the work being performed.

Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • CUFDIG301A Prepare video assets.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT
The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Source file formats may include:	• WAV • AIFF • AU • MP3 • WMA • AAC (Apple lossless) • OGG.

Purposes may include:	• audio sequences, e.g.:

Unit Descriptor

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	Reporters at radio stations typically apply the skills and knowledge outlined in this unit. This work is usually assignment-based and clear instructions on production requirements are provided by supervising staff. On location, the reporter is typically responsible for setting up equipment and recording the audio material. During the editing process, the reporter has access to supervising staff to help resolve problems. REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication skills sufficient to:
  - interpret and clarify written or verbal instructions
  - ask basic questions clearly and confidently of interviewees
- ability to work as a member of a production team, both independently on assignment and under direction
- initiative and enterprise in the context of setting up recording equipment to optimise quality of recorded material
- technical skills sufficient to:
  - make simple adjustments to, and operate, basic audio recording equipment in a range of locations
  - use basic functions of digital editing software to produce audio material for broadcast
- literacy and numeracy skills sufficient to:
  - interpret written background information
  - complete workplace documentation
  - accurately label source materials and copies
  - time segments to meet production requirements
- self-management skills sufficient to:
  - work under pressure
  - meet deadlines
  - seek expert assistance when problems arise
- problem solving skills sufficient to anticipate and deal with minor equipment set-up problems

Required knowledge

- industry knowledge, including:
  - roles and responsibilities of personnel involved in the production process
  - issues and challenges that arise in the context of compiling audio material for broadcast
- techniques for:
  - recording audio in variable weather conditions
  - minimising the effect of background location noise while recording audio
- characteristics of commonly used microphones and portable audio recording equipment
- OHS requirements as they relate to recording audio material on location and working for periods of time on computers

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • access to a functional set of equipment based on items listed in the range statement. Equipment must be sufficient to enable the compilation of a portfolio of edited audio material recorded in different locations, including exterior and interior, and variable weather conditions • that the candidate demonstrates competency in recording and editing audio material in a production environment over a period of time • access to appropriate learning and assessment support when required • use of culturally appropriate processes and techniques appropriate to the language and literacy capacity of learners and the work being performed.

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to write content for a range of media. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	The person applying the skills and knowledge outlined in this unit could be expected to write both original and re-purposed non-narrative content for a range of media. The content could include such things as information for websites; community, news and promotional announcements for radio stations; organisation newsletters and audio or visual presentations. In larger organisations or in the development of e-learning resources, the person would usually be re-purposing material written by other writers or content experts. This work is usually undertaken with some supervision and guidance. The writing of narrative content is covered in: • CUFWRT302A Write simple stories.

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication, teamwork and literacy skills sufficient to:
  - interpret and clarify written or verbal instructions
  - write content in a style appropriate to target users and audience
  - communicate information to specific audiences
  - structure text-based content effectively for target audiences and delivery format
  - work collaboratively in a team environment - both independently on assignment and under direction
  - respond positively to constructive feedback
- conceptual skills sufficient to generate a range of text-based content ideas in response to a brief
- technical skills sufficient to:
  - proficiently use word processing tools
  - check and proofread written content using manual and automated systems
- self-management and planning skills sufficient to:
  - prioritise work tasks
  - source information and reference material in a timely fashion
  - meet deadlines
  - seek expert assistance when problems arise

Required knowledge

- industry knowledge, including:
  - roles and responsibilities of project team members
  - issues and challenges that arise when writing content
- understanding the way readers scan and read written material
- writing and communication principles for the relevant medium
- writing and presentation techniques for the relevant medium
- sound knowledge of grammar and punctuation
- media laws sufficient to identify defamation and obscenity and seek expert advice on issues that could lead to legal action
- copyright clearance procedures
- OHS as it relates to working for periods of time on computers

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • application of the principles of writing and communication to content written for a range of purposes • content written in a way that engages the target audience • sound knowledge of grammar and punctuation • collaborative approach to work • ability to work under pressure and meet deadlines.

Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure:
	• practical demonstration of skills by writing a range of content within timeframes typical in an industry context
	• access to:
	  • word processing software
	  • variety of information sources
	• access to appropriate learning and assessment support when required
	• use of culturally appropriate processes and techniques appropriate to the language and literacy capacity of learners and the work being performed.

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to edit written material. People in editorial roles refine and amend text to enhance the clarity of written communication. They may also be involved in making decisions about the placement of visual material in relation to text. When editing text, they take into account the needs of the readership, the author's intention, available resources and the type of publication. A thorough knowledge of grammar, syntax, spelling and punctuation is essential, along with an eye for detail and a systematic approach to work. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit covers the role of editors or subeditors working in contexts such as book publishing, magazines and journals, corporate, online media, government and not-for-profit organisations. It also covers the role of freelance editors. Even though people in this role work with a fair degree of autonomy, they report to a manager or, in the case of freelance editors, to a client.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to manage colour in a digital imaging workplace.

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit

This unit applies to any digital imaging industry where digital files are captured, acquired, created, manipulated, integrated, enhanced, output, managed and archived to a variety of media in which colour accuracy is integral.

This unit requires the self-directed application of skills and knowledge to research, evaluate, plan, coordinate and manage the accuracy, consistency and integrity of colour in born digital and hybrid (digitised/scanned film or print) workflows.

This work is usually undertaken autonomously (with guidance where required).

Licensing/Regulatory Information

Refer to Unit Descriptor

Pre-Requisites

Prerequisite units

The following units or demonstrated equivalence are required prior to undertaking this unit:

- CUFDIG303A Produce and prepare photo images
- CUFDIG304A Create visual design components.

Employability Skills Information

Employability skills

This unit contains employability skills.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.

Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

1 Research history and apply theory of colour in a digital imaging context.	1.1 Identify colour theories/theory as it applies to the digital imaging context using appropriate sources of information and standards. 1.2 Evaluate currency/credibility of information gathered and ensure research scope is sufficiently broad. 1.3 Examine how colour is created, defined and managed in contemporary digital imaging devices. 1.4 Investigate the areas of capture, display, output and archive spaces in contemporary digital imaging devices where colour management is critical to the production of a quality product.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

	1.5 Maintain accurate and comprehensive details of sources of information and standards.
2 Identify appropriate colour management systems and strategies and apply to a workplace.	2.1 Identify and select appropriate colour management systems and strategies for specific digital imaging devices. 2.2 Evaluate suitability of selected colour management systems and strategies in terms of relevance and cost efficiency. 2.3 Adopt and adapt selected colour management systems and strategies to digital workplace.
3 Review and update colour management strategies.	3.1 Review performance and assess impact of adapted colour management systems and strategies. 3.2 Develop systems to update and respond to future colour management systems and strategies as they arise from emerging technologies and workplace practices.

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills:

- research techniques sufficient to access information on colour theory and management
- literacy skills sufficient to interrogate/interpret a broad range of information on colour theory and management
- numeracy skills sufficient to understand numeric values and meaning against colour theory and how RGB, CMYK and LAB colour values are quantified
- communication skills sufficient to:
  - critique and discuss colour theory and management
  - use industry and community networks as sources of information
- critical thinking skills sufficient to identify best practice options and adopt/adapt

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

colour management strategies

- problem solving skills sufficient to:
  - recognise and resolve workplace issues when adopting/adapting colour management systems into digital workplace
  - solve colour issues
- learning skills sufficient to seek expert advice when adopting/adapting colour management strategies
- planning and organising skills sufficient to:
  - develop strategies to respond to future colour theory and management strategies
  - document research findings clearly and concisely
  - plan integration of colour management strategies into digital workplace practice
- technology skills sufficient to coordinate the installation of colour management systems.

Required knowledge:

- colour theories/theory and their application to colour management systems
- commonly used research methodologies
- current trends and emerging technologies in colour management systems
- OHS requirements relating to computer usage.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:

- ability to research colour theory and digital colour management systems/strategies
- ability to evaluate and adapt appropriate digital colour management systems/strategies
- ability to maintain and review digital colour management systems/strategies.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

EVIDENCE GUIDE

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure:

- access to appropriate technology and sources of information to research colour theory and digital colour management systems/strategies
- access to an environment where a range of digital imaging devices and colour management systems can be applied
- access to appropriate learning and assessment support when required
- the use of culturally appropriate processes, and techniques appropriate to the oracy, language and literacy capacity of the assessee and the work being performed.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by candidate
- direct observation of candidate's evaluation, adaptation and management of appropriate colour management practices and strategies
- case studies to assess candidate's ability to evaluate workplaces and their use of digital colour management practices and strategies
- problem solving activities to assess candidate's critical thinking skills.

Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

Assessment of performance requirements in the unit should be undertaken in an industry context. The Evidence Guide identifies the critical aspects, knowledge and skills to be demonstrated to confirm competency for the unit. Competency is demonstrated by performance of all stated criteria including the Range Statement applicable to the workplace.

Overview of assessment requirements

To achieve competency in this unit, a person must be able to demonstrate:

the ability to plan, conduct and finalise negotiations that result in mutually acceptable agreements for negotiating parties

Critical aspects of evidence

Evidence required for demonstration of consistent performance:	Competence in this unit must be assessed over a period of time in order to ensure consistency of performance over the Range Statement and contexts applicable to the work environment.
Delivery/relationship to other units:	This unit may be assessed on its own or it may be assessed with other units that cover related skills and knowledge. Evidence is most relevant when provided through an integrated activity which combines the elements of competency for the unit, or a cluster of units of competency.

Assessment requirements

Method of assessment:	For valid and reliable assessment of this unit, evidence should be gathered through a range of methods to indicate consistent performance. Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on underpinning knowledge and skills and other methods as required.
Context of assessment:	This unit may be assessed at work, in a simulated work environment or a combination of these.
Resources required for assessment:	Assessment of this unit of competence requires access to relevant workplace documentation, policies and procedures, computers and other branch or office equipment.

Range Statement

The following variables may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts. If bold italicised text is shown in Performance Criteria, details of the text are provided in the Range Statement.

Purpose of the negotiation may include:	settling claims or disputes terms and conditions of a contract terms and conditions of employment payments of fees roles and responsibilities
Strength may include:	detailed knowledge of products and services need to comply with legislation, regulations or codes of conduct morality industrial relations power contacts and influence control of resources
Negotiating style may include:	collaborative competitive subordinate
Effective questioning techniques may include:	asking open questions (allow range of answers) asking closed questions (answer yes or no) asking reflective questions (allowing the speaker to clarify their answer)
Effective presentation skills may include:	preparing for presentation presenting facts in a logical sequence speaking clearly and simply and using appropriate vocabulary using active listening skills and providing opportunities for feedback

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

Techniques for breaking deadlocks may include:	restating the position clarifying the position of both parties summarising progress to date deferring the decision preparing a compromise calling in a third party

Unit Descriptor

This unit covers strategic management of finances in a small organisation or part of a large organisation. It includes systems design to accommodate accounting, budgeting, cash flow analysis and financial planning. It is not concerned with day-to-day bookkeeping or clerical administration of financial records. Performance outcomes in this area are directly linked to organisation performance as defined in the strategic plan.

It is not concerned with day-to-day bookkeeping or clerical administration of financial records. Performance outcomes in this area are directly linked to organisation performance as defined in the strategic plan.

Application of the Unit

This unit requires the application of investigating and analytical skills in determining the requirements of a financial system. Accounting and financial skills are applied to design the system that is then implemented and monitored. It may be applied to any sector in the financial services industry.

Where financial systems are being developed within the context of a project team, FNSICORG607B may apply.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

Assessment of performance requirements in the unit should be undertaken in an industry context. The Evidence Guide identifies the critical aspects, knowledge and skills to be demonstrated to confirm competency for the unit. Competency is demonstrated by performance of all stated criteria including the Range Statement applicable to the workplace.

Overview of assessment requirements

To achieve competency in this unit, a person must be able to demonstrate:

financial management and planning risk assessment, evaluation and management financial reporting

compliance with relevant statutory, regulatory, professional and practice requirements critical analysis, research and evaluation costing and budgeting accounting and bookkeeping principles and practices communication and consultation skills

Critical aspects of evidence

Evidence required for demonstration of consistent performance:	Competence in this unit must be assessed over a period of time in order to ensure consistency of performance over the Range Statement and contexts applicable to the work environment.
Delivery/assessment relationship to other	This unit may be assessed on its own or it units:	may be assessed with other units that cover related skills and knowledge. Evidence is most relevant when provided through an integrated activity that combines the elements of competency for the unit, or a cluster of units of competency.

Assessment requirements

Method of assessment:	For valid and reliable assessment of this unit, evidence should be gathered through a range of methods to indicate consistent performance. Assessment of this unit of competence will usually include observation of processes and procedures, oral and/or written questioning on underpinning knowledge and skills and other methods as required.
Context of assessment:	This unit should be undertaken within the financial services industry context. Aspects of competency, including attainment of relevant knowledge and skills, may be assessed in a simulated work environment or other appropriate means.
Resources required for assessment:	Assessment of this unit of competence requires access to computer equipment, facilities for workplace or simulated environment assessment may be required.

Range Statement

The following variables may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts. If bold italicised text is shown in Performance Criteria, details of the text are provided in the Range Statement.

Financial system may include:	manual (paper based/other) or computerised (multimedia)

	must be capable of at least providing timely, accurate and easily understood information software may be industry specific or proprietary in nature
Efficient financial administration must take into account the following factors:	administrative systems ethical requirements compliance with relevant statutory and regulatory requirements bookkeeping
	Australian Standards Association codes of practice and Accounting Standards office routines security requirements
Reporting and procedural requirements may include:	consideration of legislation and codes of practice relating to financial record keeping, including trust accounting, taxation and auditing
Risk management may include:	need for insurance, including: public liability property personal indemnity personal accident sickness assets

1 Respond in an emergency situation	1.1 Recognise emergency situation and identify hazards to health and safety of self and others
	1.2 Minimise immediate risk to health and safety of self, casualty and others by isolating any hazard(s)
	1.3 Assess casualty and identify injuries, illnesses and conditions
	1.4 Assess the need for assistance
2 Apply identified first aid procedures	2.1 Reassure casualty in a caring and calm manner and make comfortable using available resources
	2.2 Determine and explain the nature of casualty's injury/condition and relevant first aid procedures to provide comfort
	2.3 Seek consent from casualty or significant other prior to applying first aid management
	2.4 Respond to the casualty in a culturally aware, sensitive and respectful manner
	2.5 Use identified first aid procedures as required in accordance with established first aid principles, policies and procedures, ARC Guidelines and/or state/territory regulations, legislation and policies and industry requirements
	2.6 Use safe manual handling techniques as required
3 Communicate details of the incident	3.1 Request ambulance support and/or appropriate medical assistance according to relevant circumstances and using available means of communication
	3.2 Accurately convey assessment of casualty's condition and first aid procedures undertaken to emergency services/relieving personnel
	3.3 Calmly provide information to reassure casualty, adopting a communication style to match the casualty's level of consciousness
	3.4 Provide reports, where applicable, in a timely manner, presenting all relevant facts according to established procedures

		3.5 Maintain confidentiality of records and information in line with privacy principles and statutory and/or organisation policies
4	Evaluate own performance	4.1 Seek feedback from appropriate clinical expert
		4.2 Recognise the possible psychological impacts on rescuers of involvement in critical incidents
		4.3 Participate in debriefing/evaluation as appropriate to improve future response and address individual needs

Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

Basic anatomy and physiology relating to:

severe bleeding

absence of signs of life:

unconscious

unresponsive

not moving not breathing normally choking/airway obstruction

shock

First aid procedures for:

bleeding control

care of unconscious

infection control as it relates to standard precautions

airway management

Privacy and confidentiality requirements

Duty of care requirements

Need to be culturally aware, sensitive and respectful

Relevant workplace hazards

Own skills and limitations

Awareness of stress management techniques and available support

Essential skills:

Ability to:

Demonstrate first aid casualty management principles:

assess and minimise danger

check for response

maintain casualty's airway, breathing and circulation.

Assess vital signs and responses of casualty

Demonstrate:

safe manual handling of casualty.

consideration of the welfare of the casualty and procedures, ARC Guidelines and/or state/territory regulations, legislation and policies and industry requirements and respond appropriately to contingencies in line with own level of skills and knowledge

Call an ambulance and/or medical assistance, according to circumstances and report casualty's condition

Identify and minimise hazards to health and safety of self and others in the immediate workplace or community environment

Report details of emergency incident and first aid provided

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects of assessment:	Assessment must include demonstrated evidence of specified Essential Knowledge and Essential Skills identified in this competency unit Competence should be demonstrated working individually and, where appropriate, as part of a first aid team. Consistency of performance should be demonstrated over the required range of situations relevant to the workplace or community setting Currency of CPR knowledge and skills is to be demonstrated in line with state/territory regulations, legislation and policies, ARC and industry guidelines
Context and resources required for assessment:	For assessment purposes, demonstration of skills in CPR procedures requires using a model of the human body (resuscitation manikin) in line with Australian Resuscitation Council Guidelines

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

Access and equity considerations:	All workers in the health industry should be aware of access and equity issues in relation to their own area of work All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment In recognition of particular health issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on health of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on health of Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

	Choking/airway obstruction
	Severe allergic reaction
Identified first aid procedures must include:	Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR)
	Control severe bleeding
	Airway management
	Provide assistance with self-administered medications, such as auto-injector, puffer/inhaler in line with state/territory regulations, legislation and policies and any available medical/pharmaceutical instructions
	Care of the unconscious person
Resources and equipment may include:	First aid kit
	Resuscitation mask or barrier
	Casualty's medication
	Manikin
	AED (if available)
	Auto-injector
	Puffer/inhaler
A hazard is:	A source or situation with the potential for harm in terms of human injury or ill-health, damage to property, the environment, or a combination of these
Appropriate clinical expert may include:	Supervisor/manager
	Ambulance officer/paramedic
	Other medical/health worker

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- Use of LAN functional matrices
- Use of traffic simulation tools
- Basic traffic analysis
- Use of network protocols
- Basic skills in connecting networks and keeping cables tidy

Required knowledge

- Characteristics and relative strengths and weaknesses of LAN network topologies
- Line sharing protocols
- Scope of operation, redundancy paths, high/low-speed links, protocols, security, traffic flow patterns, traffic load, response time and reliability requirements, types of user/applications, growth projections and capacity planning, constraints (costs, queuing)
- Detailed knowledge of bridges, routers, gateways, TCP/IP, Ethernet, hubs, adaptor cards
- Basic knowledge of cabling, particularly UTP (unshielded twisted pair), STP (shielded twisted pair) or optic fibre
- Current industry-accepted hardware and software products, including broad knowledge of general features and capabilities

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Context of and specific resources for assessment	The breadth, depth and complexity covering planning and initiation of alternative approaches to skills or knowledge applications across a broad range of technical and/or management requirements, evaluation and coordination would be characteristic. Assessment must ensure: • self-directed application of knowledge and skills, with substantial depth in some areas where judgement is required in planning and selecting appropriate equipment, services and techniques for self and others. • Applications involve participation in development of strategic initiatives as well as personal responsibility and autonomy in performing complex technical operations or organising others. It may include participation in teams including teams concerned with planning and evaluation functions. Group or team coordination may also be involved.

In undertaking training and assessment activities related to this unit, consideration should be given to the implementation of appropriate diversity and accessibility practices in order to accommodate people who may have special needs. Additional guidance on these and related matters is provided in ICA05 Section 1. • Competency in this unit should to be assessed using summative assessment to ensure consistency of performance in a range of contexts. This unit can be assessed either in the workplace or in a simulated environment. However, simulated activities must closely reflect the workplace to enable full demonstration of competency. • Assessment will usually include observation of real or simulated work processes and procedures and/or performance in a project context as well as questioning on underpinning knowledge and skills. • The questioning of team members, supervisors, subordinates, peers and clients where appropriate may provide valuable input to the assessment process. The interdependence of units for assessment purposes may vary with the particular project or scenario.

Elements and Performance Criteria

1. Define network	1.1. Identify current and future network requirements based on the organisation's business and technical requirements 1.2. Design an appropriate structure to meet client requirements, such as video, audio or data application services 1.3. Design a network addressing system with subnet and host identities (IP addressing) and virtual LANs (VLANs) 1.4. Identify and document resource requirements in accordance with network design
2. Install configure network backbone	2.1. Install and configure switches and routers according to network requirements and resources 2.2. Install network protocol suites using configurations on switch uplink ports as required by network design specifications 2.3. Configure hosts and workstations for network access
3. Test and validate network	3.1. Test network connectivity to ensure operation parameters are met between hosts on all relevant segments or VLANs 3.2. Make adjustments as required 3.3. Validate and document network performance

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills
• Implementing optic fibre and Ether-Channel technologies • Installation of Ethernet switches with gigabit and 10 gigabit interfaces • Configuring trunking on uplink ports • Basic cabling
Required knowledge
• OSI layer model • LAN and WAN network topologies (three-layer LAN hierarchy: core distribution and access) • Routers • Ethernet switches • Bandwidth limitations, measuring and testing • NICs (Fast Ethernet, gigabit and 10-gigabit Ethernet (token ring is less common)) • Ethernet switch functions (frame switching: store-and-forward, fast-forward, fragment-free) • Virtual LANs • Internetworking protocol suites, such as TCP/IP, IPX, DECnet, AppleTalk, IPV6 • MAC addresses, network layer protocols

Context of and specific resources for assessment	This Unit focuses on configuring high-speed (high-bandwidth) channels between high-end switches. The two main methods in current use are to use One- or 10-Gigabit Ethernet connections and Ether-Channel architecture, in which up to eight Fast Ethernet or Gigabit channels (cables), are configured or trunked as a single logical channel. The breadth, depth and complexity covering planning and initiation of alternative approaches to skills or knowledge applications across a broad range of technical and/or management requirements, evaluation and coordination would be characteristic. Assessment must ensure: • The demonstration of competency may also require self-directed application of knowledge and skills, with substantial depth in some areas where judgement is required in planning and selecting appropriate equipment, services and techniques for self and others. • Applications involve participation in development of strategic initiatives as well as personal responsibility and autonomy in performing complex technical operations or organising others. Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • Assessment must confirm the ability to develop and maintain actual website performance against benchmarks, to ensure that the website meets specifications. • Where performance criteria are not met, faults must be identified and appropriate remedial action taken. • Assessment must verify the ability to implement scheduled and non-scheduled maintenance and to effectively monitor and tune website performance. To demonstrate competency in this unit the learner will require access to: • Web servers and websites • Technical requirements • Web traffic diagnostic tools, including timing tools to gauge website response times

Context of and specific resources for assessment	The effective and efficient operation of an organisation's website is of critical importance when business transactions a conducted online. Additionally, a website provides a 'new window' into an organisation and as such provides existing and potential clients with an indication of organisational credibility, effectiveness and efficiency. The rapid growth in the use of websites as the primary media for client interaction, places considerable strategic and operational importance on activities around effective website monitoring and performance. Testing the website under different conditions of load is essential to understanding how it behaves from the client's perspective. Thus, testing tools should include some way of simulating traffic from numerous users. Breadth, depth and complexity of knowledge and skills would prepare a person to perform basic skills in managing website performance. Operations must be in accordance with organisational polices and procedures. Managing the performance of a website should be done under competent supervision where there is a clearly defined range of contexts for ensuring that ongoing demands on the site are met.

	The breadth, depth and complexity of knowledge and skills in this competency would cover a broad range of varied activities or application in a wider variety of contexts most of which are complex and non-routine. Leadership and guidance would be involved when organising activities of self and others as well as contributing to technical solutions of a non-routine or contingency nature. Assessment must ensure: • Performance of a broad range of skilled applications including the requirement to evaluate and analyse current practices, develop new criteria and procedures for performing current practices and provision of some leadership and guidance to others in the application and planning of the skills would be characteristic. • Applications may involve responsibility for, and limited organisation of, others.
Method of assessment	The purpose of this unit is to define the standard of performance to be achieved in the workplace. In undertaking training and assessment activities related to this unit, consideration should be given to the implementation of appropriate diversity and accessibility practices in order to accommodate people who may have special needs. Additional guidance on these and related matters is provided in ICA05 Section 1. • Competency in this unit should be assessed using summative assessment to ensure consistency of performance in a range of contexts. • Internet security issues • Server technologies • Operating systems used by ISPs • Customer and business needs and relationships • Performance expectations from customers and end users • Applying performance benchmarks

EVIDENCE GUIDE
The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.
Overview of assessment
Context of and specific resources for assessment	The effectiveness of an organisation's online presence is significantly determined by the quality, cost and features of the web hosting service provider or ISP. Web hosts often tailor their services to serve the needs of a particular type of client and the selection of an appropriate bundle of features and provider is an important decision for the organisation.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

EVIDENCE GUIDE
	An individual demonstrating this competency would be able to take responsibility for comparing and evaluating ISP services. The breadth, depth and complexity covering planning and initiation of alternative approaches to skills or knowledge applications across a broad range of technical and/or management requirements, evaluation and coordination would be characteristic. The demonstration of competency may also require self-directed application of knowledge and skills, with substantial depth in some areas where judgement is required in planning and selecting appropriate equipment, services and techniques for self and others. Assessment must ensure: • Applications involve participation in development of strategic initiatives as well as personal responsibility and autonomy in performing complex technical operations or organising others. It may include participation in teams including teams concerned with planning and evaluation functions. Group or team coordination may also be involved.
Method of assessment	The purpose of this unit is to define the standard of performance to be achieved in the workplace. In undertaking training and assessment activities related to this unit, consideration should be given to the implementation of appropriate diversity and accessibility practices in order to accommodate people who may have special needs. Additional guidance on these and related matters is provided in ICA05 Section 1. • Competency in this unit should be assessed using summative assessment to ensure consistency of performance in a range of contexts. This unit can be assessed either in the workplace or in a simulated environment. However, simulated activities must closely reflect the workplace to enable full demonstration of competency.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

EVIDENCE GUIDE
	• Assessment will usually include observation of real or simulated work processes and procedures and/or performance in a project context as well as questioning on underpinning knowledge and skills. The questioning of team members, supervisors, subordinates, peers and clients where appropriate may provide valuable input to the assessment process. The interdependence of units for assessment purposes may vary with the particular project or scenario.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • ICAA5056B Prepare disaster recovery and contingency plans An individual demonstrating this competency would be able to: • Demonstrate understanding of a broad knowledge base incorporating theoretical concepts, with substantial depth in some areas • Analyse and plan approaches to technical problems or management requirements • Transfer and apply theoretical concepts and/or technical or creative skills to a range of situations • Evaluate information, using it to forecast for planning or research purposes • Take responsibility for own outputs in relation to broad quantity and quality parameters • Take some responsibility for the achievement of group outcomes • Maintain knowledge of industry products and services

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.
Server applications may include:	• file sharing • printer sharing • messaging • web services • network and remote access • database and data warehousing • directory services • management • line of business applications • terminal services
Operating system may include but is not limited to:	• Linux 7.0 or above • Windows 2000 or above • Apple OS X or above
Servers may include:	• Apache HTTP server • IBM VisualAge and WebSphere • Microsoft-Internet-Information-Server • NetDynamics • Lotus Domino • Netscape Enterprise server, Netscape-FastTrack, Netscape-Commerce • Sun Microsystems iPlanet web server • iPlanet-Enterprise • Sun Microsystems Java web server • Email servers • FTP servers
Scripting languages may include:	• Pearl • VBscript • VB.Net Javascript • PHP, Python
Security technologies may include:	• secure socket layer (SSL) • PKI • payment gateways
Hosting plans may include:	• disk storage

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.	Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

1. Choose the most appropriate fault finding method	1.1. Analyse and document the system that requires troubleshooting 1.2. Identify and apply specifically designed troubleshooting tools for the system 1.3. Investigate and record generic cyclic fault finding tools 1.4. Obtain required specialist tools appropriate to the work
2. Analyse the problem to be solved	2.1. Collect all data relevant to the system as well as signs and symptoms of the problem 2.2. Organise the collected data to enable an understanding of the status of the system 2.3. Analyse the data to determine that there is a problem, and the nature of the problem
3. Define the causes of the problem and create a plan of action	3.1. Create a list of probable causes of the problem 3.2. Organise causes in order of likelihood 3.3. Formulate a solution or rectification 3.4. Rectify probable causes, testing for the success of the solution and record results

4. Review problem and system status	4.1. Test the system to ensure the problem has been solved and record results 4.2. Document the problem, its signs and symptoms, and the ultimate solution and load to database of problems/solutions for future reference

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE
This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills
• Problem solving skills for a defined range of unpredictable problems involving participation in the development of strategic initiatives • Communication skills in relation to analysis, evaluation and presentation of information • Teamwork skills involving the contribution to solutions and goals of a non-routine or contingency nature • Group facilitation and presentation skills in relation to transferring and collecting information and gaining consensus • Negotiation skills in relation to other team members and applied to a defined range of predictable problems • Report writing skills for business requiring depth in some areas, analysis and evaluation of information in a defined range of areas • Change management skills in relation to maintaining the continuity of IT operations and business functions • Customer service skills in relation to reviewing change procedures • Skills in handling difficult clients in relation to reviewing change procedures • Conflict resolution skills in relation to reviewing change procedures • Risk analysis skills in relation to reviewing change procedures • Low level training needs analysis skills • Low level programming skills
Required knowledge
• Broad knowledge of help desk and maintenance practices • Current industry-accepted hardware and software products, with broad knowledge of general features and capabilities and detailed knowledge in some areas • Broad knowledge of the role of stakeholders and the degree of stakeholder

Overview of assessment
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Troubleshooting and fault finding are universal competencies used by most IT practitioners and operate at all stages of the systems life cycle. These activities apply procedures for localizing and diagnosing equipment or system malfunctions or anomalies, typically by systematic examination progressing from higher to lower levels of assembly. The breadth, depth and complexity of knowledge and

Leadership and guidance would be involved when organising activities of self and others as well as contributing to technical solutions of a non-routine or contingency nature. Assessment must ensure: • Performance of a broad range of skilled applications including the requirement to evaluate and analyse current practices, develop new criteria and procedures for performing current practices and provision of some leadership and guidance to others in the application and planning of the skills would be characteristic. • Applications may involve responsibility for, and limited organisation of, others. Assessment will usually include observation of real or simulated work processes and procedures and/or performance in a project context as well as questioning on underpinning knowledge and skills. The questioning of team members, supervisors, subordinates, peers and clients where appropriate may provide valuable input to the assessment process. Overview of assessment
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Peripheral equipment forms an auxiliary but essential component of everyday computer usage. Such equipment enhances the effectiveness of computers and provides increased functionality and capability for input, output and memory functions. The efficient and effective operation of peripherals is a critical aspect of information technology in most workplaces. The breadth, depth and complexity of knowledge and skills in this competency would prepare a person to perform in a range of varied activities or knowledge applications where there is a clearly defined range of contexts in which the choice of actions required is usually clear. There would generally be limited complexity in the range of operations to be applied. Assessment must ensure: • Performance of a prescribed range of functions involving known routines and procedures and some accountability for the quality of outcomes would be characteristic. • Applications may include some complex or non-routine activities involving individual responsibility or autonomy and/or collaboration with others as part of a group or team.

	• Documented organisational requirements
Context of and specific resources for assessment	The rationale behind this unit emphasises the importance of constantly reviewing work processes, skills and techniques in order to ensure that the quality of the entire business process is maintained at the highest level possible through the appropriate application of new technology. To this end, the person is typically engaged in on-going review and research in order to discover and apply new technology or techniques to improve aspects of the organisation's activities. The breadth, depth and complexity of knowledge and skills in this competency would cover selecting, adapting and transferring skills and knowledge to new environments and providing technical advice and some leadership in resolution of specified problems. This would be applied across a range of roles in a variety of contexts with some complexity in the extent and choice of options available. Assessment must ensure: • Performance of a defined range of skilled operations, usually within a range of broader related activities involving known routines, methods and procedures, where some discretion and judgement is required in the section of equipment, services or contingency measures and within known time constraints would be characteristic. • Applications may involve some responsibility for others. Participation in teams including group or team coordination may be involved.
Method of assessment	The purpose of this unit is to define the standard of performance to be achieved in the workplace. In undertaking training and assessment activities related to this unit, consideration should be given to the implementation of appropriate diversity and accessibility practices in order to accommodate people who may have special needs. Additional guidance on these and related matters is provided in ICA05 Section 1.

	• Competency in this unit should be assessed using summative assessment to ensure consistency of performance in a range of contexts. This unit can be assessed either in the workplace or in a simulated environment. However, simulated activities must closely reflect the workplace to enable full demonstration of competency. • Assessment will usually include observation of real or simulated work processes and procedures and/or performance in a project context as well as questioning on underpinning knowledge and skills. The questioning of team members, supervisors, subordinates, peers and clients where appropriate may provide valuable input to the assessment process. The interdependence of units for assessment purposes may vary with the particular project or scenario.

RANGE STATEMENT
Equipment may include but is not limited to:	• workstations • personal computers • modems and other connectivity devices • printers • hard drives • DSL modems • monitors • switches • hubs • personal digital assistant (PDA) • other peripheral devices
Applications	• May include but are not limited to commercial software applications; organisation-specific software; word processing, spreadsheet, database, graphic, communication packages and presentation functionalities. • May include presentation applications contained in: Microsoft Office, Lotus Suite, Claris Works, Star Office or other similar applications.
Technology skills - new skills can include but are not limited to:	• Hardware • PCs • networks • storage • communications equipment
Feedback may include:	• surveys • questionnaires • interviews • meetings
Software may include but are not limited to:	• user-based software for new business processes • customer relationship management • integrated services (e.g. banking and financial services)

Sources of information may include but is not limited to:	• documents • test pages • web pages • appliances software and technical connections guidance and other outputs supplied by vendors and manufacturers
OH&S standards	• May include correct posture, lighting, type of desk, type of monitor, style of chair, typing position, repetitive strain injury prevention, ventilation, light position, correct lifting method, and length of time in front of computer. • May also include physical safety considerations such as general electrical safety and cabling, power supply and leads as they apply to computer and peripheral installations.
Environmental Considerations may include but is not limited to:	• recycling • safe disposal of packaging (e.g. cardboard, polystyrene, paper, plastic) • correct disposal of redundant hardware (e.g. motherboards, hard drives, circuit boards) by an authorised body

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.
Required skills
• Basic analysis skills in relation to normal routine work processes • Detailed skills in using applications features • Basic skills in interpreting technical information • Problem solving skills in known areas during normal routine work processes • Plain English literacy and communication skills in relation to dealing with clients and team members
Required knowledge
• Basic understanding of operating systems software and system tools • Broad knowledge of vendor product directions • Broad knowledge of vendor applications and their features

Overview of assessment

	4.2	The preferred CD-ROM/DVD format is chosen for the job
	4.3	A test CD-ROM/DVD is burned to test the auto functions and confirm interactivity across different platforms
	4.4	A master disc is produced for mass duplication

Required Skills and Knowledge

Required Knowledge and Skills

The following knowledge must be assessed as part of this unit:

Use of compression technologies

Media types

Relevant multimedia software

Relevant CD/DVD hardware for burning CDs/DVDs

Multi media navigation

Java script

Different multi media file formats eg PDF, JPEG, TIF

The following skills must be assessed as part of this unit:

OHS in relation to operating machinery such as safely switching off machinery before cleaning is started

Communication of ideas and information by developing a welcome page that identifies the navigational structure of the media

Collecting, analysing and organising information by correctly compressing media at the right resolution with any text in the correct format

Planning and organising activities by preparing the CD-ROM/DVD structure before setting up auto functions

Teamwork when maintaining the production process in association with others

Mathematical ideas and techniques by compressing media correctly to ensure images are at the right resolution

Problem-solving skills by testing the auto functions to confirm interactivity across different platforms

Use of technology by using computer hardware and software to create and test a CD-ROM/DVD

Evidence Guide

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Knowledge and Skills, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: Create an interactive CD-ROM/DVD that starts automatically and has no errors in any of the interactive functions Create TWO different interactive CD-ROMs/DVDs which start automatically, have no errors in any of the interactive functions and besides autorun they will link with a reader for computers without a reader installed Evidence for assessment may be gathered from assessment of the unit of competency alone or through an integrated assessment activity
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: assessment may take place on the job, off the job or a combination of these. Off the job assessment must be undertaken in a closely simulated workplace environment

EVIDENCE GUIDE
Overview of assessment	A person who demonstrates competency in this unit must be able to use hand tools for a range of general engineering applications.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	This unit may be assessed on the job, off the job or a combination of both on and off the job. Where assessment occurs off the job, that is the candidate is not in productive work, then an appropriate simulation must be used where the range of conditions reflects realistic workplace situations. The competencies covered by this unit would be demonstrated by an individual working alone or as part of a team. The assessment environment should not disadvantage the candidate. This unit could be assessed in conjunction with any other units addressing the safety, quality, communication, materials handling, recording and reporting associated with using hand tools or other units requiring the exercise of the skills and knowledge covered by this unit.
Method of assessment	Assessors should gather a range of evidence that is valid, sufficient, current and authentic. Evidence can be gathered through a variety of ways including direct observation, supervisor's reports, project work, samples and questioning. Questioning techniques should not require language, literacy and numeracy skills beyond those required in this unit of competency. The candidate must have access to all tools, equipment, materials and documentation required. The candidate must be permitted to refer to any relevant workplace procedures, product and manufacturing specifications, codes, standards, manuals and reference materials.

PSPPROC602B Direct the management of contracts

Modification History

Unit Descriptor

This unit covers management of contracts for strategic purchases to effectively minimise risks and achieve value for money to meet an organisations core objectives. It includes managing contract establishment, performance and evaluation.

In practice, directing the management of contracts may overlap with other public sector generalist and specialist work activities such as acting ethically, applying government systems, managing resources, managing client services, managing risk, etc.

This unit replaces and is equivalent to PSPPROC602A Direct the management of contracts.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements are the essential outcomes of the unit of competency.

Together, performance criteria specify the requirements for competent performance. Text in bold italics is explained in the Range Statement following.

Elements and Performance Criteria

Elements and Performance Criteria

Element	Performance Criteria
1 Manage contract establishment	1.1 The requirements of contracts and strategic initiatives are discussed, clarified, and agreed by all parties
	1.2 Responsibilities for establishing and carrying out procedures are assigned to achieve contract outcomes

	1.3 Effective communication strategies and processes are established and implemented to assist ongoing communication between stakeholders and contractors
	1.4 Relationship management is undertaken at all levels of personnel involved in procurement and contract management
	1.5 Strategic relationships are established and managed to improve procurement capability and performance
	1.6 Risk management plans are updated in accordance with organisational policy and procedures
2 Manage contract performance	2.1 Progress of contracts is monitored against set targets and performance measures to ensure success of procurement activities
	2.2 Should monitoring find that set targets and performance measures are not being met, action is taken to rectify performance in a timely manner
	2.3 Advice and support are provided to solve problems, make improvements and maintain progress
	2.4 Opportunities to improve procurement outcomes are sought and negotiated with contractors
	2.5 Approvals are provided/gained for contract variations negotiated and agreed between the parties
	2.6 Opportunities are provided for stakeholders and contractors to have input into and receive feedback on progress during the performance contracts
3 Manage contract evaluation	3.1 Evaluation of contract performance is undertaken relative to planned performance measures and in consultation with stakeholders and contractors
	3.2 Where stakeholders and contractors do not agree, dispute resolution is undertaken in accordance with organisational policy and procedures

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

3.3 Conclusions are detailed against agreed criteria to provide a complete picture of performance of contractors, the organisation's procurement processes and value for money

3.4 The performance of strategic initiatives is measured relative to planned outcomes in consultation with industry and other stakeholders

3.5 Lessons learnt from evaluations of contracts and strategic initiatives are documented in accordance with organisational requirements and used to continuously improve future procurement activities

3.6 Contractors and stakeholders are advised of evaluation outcomes in a timely manner in accordance with organisational guidelines

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to provide visitors with information on the venue's facilities and services.

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit

This unit applies to frontline service personnel working in a range of tourism, hospitality, entertainment and cultural venues. Provision of information and assistance is often face-to-face but may be by telephone or other remote mechanism. Customer service personnel working under supervision undertake this function, but the unit is also relevant to those working in operational roles where customer service may not be the main focus of work, e.g. animal handlers in a zoo or technicians in a theatre.

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
2 Provide information about services and facilities.	2.1 Proactively identify information and assistance needs of different customers, including those with special needs. 2.2 Provide accurate information in a clear, concise, courteous and culturally appropriate manner. 2.3 Where appropriate, assist or instruct visitors in the use of equipment and facilities or refer to relevant colleagues. 2.4 Consider health and safety requirements when providing information and assistance. 2.5 Promote internal products and services using appropriate customer service skills to contribute to the profitability of business.
3 Seek feedback on services.	3.1 Proactively seek feedback on services from visitors. 3.2 Observe visitor behaviour to inform future service developments and correctly follow procedures for any formal customer evaluation. 3.3 Provide information on visitor feedback to relevant colleagues.

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level, required for this unit.

The following skills must be assessed as part of this unit:

- communication and interpersonal skills to interact in a friendly and courteous way with customers
- basic research skills to source information on a predictable range of customer requests
- literacy skills to understand, interpret and orally communicate venue information and promotional material.

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- sources of information on the organisation's services and facilities
- typical information systems used within the different types of venues open to the general public
- organisation facilities, services and procedures, including for those with special needs, such as parking, exhibits, show times, retail outlets and special events
- available sources of advice and referral
- safety and emergency procedures for visitors, colleagues and self
- sources of venue customers in the relevant industry context
- roles of different departments within different types of venues.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, the range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: • ability to access appropriate information on services and facilities • ability to communicate information and assist visitors in a courteous and culturally appropriate manner • demonstration of skills on multiple occasions or in response to multiple requests to reflect breadth of knowledge and ability to respond to different situations.
Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: • interaction with others in the provision of information to demonstrate the appropriate interpersonal skills • use of current venue information.
Methods of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

EVIDENCE GUIDE

- direct observation of the candidate providing assistance and information
- case studies to assess ability to source a range of different types of information for different purposes
- written and oral questioning or interview to test knowledge of the sources of information and the role of information systems within the venue
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate.

Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended.

Assessing employability skills

Employability skills are integral to effective performance in the workplace and are broadly consistent across industry sectors. How these skills are applied varies between occupations and qualifications due to the different work functions and contexts.

Employability skills embedded in this unit should be assessed holistically with other relevant units that make up the skill set or qualification and in the context of the job role.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to process and monitor registration for any type of event.

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certificate requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Events are diverse in nature and are organised and administered in many different industry contexts. The underpinning principles of event management are consistent across these contexts and this unit is designed to apply to a broad range of events. It has particular relevance in the creative, hospitality, sport and tourism sectors within venues, event management organisations and professional conference organisers.

Registration processing and monitoring requires underpinning clerical and administrative skills combined with knowledge of specific event administration procedures. This function is undertaken by individuals working according to broader event management procedures and under guidance from others.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to develop the overall concept, theme and format for a complex event comprising multiple components. Event bids and proposals are covered in unit SITXEVT008A Plan and develop event proposals and bids. The unit also shares some similarities with SITXEVT014A Develop conference programs, but is broader in application.

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit

This unit applies to the overall concept development process for any type of event. It may be relevant in any industry context, but has particular application in the cultural, community, hospitality, sporting and tourism sectors.

A complex event comprising multiple components must involve:

- need for a comprehensive and multifaceted event plan
- need for a formal internal or external communications strategy
- dedicated and diverse event budget
- multiple administrative and operational components
- a wide range of stakeholders
- an event operations team.

Concept development occurs at the commencement of the event management cycle and involves the application of significant analytical, creative and conceptual skills teamed with sound operational management expertise. Sometimes the concept development phase is undertaken as part of the event bidding process. An event manager or other individual often in the event sponsoring organisation undertakes this role in consultation with a range of event stakeholders and sometimes under the guidance of an event organising committee.

The unit does not include the specialist concept development undertaken by experts such as writers, technical specialists or lighting, sound, exhibition, set or costume designers. Consultation with relevant experts, however, may be a key aspect of overall event concept development.

Elements and Performance Criteria

1 Establish overall event objectives and scope.	1.1 Clarify and agree on key event objectives in consultation with event stakeholders.
	1.2 Analyse initial event information and consult with stakeholders to determine the broad scope of the event.
	1.3 Identify and analyse internal and external factors that may impact on the event.
2 Establish event concept theme and format.	2.1 Identify and access sources of information and ideas to inform event concept development.
	2.2 Research and critically evaluate ideas and information for possible application to current and future work.
	2.3 Generate discussion and consultation with event stakeholders and other colleagues to progress development of the event concept.
	2.4 Explore, test and reflect on different and innovative approaches as part of the concept development process.
	2.5 Develop overall event concept, theme and format that reflect key objectives and meet potential audience needs.
3 Evaluate and progress concept to operational stage.	3.1 Verify the operational practicality and cohesiveness of the concept, theme and format through consultation and analysis.
	3.2 Select and implement a strategy for effective communication about the concept with event stakeholders.
	3.3 Develop a summary of key logistical requirements based on the overall concept, theme and format.
	3.4 Facilitate effective planning and implementation through timely provision of accurate and complete information on the concept, theme and format to all relevant stakeholders.

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level, required for this unit.

The following skills must be assessed as part of this unit:

- critical thinking skills to assess, select and synthesise broad ideas and concepts
- planning and organisational skills to tie concepts to the need for operational practicality
- communication skills to consult and liaise with a wide range of stakeholders on potentially complex concepts and planning issues
- literacy skills to interpret and develop information dealing with complex concepts
- numeracy skills to estimate costs, work with budgets and understand the impact of budgetary limitations on concept development.

The following knowledge must be assessed as part of this unit:

- processes to explore, generate and test ideas to develop a concept, format and theme
- range of different creative, promotional, technical and operational options to consider when developing an event concept
- key stakeholders for different types of event
- internal and external factors to be considered when developing an event concept
- key operational issues and logistical requirements that impact on development of an event concept in the relevant industry context
- risk management factors that impact on event concept development
- legislative requirements that may impact on the event concept, e.g. safety and licensing
- common environmental site impacts and minimal impact practices that can be typically used.

performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, the range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:

- ability to develop an event concept and format that are operationally practical and result in the achievement of event objectives
- knowledge of typical formats and specific components for different types of events
- development of a concept, theme and format for a complex event to meet a specified need.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure:

- access to and interaction with event industry suppliers
- involvement of and interaction with an event principal or organising group.

Methods of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- case studies to develop concepts, themes and formats for different types of events
- evaluation of a concept, theme and format through a candidate presentation or bid for an event
- oral or written questions to assess knowledge of the range of key market factors and management issues to be considered in the concept development phase
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate.

Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended.

Assessing employability skills

Employability skills are integral to effective performance in the workplace and are broadly consistent across industry sectors. How these skills are applied varies between occupations and qualifications due to the different work functions and contexts.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

Event objectives may be:	• creative • profile creation • community impact • participation or attendance.
Event stakeholders may include:	• event principal • local community • organising committees • local authorities • clients • colleagues • staging contractors • entertainers.
Initial event information may relate to:	• date, time and duration • size and scope • location • resourcing.
Internal and external factors to be assessed may include:	• human, financial and physical resource availability, including:

- potential for attracting additional resources, such as sponsorship and co-hosting
- level of management commitment
- restrictions on lead time
- potential levels of participation and interest
- competitive environment
- timing and duration factors, such as impact of public holidays and other public events
- potential contributors
- talent requirements
- climate
- access factors
- marketing and promotional issues, such as potential for media coverage
- safety factors
- risk management considerations.

Different and innovative approaches may involve:

- adapting existing ideas, products or services
- developing new ideas, products or services
- incorporating or experimenting with new technologies
- challenging established ways of doing things.

Operational practicality and cohesiveness may relate to:

- scheduling
- availability of human, financial and physical resources
- ensuring realistic attendance expectation
- venue or site constraints
- time constraints
- managing risk
- managing negative environmental impacts by use of minimal impact practices.

Key logistical requirements may relate to:

- venue and site set-up and design
- catering
- physical elements
- technical effects, including sound, lighting and audiovisual
- collateral materials
- need for specialist contractors
- minimal impact practices for the construction,

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to develop plans and procedures for the admittance, seating and dispersal of crowds to ensure the safety and well-being of personnel and participants. It includes procedures for emergency situations.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit

This unit applies to individuals responsible for the development of plans and procedures for the management of large crowds in any industry or community context.

It is particularly relevant in the community, cultural, sporting and tourism sectors where large crowds are a feature of both ongoing and one-off business and community activity.

Development of crowd management procedures in this unit requires the application of significant critical thinking, planning and organisational skills, combined with a detailed knowledge of risk management issues, crowd control techniques and relevant emergency procedures. Those with managerial responsibility undertake this role. The unit is generalist in nature and does not cover the specialised operational crowd management skills required by police or other security experts.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit

This unit applies to the overall venue or site selection process for any type of event. It may be relevant in any industry context, but has particular application in the cultural, community, hospitality, sporting and tourism sectors.

A complex event comprising multiple components must involve:

- need for a comprehensive and multifaceted event plan
- need for a formal internal or external communications strategy
- dedicated and diverse event budget
- multiple administrative and operational components
- a wide range of stakeholders
- an event operations team.

Selection of an appropriate venue or site for a complex event requires the application of significant analytical and research skills as well as sound knowledge of venue or site issues that impact on different types of events. Individuals working autonomously with limited guidance from others undertake this role. This may include senior event coordinators or event managers.

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level, required for this unit.

The following skills must be assessed as part of this unit:

- research skills to source and analyse a wide range of complex information and materials
- critical thinking skills to evaluate a range of venue or site options against complex criteria and make substantiated selection
- communication skills to liaise and negotiate with event stakeholders, including venue or site personnel
- literacy skills to interpret varied and complex venue or site information and materials and to develop complex accurate event documentation
- numeracy skills to estimate and negotiate costs for a range of on-site venue-related products and services.

The following knowledge must be assessed as part of this unit:

- operational requirements for different event types and their impact on the venue or site selection process.
- information sources for venue or site information for a broad range of event types
- different styles of venues and sites, the range of products and services offered and their suitability for particular event types
- venue and site options within a given locality
- presentation styles for venue or site information, typical information inclusions and how to interpret these
- features and requirements of typical venue or site contracts
- typical operational structures within different venues and sites, including relevant personnel, internal networks, organisational interrelationships and reporting structures
- risk management and environmental impact factors relevant to different types of venue or site.

EVIDENCE GUIDE

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:

- ability to research and select an appropriate venue or site for a complex event
- ability to develop, interpret and analyse the range of information used in venue and site selection and confirmation process
- knowledge of different venue and site options within the local area
- conduct of venue or site selection process for at least two events, one of which becomes an event managed by the candidate.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure:

- access to venues and sites relevant to different types of events
- use of current industry documentation and publications relating to venues and sites
- access to and liaison with venue personnel during the selection process
- involvement of and consultation with event stakeholders.

Methods of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- evaluation of the suitability of a venue or site selected by the candidate through attendance at the event
- case studies to assess ability to source and select venues and sites for different types of event
- review of documentation and specifications prepared by the candidate
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate.

Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example:

Assessing employability skills

Employability skills are integral to effective performance in the workplace and are broadly consistent across industry sectors. How these skills are applied varies between occupations and qualifications due to the different work functions and contexts.

Employability skills embedded in this unit should be assessed holistically with other relevant units that make up the skill set or qualification and in the context of the job role.

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording in the performance criteria is detailed below.

Overall venue or site requirements may relate to:

- event theme and image
- estimated numbers
- facilities and services to be provided
- budget
- audience or delegate profile and location.

Venue or site specifications would include details related to:

- budget parameters
- availability
- staffing
- staging and capacity
- technical capacity or potential
- access and timing, such as for set-up and break-down
- location and attendees' access issues
- participant capacity
- specific facilities and services, such as catering and size of area and equipment.

SITXEVT013A Manage event staging

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to manage the staging and operation of a complex event comprising multiple components.

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit

This unit applies to staging management for any type of event. It may be relevant in any industry context, but has particular application in the cultural, community, hospitality, sporting and tourism sectors. The unit focuses on the key knowledge and skills required to manage overall event staging from an organisational and contractor management perspective. It requires the application of advanced planning, organisation and communication skills combined with a detailed knowledge of the event management process and broad understanding of individual specialist services.

A complex event comprising multiple components must involve:

- need for a comprehensive and multifaceted event plan
- need for a formal internal or external communications strategy
- dedicated and diverse event budget
- multiple administrative and operational components
- a wide range of stakeholders
- an event operations team.

It does not cover the high levels of technical expertise required to provide individual specialist services, including catering,

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level, required for this unit.

The following skills must be assessed as part of this unit:

- communication and negotiation skills to conduct complex negotiations for the supply of products and services, and to manage staging contractors during the event management and operations process
- problem solving skills to address complex issues, such as poorly-performing contractors, changing requirements and other operational constraints
- literacy skills to interpret and develop complex and detailed event documentation
- numeracy skills to work with budgets and detailed quotations for the supply of products and services.

The following knowledge must be assessed as part of this unit:

- different roles and responsibilities of organisations involved in event staging
- suppliers of staging products and services and sources of information on staging services
- specific risk management issues to be considered for different areas of event staging
- product and service terminology, features and options, and current technology in key areas of staging, including:
  - catering
  - venue or site services and set-ups
  - technical services, including audiovisual, lighting, sound, rigging and special effects
  - entertainers
  - registration requirements and set-ups
  - physical elements, including display, furniture and temporary structures
  - security
  - media coverage
  - safety equipment
- key inclusions for contractor briefing and specification documents.

performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, the range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:

- general knowledge of the range of staging services and related terminology to allow for informed planning and decision-making
- ability to source, organise and coordinate multiple staging contractors as part of the overall event management process
- management of the staging of at least one complex event.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure:

- access to an event venue
- access to all equipment required for the staging of an event
- liaison with and involvement of multiple contractors.

Methods of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- evaluation of the staging of an event managed by the candidate through attendance at the event
- review of documentation used to manage staging contractors prepared by the candidate
- questioning of contractors to assess the organisational skills of the candidate
- case studies to assess ability to determine staging requirements for different events
- oral or written questions to assess knowledge of key staging services and relevant terminology
- review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate.

Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended.

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit

This unit applies to individuals who are responsible for the overall design of a conference program and is relevant to the full range of industry contexts. The unit is specialised in nature, and relates to conferences that include a significant business program. It requires the application of detailed knowledge of conference formats and options as well as a sound understanding of learning and development issues that impact on program design.

Meetings or conference managers, either internal or external to the sponsoring organisation, undertake this role. They work autonomously in consultation with others, and often under the overall guidance of an organising committee.

More general conference organisation skills are found in business units such as BSBADM503A Plan and manage conferences.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to develop and implement plans and procedures for the management and operation of exhibitions. All other Events units are applicable to exhibition management. This unit focuses only on the issues specific to commercial exhibitions.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to individuals responsible for the development and implementation of exhibition plans and procedures in any industry or community context.

Exhibitions are events that bring buyers and sellers together to view and sell products and services. They may be trade or consumer focused.

This unit focuses on the application of the specific knowledge and skills required for exhibition management. In particular, it includes establishing systems and formats for bringing buyers and sellers together, recruiting and managing exhibitors, and setting up physical exhibitions.

Exhibition management requires the application of significant communication, planning and organisational skills underpinned by detailed knowledge of exhibition operations. A senior coordinator or manager undertakes this role.

SITXEVT016A Organise and monitor event infrastructure

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to coordinate infrastructure and facilities for a complex event comprising multiple components, where these do not already exist at a venue or site. It therefore builds on other Events units, such as SITXEVT013A Manage event staging.

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to individuals managing events in any industry context. It is particularly relevant to the cultural, community, hospitality, sporting and tourism sectors.

A complex event comprising multiple components must involve:

need for a comprehensive and multifaceted event plan

need for a formal internal or external communications strategy

dedicated and diverse event budget

multiple administrative and operational components

a wide range of stakeholders

an event operations team.

Many events take place at outdoor venues or at locations where infrastructure and facilities are minimal. Significant event operations knowledge combined with organisational and management skills are required to establish that infrastructure and make it operational.

This role is undertaken by an event manager working autonomously, but in consultation with suppliers, colleagues and broader event stakeholders.

SITXEVT017A Provide on-site event management services

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to coordinate the final preparation and set-up of a complex event comprising multiple components and to manage all aspects of the on-site operation.

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

This unit applies to individuals managing events in any industry context, but it is particularly relevant to the cultural, community, hospitality, sporting and tourism sectors.

A complex event comprising multiple components must involve:

need for a comprehensive and multifaceted event plan

need for a formal internal or external communications strategy

dedicated and diverse event budget

multiple administrative and operational components

a wide range of stakeholders

an event operations team.

On-site management of a complex event requires considerable organisational, communication, negotiation and problem-solving skills as well as detailed knowledge of the range of issues and challenges that impact on event operations. Those with managerial responsibility undertake this role.

communication skills to lead, liaise and negotiate with a wide range of stakeholders on potentially complex and unpredictable operational issues negotiation skills to allow for on-the-day negotiations where time constraints play a key factor literacy skills to interpret and develop potentially complex event documentation numeracy skills to address a range of operational and planning issues that may include the need to manage the flow of a large number of people and work quickly and accurately with budget figures and estimates.

The following knowledge must be assessed as part of this unit:

typical systems, procedures and logistics for on-site management, including:

contractor communication mechanisms and protocols, including main liaison person within a venue, hierarchy of control and walkie-talkie options operational control documents, such as running sheets and how they are used techniques for managing stress and time during the operation of an event detailed characteristics of written contractor documentation across a wide range of services, including venue, technical, catering and staging safety and risk issues associated with different types of event, such as movement of numbers of people and security issues in particular situations.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, the range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit	Evidence of the following is essential: ability to manage the on-site operation of an event, including all aspects of preparation, set-up, operation and move-out knowledge of the range of issues and problems that may arise during the conduct of meetings and events

Unit descriptor

This unit deals with the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to develop strategies to manage an event across a number of venues. It focuses only on the additional knowledge and skills required in the context of cross-venue event operations. CULMS012A Plan event touring, is used more to reflect the skills required when the same event is toured to different venues.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit

This unit applies to individuals managing events in any industry context. It is particularly relevant in the cultural, community, hospitality, sporting and tourism sectors.

Planning and management of an event using multiple venues or sites requires application of significant analytical and management skills, combined with a strong understanding of event management operational issues. This role is undertaken by an event manager working autonomously, often in consultation with an event organising committee.

Unit descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to coordinate the development of brochures and other marketing materials. It requires the ability to source information to be included; obtain production quotations; develop or outsource copy; and design, check and approve final content.

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit

This unit describes a complex sales and marketing skill for those working within the service industries and applies to the full range of industry sectors and environments.

Brochures and marketing materials can be devised to promote any product, service or event; a group of products being cooperatively marketed; or even a whole city, region or tourist precinct.

This unit does not include all the skills of a professional graphic designer or copywriter. Rather it reflects the more general skills needed by a large range of service industry personnel involved in sales and marketing activities.

Frontline sales and marketing personnel who operate with some level of autonomy or under limited supervision and guidance from others would be responsible for coordinating the production of brochures and marketing materials. Managers and owner-operators of small businesses would also undertake this activity.

1 Plan the production of brochures and marketing materials.	1.1 Plan for the production of brochures and marketing materials according to organisation objectives, marketing focus and other issues that impact on the production process. 1.2 Consider factors in the planning of brochures. 1.3 Create detailed action plans for the production process, including timelines, responsibilities and budget.
2 Produce information for inclusion.	2.1 Produce or obtain from the appropriate source accurate and complete information for inclusion. 2.2 Present information in a clear and easily understood format. 2.3 Present information in a culturally appropriate way.
3 Obtain quotations for artwork and printing as appropriate.	3.1 Provide accurate and complete specifications to quoting organisations within appropriate timeframe. 3.2 Obtain comprehensive quotations with full details of potential variations to cost and conditions that may apply.
4 Develop final copy for brochures and marketing materials.	4.1 Develop copy using basic creative writing techniques or outsource to sell the products presented. 4.2 Produce copy that provides accurate practical and operational details. 4.3 Present all costs accurately with notes about conditions that may apply. 4.4 Present general conditions clearly and accurately according to organisation policy. 4.5 Check all copy for accuracy prior to submission to internal or external art house or printers.
5 Coordinate the print production of brochures and marketing materials.	5.1 Liaise with production house or responsible staff members in a manner that permits accurate monitoring of production schedule. 5.2 Check and correct all production work as required. 5.3 Re-check and gain approval of appropriate authority only

	5.4 Approve artwork according to organisation guidelines prior to commencement of printing.
	5.5 Obtain and deliver brochures and marketing materials on schedule and establish contingency plans to allow for situations where timelines may be exceeded.

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level, required for this unit.

The following skills must be assessed as part of this unit:

- high-level literacy skills to create copy or check quality of outsourced copy, to interpret quotations and conditions and to proofread all contents of draft materials
- high-level verbal and written communication skills to explain complex requirements and specifications
- high-level numeracy skills to calculate costs and quantities of materials to be produced, sizing of layouts and components, and total size of final materials.

The following knowledge must be assessed as part of this unit:

- in-depth understanding of the objectives of the material and knowledge of the market for which material is required
- general awareness of potential of material for use on websites
- print production processes and terminology, including copy, film, artwork, 2-colour process, 4-colour process, final art, proofreading, bromide, print-ready, PDF file, author's corrections and transparencies
- printing and industry conventions in relation to placement of information, page numbering and copyright information
- quality indicators in brochure production, including readability, photographic quality, effective use of colour and spacing requirements
- current production technology
- creative writing techniques used for the content of brochures and other marketing materials
- procedures and requirements for preparation and proofing of material
- broad understanding of copyright laws and restrictions that apply to the inclusion of certain materials and content within brochures and other marketing materials

- procedures for copyright clearance of restricted materials.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, the range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:

- coordination of all elements of development and production process for brochures and marketing material
- ability to produce materials that meet stated objectives, provide current and accurate information and are free of errors
- knowledge and understanding of current production processes and terminology and copyright restrictions
- production of brochures and marketing materials within typical workplace time constraints that meet determined deadlines.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure:

- that the candidate has accessed a fully equipped office environment using appropriate computers, printers, communication technology, information and software programs to facilitate the processes involved in coordinating the production of brochures and marketing materials
- access to an operation for which brochures and marketing materials would be developed, or access to comprehensive and sufficient information about that operation to allow the candidate to fully coordinate the production of actual brochures and marketing materials to meet a specified market need for a commercially realistic operation
- access to technology and materials for the production

Methods of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess the practical skills and knowledge required to coordinate the production of brochures and marketing materials. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: • evaluation of brochures or other marketing materials produced by the candidate • written and oral questioning or interview to test knowledge of brochure coordination and production processes, copyright laws and clearance procedures • review of portfolios of evidence and third-party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate. Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: • SITXMGT006A Establish and conduct business relationships • SITXMPR004A Coordinate marketing activities.
Assessing employability skills	Employability skills are integral to effective performance in the workplace and are broadly consistent across industry sectors. How these skills are applied varies between occupations and qualifications due to the different work functions and contexts. Employability skills embedded in this unit should be assessed holistically with other relevant units that make up the skill set or qualification and in the context of the job role.

TAAASS401C Plan and organise assessment

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

This unit specifies the competence required to plan and organise the assessment process, including recognition of prior learning (RPL), in a competency-based assessment system.

Application of the Unit

This unit addresses the competence of planning the assessment process and making the organisational arrangements which enable assessment to occur. It includes assessments carried out as part of a Recognition of Prior Learning Process (RPL) or as part of a learning and assessment pathway.

The critical focus of this unit is on developing an assessment plan that will be used to guide assessor/s in conducting competency-based assessments. The unit also covers contextualisation of the assessment benchmarks and assessment tools to address the environment in which assessment will take place and organising the human, material and physical resources needed to conduct the assessment.

This competence applies to planning and organising an assessment process, including RPL which may involve single or multiple candidates being assessed against individual or multiple unit/s of competency.

The planning function in assessment is distinguished as a discrete activity and may be undertaken by the assessor responsible for assessing the candidates reflected in the assessment plan or by another person in the organisation.

This competence is to be applied in the context of an existing assessment strategy which documents the overall framework for assessment at a qualification level. In this context, the assessment plan adds further detail relating to the specific organisational arrangements for assessment/s, including RPL against individual unit/s of competency.

The competence of developing an assessment strategy is separately addressed in two other units of the TAA04 Training and Assessment Training Package: TAADES501B Design and develop learning strategies (in a learning and assessment pathway) and TAAASS501B Lead and co-ordinate assessment systems and services (in an assessment only pathway).

The achievement of this unit includes interpretation of competency standards, (where competency standards are used as the benchmarks for assessment). TAADES401B Use Training Packages to meet client needs addresses this skill in depth.

The competence specified in this unit is typically required by assessors, workplace supervisors with assessment planning responsibilities, trainers or other assessors responsible for planning assessment, including RPL

Range Statement

Purpose/s of assessment may include:	recognising current existing competence of candidate/s determining if competence has been achieved following learning establishing candidate/s progress towards achievement of competence determining language, literacy, numeracy needs of candidates/s certifying competence through a Statement of Attainment establishing progress towards a qualification determining training gaps of candidate/s measuring work performance classifying employees/support career progression meeting organisational requirements for work - operate equipment/develop new skills licensing or regulatory requirements
Context of assessment/ RPL may include:	part of the enrolment process the environment in which the assessment/RPL will be carried out, including real work/simulation opportunities for collecting evidence in a number of situations relationships between competency standards and evidence to support recognition of prior learning who carries out the assessment/RPL relationships between competency standards and work activities in the candidate's workplace relationships between competency standards and learning activities auspicing and partnership arrangements the period of time during which the assessment takes place apportionment of costs/fees, if applicable quality assurance mechanisms

Relevant people must include:	the candidate/s
	the assessor/s responsible for conducting the assessment/RPL, which may be self or other assessors
Relevant people may include:	the client, company or organisation team leaders, managers, supervisors delivery personnel technical/subject experts training and assessment coordinators RPL coordinators industry regulators employee and employer representatives members of professional associations
	Commonwealth department official/Centrelink personnel/caseworker
	Australian Apprenticeship Centre (AAC) personnel
Legal/organisational/ethical requirements may include:	assessment system policies and procedures assessment strategy requirements reporting, recording and retrieval systems for assessment, including RPL quality assurance systems business and performance plans access and equity policies and procedures collaborative/partnership arrangements

	identifying and reporting OHS hazards and concerns to relevant personnel
The assessment strategy is a documented framework to guide and structure assessment arrangements for a vocational education and training qualification. In a learning and assessment pathway it is addressed as part of the learning strategy. In an assessment only pathway it is a separate document. The assessment strategy may encompass:	the identification of the competency standards forming the qualification and interpretation of the packaging rules of the qualification, where part of a Training Package interpretation of the competency standards as the benchmarks for assessment application of Training Package Assessment Guidelines, where part of a Training Package arrangements for RPL, including provision of guidance and assistance to candidates in gathering and evaluating evidence determination of assessment methods for identified competency standards selection of assessment tools for identified competency standards organisational arrangements for assessment, including physical and human resources, roles and responsibilities and partnership arrangements (where relevant) nominated quality assurance mechanisms identified risk management strategies
Benchmark/s for assessment/ RPL refers	the criterion against which the candidate is assessed or prior learning recognised which,

Unit Descriptor

This unit specifies the competence required to assess the competence of a candidate.

Application of the Unit

This unit addresses the competence of conducting competency assessment in accordance with a developed assessment plan. It includes assessment for recognition of prior learning (RPL) or as part of a learning and assessment pathway.

The critical focus of this unit is on interpreting the collected evidence and making a judgement of competence against the specified competency standards by applying the principles of assessment and rules of evidence. This unit also covers demonstration of the professional relationship between assessor and candidate/s and the skills needed to support this relationship.

The achievement of this unit includes interpretation of competency standards, (where competency standards are used as the benchmarks for assessment). TAADES401B Use Training Packages to meet client needs addresses this skill in depth.

This unit does not address the development of an assessment/RPL plan or organisation of required resources for assessment/RPL, which is addressed in TAAASS401C Plan and organise assessment.

The competence specified in this unit is typically required by assessors.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.

Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

Elements and Performance Criteria

Element	Performance Criteria
1 Establish and maintain the assessment environment	1.1 The assessment/ RPL plan is interpreted and assessment system policies and procedures and organisational/ legal/ethical requirements for conducting assessment are confirmed with relevant people
	1.2 The relevant benchmarks for assessment/ RPL and nominated assessment tools are accessed and interpreted to confirm the evidence to be collected and how it is to be collected
	1.3 Details of the assessment/ RPL plan and the assessment process are explained, discussed and clarified with the candidate including opportunities for assessment, reasonable adjustment, re-assessment and appeals
	1.4 Proposed changes to the assessment process are negotiated and agreed with the candidate, where relevant
2 Gather quality evidence	2.1 The assessment/ RPL plan is followed to guide the conduct of assessment and assessment methods and assessment tools are used to gather, organise and document evidence in a format suitable for determining competence
	2.2 The principles of assessment and rules of evidence are applied in gathering quality evidence
	2.3 Opportunities for evidence gathering in work activities/simulated work activities are determined with the candidate and relevant personnel

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

	2.4 Opportunities for integrated assessment activities/ RPL are identified and assessment tools are modified, where required
	2.5 Identified assessment/ RPL system policies and procedures and organisational/legal/ethical and requirements for assessment are addressed
3 Support the candidate	3.1 Candidates are guided in gathering their own evidence to support recognition of prior learning
	3.2 Appropriate communication and interpersonal skills are used to develop a professional relationship with the candidate which reflects sensitivity to individual differences and enables two-way feedback
	3.3 Decisions on reasonable adjustment/s, where applicable, are made with the candidate, based on candidate's needs and characteristics
	3.4 Reasonable adjustments must maintain the integrity of the relevant competency standards and provide balanced application of the principles of assessment and rules of evidence
	3.5 Specialist support is accessed, where required, in accordance with the assessment plan
	3.6 Any occupational health and safety (OHS) risk to person or equipment is addressed immediately
4 Make the assessment decision	4.1 Limitations in obtaining and evaluating quality evidence are identified and assistance is sought, where required, from relevant people
	4.2 Collected evidence is examined and evaluated to ensure that it reflects the evidence required to demonstrate competency and which: encompasses all component parts of the competency standards and the dimensions of competency (where competency standards are the benchmarks for assessment/ RPL) addresses other related documentation complies with the rules of evidence
	4.3 Judgement is used to infer whether competence has been demonstrated, based on the available evidence

		4.4 Relevant assessment, including RPL, system policies and procedures and organisational/ legal/ethical considerations are addressed in making the assessment decision
		4.5 Clear and constructive feedback is provided to the candidate regarding the assessment decision and a follow-up action plan is developed, where required
5	Record and report the assessment decision	5.1 Assessment/ RPL outcomes are recorded promptly and accurately in accordance with assessment/ RPL system policies and procedures and organisational/legal/ethical requirements
		5.2 An assessment report is completed and processed in accordance with assessment system policies and procedures and organisational/legal/ethical requirements
		5.3 Recommendations for follow up action are submitted to relevant people, where required
		5.4 Other relevant parties are informed of the assessment decision where required, and in accordance with confidentiality conventions
6	Review the assessment process	6.1 The assessment/ RPL process is reviewed against criteria in consultation with relevant people to improve and modify future assessment practice
		6.2 The review is documented and recorded in accordance with relevant assessment system policies and procedures and organisational/ legal/ethical requirements
		6.3 Reflection skills are used to review and self-evaluate assessment practice

Required Skills and Knowledge

Evidence Guide

Evidence Guide

Overview of assessment	To demonstrate competence against this unit, candidates must be able to provide evidence that they can assess the competence of another individual through a process of collecting and reviewing evidence and making an informed judgement. The evidence provided must show: how the assessment environment was established and how the candidate's needs were met; how the units of competency were interpreted to determine the evidence requirements; how the assessment plan was followed; how the assessment tools were used in collecting evidence; the basis for the assessment decision using the rules of evidence; communication skills used to guide, support and provide feedback to the candidate during the assessment process; records and reports; and how the assessment process was reviewed.

Products that could be used as evidence include:	completed RPL/assessment tools/templates/checklists documentation of evidence collected and assessment, including RPL decisions feedback from candidate/assessor/supervisor/RPL coordinator feedback to candidate with recommendations for future options completed assessment/RPL records/reports reviews of assessment practices and recommended changes to future practices
Processes could be used as evidence include:	how competency standards and other documents were interpreted how assessment activities, including RPL, were scheduled how the assessment plan was modified to meet candidate needs how evidence was collated and evaluated against the rules of evidence
Resource implications for assessment include:	access to candidates to be assessed access to competency standards access to assessment materials and tools access to suitable assessment venue/equipment workplace documentation access to RPL policies and procedures access to documentation/records of candidate to determine specific requirements cost/time considerations personnel requirements

The collection of quality evidence requires that:	assessment must address the scope of this unit and reflect all components of the unit, i.e. the Elements, Performance Criteria, Range Statement, Evidence Guide, Employability Skills
	a range of appropriate assessment methods/evidence gathering techniques is used to determine competency evidence must be gathered in the workplace wherever possible. Where no workplace is available, a simulated workplace must be provided the evidence collected must relate to a number of performances assessed at different points in time and in a learning and assessment pathway these must be separated by further learning and practice evidence collected must relate to at least one example of a RPL assessment assessment meets the rules of evidence
	a judgement of competence should only be made when the assessor is confident that the required outcomes of the unit have been achieved and that consistent performance has been demonstrated
Specific evidence requirements must include:	carrying out assessment of a number of candidates, assessed against different units of competency or accredited curricula, following the relevant assessment plan at least one candidate must be assessed through an assessment only pathway at least one candidate must be assessed for RPL at least one assessment must include consideration of reasonable adjustment and the reasons for decisions and approach all must show:

Recognition of prior learning is defined as:	an assessment process that assesses an individual's non-formal and informal learning to determine the extent to which that individual has achieved the required learning outcomes, competency outcomes, or standards for entry to and/or partial or total completion of a qualification.
Communication skills may include:	providing constructive and supportive feedback using active listening using appropriate questioning to clarify and confirm instructions for evidence gathering accurately interpreting verbal messages assisting candidates to paraphrase advice/instructions to the assessor making clear and concrete presentations of options/advice
Interpersonal skills may include:	accurately interpreting non-verbal messages

TAADEL401B Plan and organise group-based delivery

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

This unit specifies the competency required to plan and organise training for individuals within a group.

Application of the Unit

This competency involves developing a delivery plan that is used by the trainer/facilitator to guide and manage delivery to a group. It encompasses interpreting the learning environment and delivery requirements for the identified group of learners, developing session plans, and preparing and organising the resources required.

The delivery plan is based on a documented learning program and provides a context specific plan for implementation.

The competency of designing and developing learning programs is separately addressed in TAADES402B Design and develop learning programs.

In some situations the learning program and delivery plan may be developed concurrently while in other circumstances the delivery plan is developed separately. Where the application is concurrent co-learning and/or co-assessment of these two units is recommended.

The planning and organising of group delivery is essential to the effective conduct of group delivery/facilitation which is also addressed as a unit of competency in TAADEL402B Facilitate group-based learning. While these two units are discrete, co-learning and assessment are strongly recommended. Both units are written from the perspective of a face-to-face delivery mode in a learning context such as a training room, classroom, meeting room, community setting or any location a group can access which is safe, relevant and conducive to learning. Other units in the Delivery and Facilitation Field of the TAA04 Training and Assessment Training Package address other modes of delivery and learning contexts.

Throughout this unit the learner refers to the individuals in the group being trained/participating in a learning process; not the candidate undertaking this unit.

The competency specified in this unit is typically required by trainers/facilitators, vocational education and training teachers and training consultants.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.

Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

Element	Performance Criteria
1 Interpret the learning environment and delivery requirements	1.1 The learning context is established and the organisational arrangements for delivery are confirmed
	1.2 The learning program documentation is accessed, read and interpreted to determine delivery requirements
	1.3 Group and individual learning needs and learner characteristics are identified using available information and documentation
	1.4 Processes to identify learner support requirements are undertaken
	1.5 Constraints and risks to delivery are identified and assessed
	1.6 Personal role and responsibilities in the planning, delivery and review of training are confirmed with relevant personnel
2 Prepare session plans	2.1 Specific learning objectives and assessment activities (where required) are refined in accordance with learning program requirements

		2.2 Ideas for managing the delivery are generated using knowledge of learning principles and learning theories and reflect the learning needs and characteristics of the group
		2.3 Existing learning resources, learning materials and documented learning activities identified in the learning program are evaluated and selected for use in the specific delivery context
		2.4 Session plans are developed and documented for each segment of the learning program to be addressed
3	Prepare resources needed for delivery	3.1 Selected existing learning resources, learning materials and learning activities are modified and contextualised for the particular group
		3.2 Additional new, relevant and engaging learning activities and associated learning materials are developed and documented to meet specific session requirements based on the application of learning principles and learner styles of individuals and the group
		3.3 All learning materials required by learners are finalised and organised in time for delivery
		3.4 Specific facility, technology and equipment needs for each session are identified and organised in time for delivery
		3.5 Additional resourcing to meet identified learner support needs is identified and organised, where required, in time for delivery
		3.6 The overall delivery plan is confirmed with relevant personnel

Evidence Guide

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of Assessment

To demonstrate competency against this unit candidates must be able to provide evidence that they have planned and organised training for a group of learners to be trained in a face-to-face learning environment.

Evidence should show that candidates can develop a delivery plan that incorporates: interpreting a specific learning environment; interpreting an existing learning program to develop and document specific training sessions that address a whole or part of a learning program and which reflect the needs and characteristics of a specific learner group; selecting and modifying existing learning resources, learning materials and learning activities and developing new learning materials and learning activities; planning and organising the resources required in delivery.

Evidence Requirements

Required knowledge includes:

a sound knowledge of learning principles, including:

learning needs to be learner-centred

the learning process needs to support increasing learner independence

emphasis is on experimental and participative learning

use of modelling

the learning process needs to reflect individual circumstances and needs

adults have a range of life experience which they can connect to learning

adults have a need to know why they are learning something and its benefits

adults have a need to be self-directing

a sound knowledge of learner styles, for example:

Required skills and attributes include:

planning and organisational skills to:

reflect the group and individual learning needs and learner characteristics within session plans incorporate relevant/modified learning objectives and assessment methods (where required) in session plans determine the structure and time requirements for each session identify specific facility, technology and equipment needs for each session literacy skills to:

document the delivery plan, prepare or customise learning activities prepare or customise learning materials such as handouts and information sheets read and interpret learner information technology skills to:

use computers to produce documents, prepare presentations e.g. PowerPoint and communicate through email and the web time management skills to:

determine time allocations for each part of the session plan determine overall session time determine how many sessions may be required schedule training sessions reflection skills to:

identify areas for improvement

maintain own skill development

Products that could be used as evidence include:	documented delivery plan individual session plans forming part of the delivery plan feedback forms from learners on quality/effectiveness of delivery planning modified/contextualised learning resources and learning materials new learning materials and documented learning activities
Processes that could be used as evidence include:	how the learning program was interpreted how responsibilities were identified and clarified why sessions were planned as documented how ideas for delivery were generated how individual learning needs were managed in the planning and organising process
Resource implications for assessment include:	access to relevant learning programs access to relevant learning resources and learning materials access to real or simulated learning environment that addresses organisational requirements of this unit

	determine competency evidence must be gathered in the workplace whenever possible. Where no workplace is available, a simulated workplace must be provided the evidence collected must relate to a number of performances assessed at different points in time and in a learning and assessment pathway these must be separated by further learning and practice assessment meets the rules of evidence
	a judgement of competency should only be made when the assessor is confident that the required outcomes of the unit have been achieved and that consistent performance has been demonstrated
Specific evidence requirements must include:	the ability to transfer skills to different training environments and learner groups evidence of the preparation of a minimum of two delivery plans:
	one of these delivery plans must address a learning program that is linked to competency standards or an accredited curricula one delivery plan should address the whole or substantial part of a learning program and contain session plans for a series of training sessions assessment must also include evidence of both developing and contextualising learning activities for the delivery plan and of developing new learning materials such as handouts, overheads, etc., and organising the material and physical requirements for delivery
Integrated assessment means that:	this unit can be assessed alone or as part of an integrated assessment activity involving relevant units in the TAA04 Training and Assessment Training Package. Suggested units include but are not limited to:

Range Statement

Learning contextincludes:	where the learning will occur, for example: in the workplace in a simulated work environment in the training room/classroom in specialist environments - e.g. laboratory/ computer room in an external venue in an internal venue in a community setting
Organisational arrangementsmay include:	finalising specific location/s or venue/s for delivery coordinating locations enrolment procedures scheduling requirements size of group special equipment or technology needs providing for specific needs of the learners investigating the learning environment to identify, assess and control occupational health and safety (OHS) risks allowable time for training management expectations

This unit specifies the competency required to facilitate learning by individuals within a group.

Application of the Unit

The competency of delivering training and facilitating learning to a group involves preparing, guiding supporting and managing learners using a range of delivery methods, knowledge, skills and behaviours that enhance learning.

It also includes the skills needed to support and manage interactions with and between individuals in a group. The competency of individual facilitation is addressed by a separate unit of competency - TAADEL403B Facilitate individual learning.

The vocational outcomes and performance requirements of this unit are set in the context that the learning outcomes to be achieved are defined and documented through a learning program (TAADES402B Design and develop learning programs) and the organisational arrangements to support delivery have been previously determined (TAADEL401B Plan and organise group-based delivery). The focus of the group facilitator is on guiding and supporting learners progress towards the learning outcomes/competency to be achieved.

The skill of group facilitation, which is not linked to specified learning outcomes, is also addressed in this Training Package through TAATAS504B Facilitate group processes. The competency defined in that unit focuses on facilitating a group to determine its own outcomes.

Co-learning and assessment with TAADEL401B Plan and organise group-based delivery is strongly recommended where both these competencies are required. Both units are written from the perspective of a face-to-face delivery mode within an off-the-job learning context such as a training room, classroom, meeting room, community setting or any location a group can access which is safe, relevant and conducive to learning.

Throughout this unit the learner refers to the individual participating in the group learning process, not the candidate undertaking this unit.

The competency specified in this unit is typically required by trainers/facilitators, teachers and training consultants.

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of Assessment

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

To demonstrate competency against this unit candidates must be able to provide evidence that they have delivered training and facilitated learning within a group in a face-to-face learning environment, on a number of occasions, that involves a series of training sessions covering a number of learning outcomes. They should also provide evidence of reviewing and evaluating the effectiveness of the delivery plan and their personal performance in training delivery.

Evidence should show that they can provide training using appropriate sequencing and activities to develop the skills and knowledge of learners, as well as enhancing motivation, interest and enthusiasm. Trainers must demonstrate high-level facilitation, observation, communication and interpersonal skills to support and teach each learner effectively.

Evidence Requirements

Required knowledge includes:

a sound knowledge of learning principles, including:

adults have a range of life experience which they can connect to learning

adults have a need to know why they are learning something and its benefits

learning needs to be learner-centred

adults have a need to be self-directing

the learning process needs to support increasing learner independence

emphasis is on experimental and participative learning

use of modelling

the learning process needs to reflect individual circumstances and needs

a sound knowledge of learner styles, for example:

	time to ensure that assessment covers the range of specific evidence requirements
The collection of quality evidence requires that:	assessment must address the scope of this unit and reflect all components of the unit i.e. the Elements, Performance Criteria, Range Statement, Evidence Guide, Employability Skills
	a range of appropriate assessment methods/evidence gathering techniques is used to determine competency evidence must be gathered in the workplace whenever possible. Where no workplace is available, a simulated workplace must be provided the evidence collected must relate to a number of performances assessed at different points in time and in a learning and assessment pathway these must be separated by further learning and practice assessment meets the rules of evidence
	a judgement of competency should only be made when the assessor is confident that the required outcomes of the unit have been achieved and that consistent performance has been demonstrated
Specific evidence requirements must include:	the ability to transfer delivery and facilitation skills to different training environments and learner groups evidence of the delivery, facilitation and review of a series of training sessions including at least two consecutive sessions that follow a learning program design:
	at least one session (minimum) should be based on a learning program that is derived from Training Package competency standards or accredited curricula at least one session must be based on using learning outcomes from another source at least one session must be delivered to a different learner group with evidence of how the characteristics and needs of this group were addressed

Unit Descriptor

This unit specifies the competency required to facilitate individual learning through a one-on-one relationship between a learner and facilitator.

Application of the Unit

Learning facilitation relationships may take a number of forms including structured/semi-structured activities and formal/informal agreements. They may be independent of or part of a broad learning and delivery strategy. Identifying which learners and learning contexts may benefit from individual learning facilitation forms part of this competency.

Establishing an appropriate mutual relationship is critical, and the communication and interpersonal skills of the trainer/facilitator are paramount in creating the necessary preconditions for individual learning facilitation to be effective.

Two major techniques to facilitate individual learning are derived from mentoring and coaching methodologies. Other similar instructional techniques may also be appropriate, such as tutoring. The trainer/facilitator may use these techniques with one learner or with individual learners in a small group context.

Individual learning/facilitation relationships may be used to help an individual or individuals meet personal or job goals, learn new skills/knowledge or develop new learning/work behaviours. The role of the trainer/facilitator using these techniques is to advise, guide, support and respond to the needs of the individual learner.

The delivery mode may be face-to-face, online, via telecommunication or using a combination of media.

The competency specified in this unit is typically required by trainers/facilitators, supervisors, managers, leaders, practitioners, teachers, assessors and consultants.

Employability Skills Information

This unit contains employability skills.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.

Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

Elements and Performance Criteria

Element	Performance Criteria
1 Identify individual learning facilitation requirements	1.1 The need for individual learning/facilitation in the learning area is identified
	1.2 The goals for learning for individual learning/ facilitation are identified and discussed with relevant persons
	1.3 Appropriate individual learning/facilitation techniques and processes are identified and documented to support individual learning needs and goals
	1.4 Evaluation processes are developed and agreed
	1.5 Organisational support for implementation is obtained, where relevant
2 Establish the learning/ facilitation relationship	2.1 The individual's learning style, learner characteristics and the context for learning are identified
	2.2 The appropriate technique/process to facilitate individual learning is selected or organised and the basis of the technique/process is explained and discussed with the individual learner
	2.3 The boundaries and expectations of the learning/ facilitation relationship are clarified and agreed using effective communication and interpersonal skills

		2.4 Any equity or additional support needs are clarified
		2.5 An individualised learning plan is developed, documented and discussed with the learner
3	Maintain and develop the learning/facilitation relationship	3.1 Preparation for each meeting/session is evident
		3.2 Effective communication and interpersonal skills are used to grow the relationship and sustain active participation
		3.3 Structured learning activities are developed to support and reinforce new learning, build on strengths and identify areas for further development
		3.4 Leadership and motivational skills are demonstrated to enable the learner to take responsibility for learning
		3.5 Learner cues are observed and changes in approach are made, where necessary, to maintain momentum
		3.6 Ethical behaviours are practised at all times
		3.7 Regular meetings are agreed to by both parties and scheduled to monitor the effectiveness of the learning/facilitation relationship
		3.8 Appropriate documentation to support the relationship is mutually developed and maintained
4	Close and evaluate the learning/facilitation relationship	4.1 Tools and signals are used to determine readiness for closure of individual learning/facilitation relationship
		4.2 The closure is carried out smoothly using appropriate interpersonal and communication skills
		4.3 Feedback is sought from the learner on the outcomes achieved and the value of the relationship
		4.4 The impact of the learning/facilitation relationship is reviewed using identified evaluation processes

© Commonwealth of Australia, 2025 Service and Creative Skills Australia

4.5 Self-evaluation and reflection on own performance in managing the relationship is carried out and areas for improvement are identified

4.6 The outcomes of the learning/facilitation relationship and evaluation of the process are documented and filed in accordance with legal, organisational and personal requirements

Evidence Guide

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of Assessment

To demonstrate competency against this unit candidates must be able to provide evidence that they can establish and maintain an effective learning/facilitation relationship with an individual learner.

The trainer/facilitator must demonstrate the development of a relationship, in one or more delivery modes which is learner-centred, adaptable to individual needs, and appropriate to the learning area or focus of the relationship. Demonstration of effective techniques, communication, interpersonal skills and problem solving skills are pivotal to demonstrated competency in this unit.

Evidence Requirements

Required knowledge includes:

the effects of verbal and non-verbal communication, for example:

how to interpret behaviours

how to model behaviours and values sound knowledge of different learning styles and how to encourage different learners, for example:

deal appropriately with a range of emotions interpersonal skills to:

set up a comfortable environment

demonstrate awareness of own behaviour

use appropriate humour to lighten atmosphere

keep the sessions learner-centred analysis skills to:

identify suitable learning/facilitation techniques and activities for the individual learner flexibility to:

determine and alter a learning plan negotiate with the learner to ensure facilitation is suitable be patient with individual's learning ability interpret information gathered and adapt own style accordingly

communication skills to:

give positive and negative feedback

demonstrate awareness of own behaviour

negotiate and manage conflict

Unit Descriptor

This unit specifies the competency required to design, develop and evaluate learning strategies.

Application of the Unit

Learning strategies document a framework for the learning requirements and the teaching/delivery and assessment arrangements of a vocational education and training qualification. The learning strategy is the umbrella document that outlines the requirements for designing the learning and assessment process at the qualification level.

These requirements include: determining the specific criteria or learning outcomes to be achieved; any recognition and entry requirements (if appropriate); an outline of the areas of learning/content to be addressed; the assessment requirements, the broad sequence of learning, the delivery and assessment methods to be used, the resources required and any other additional information to support a learning and assessment pathway to a qualification.

The criteria may already exist if the qualification is part of a Training Package. In this instance the endorsed competency standards packaged within the Training Package qualification constitute the relevant criteria. Alternatively, if the learning strategy takes the form of a course for accreditation, the learning outcomes may need to be developed to reflect an identified industry, enterprise or community need.

This unit addresses the competency requirements for developing a learning strategy relevant to both Training Package qualifications and course-based qualifications.

The learning strategy provides an overview or outline only. Detailed guidance is fleshed out through the content of specific learning programs. Each learning strategy would require development of a number of learning programs, depending on the design approach of the learning strategy.

The competency of developing learning programs is addressed separately in TAADES402B Design and develop learning programs.

In a traineeship or apprenticeship context, this unit should be linked directly to TAACMQ502B Coordinate training and/or assessment arrangements for apprenticeships/ traineeships, which more closely establishes the learning strategy requirements for that model of training delivery.

The competency specified in this unit is typically required by instructional designers, trainers/facilitators, training consultants and training coordinators/managers.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency.

Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Evidence Guide

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of Assessment

To demonstrate competency against this unit candidates must be able to provide evidence that they have designed at least two learning strategies.

The learning strategies provided as evidence must: establish the learning context; identify learner and client needs; identify the units or other criteria which best reflect these needs; outline the learning framework which has been designed and sequenced to maximise learning; be logical, innovative and engaging to the learner group; identify the delivery and assessment arrangements; indicate pathways to, from and within the qualification; identify the operational resources needed to deliver the strategy; and provide a review process both before and after implementation.

Evidence Requirements

Required knowledge includes:	Training Packages, including:

Unit Descriptor

This unit specifies the competency required to design and develop resources to support learning.

Application of the Unit

Learning resources are designed to enhance and support the effectiveness of the learning process. They provide guidance, materials, learning and assessment activities, and relevant information that address the competencies/learning outcomes to be achieved by the learner.

In the TAA04 Training and Assessment Training Package, learning resources are defined as learning materials that have been specifically developed to address a substantive area of teaching/learning and/or assessment guidance and support.

Learning resources may address a whole Training Package, a Training Package or course qualification or a learning program. Learning resources may also take the form of existing equipment, physical materials and physical resources within the learning environment.

Learning resources can take a variety of forms such as facilitation guides, learning guides/participant resources, assessment materials, workplace resources and text books, and may be self-paced or instructor-led. While primarily text and print-based, other mediums such as audio or video learning resources could be developed using this unit. The complexity of the resource will vary depending on its focus, type, audience and technological medium.

Although the range of learning resources may vary, the skills and knowledge required to design and develop them is the same, with instructional design being a critical aspect.

Where a learning resource product is built around an electronic medium, other critical skills, knowledge and outcomes are required. These are addressed through separate units of competency, TAADES503B Research and design e-learning resources and TAADES504B Develop and evaluate e-learning resources. Co-learning and co-assessment is suggested where competency across all media is required.

Design and development are combined in this unit. In some circumstances the design phase and content development are separated, especially in a large project. However, it is important that competency reflects the whole process.

Depending on the complexity of the resource, extensive consultation and working with others may be required.

This unit can provide a specific application for undertaking the generic unit TAATAS503B Manage contracted work.

Evidence Guide

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of Assessment

To demonstrate competency against this unit candidates must be able to provide evidence that they have designed and developed learning resources.

The learning resources provided as evidence must: clearly identify the target audience; be appropriate to the target group; and be well structured, clear, interesting, appropriate, easy to use, and accessible.

Competency also requires demonstrated ability to research learning resource requirements and content, seek and accept feedback, work effectively with a project team or other experts as required, and critically evaluate own work.
